

[vessels of] sanctified things), וְעַל הַמְדֻמָּע (and for the [vessels of] mixed things), וְעַל הַקֵּנָקַן (and for the cylindrical vessel), but not עַל הַתְרוּמָה (for the [vessels of] priestly share); and at the time of (wine) pressing and (olive) crushing they are trustworthy also עַל הַתְרוּמָה (for the [vessels of] priestly share; t. Hag. 3:30).⁵⁹

There are similarities between these citations and כְּלֵי דָמַע, as was pointed out by Lehmann,⁶⁰ Gevaryahu,⁶¹ and Lurie.⁶² מְדֻמָּע - מְדֻמָּע (masc. sg.) and מְדֻמָּעוֹת (fem. pl.) may refer either to a mixture of non-sacred produce and terumah which became like terumah, or a produce from which no terumah and ma'aser were removed yet (i.e., טֶבֶל, tevel; see #4, 1:12.).⁶³ The Mishnah and Tosephta refer to vessels that eventually will contain מְדֻמָּע, rather than to “dedicated vessels.”

While כְּלֵי דָמַע is unknown term, a similar term, בֵּית הַדָּמַע, does appear once in the Tosephta:

A priest who receives תְּרוּמָה (priestly share) and finds in it other things, these are forbidden שֶׁהֵבֵל מִשְׁלִיכִין לְבֵית הַדָּמַע (because one throws everything into the house of dema'; t. Ter. 10:16).⁶⁴

This indicates that: (a) בֵּית הַדָּמַע was a storage area where, beside terumah, various Temple donation were collected and kept, such as הַקֶּדֶשׁ, “sanctified objects.” And (b) some priests received their share from the בֵּית הַדָּמַע.⁶⁵

For the following reasons one may associate כְּלֵי דָמַע, “dema' vessels” of the Scroll with בֵּית הַדָּמַע, “house of the dema'” of the Tosephta:

59 The words in brackets, “vessels of,” were added, since this section of the Tosephta deals with the purity of vessels used for various sanctified produces. Also see S. Lieberman, Tosefta 2, 392 and nn. 61, 65; Tosefta ki-Fsuṭah 5, 1331-32 and nn. 57-61 (mentioned by Greenfield, 139a).

63 Cf. Rashi, Rabbeinu Hananel, Steinsaltz (b. Hag. 25a-25b); also Maimonides, Bertinoro, Tif'eret Israel, and Kehati on the Mishnah. The Pu'al passive participle forms are: מְדֻמָּע (masc. sg.), מְדֻמָּעַת (fem. sg.), מְדֻמָּעִים (masc. pl.; cf. ESh^{dic} 3, 1238a). מְדֻמָּעוֹת (fem. pl.). These are used as adjectives or nouns. מְדֻמָּעוֹת must refer to the plural construct כְּפִי, “pitchers of.” כֵּד (pl. כְּפִידִים) is a double gender noun (in the Scroll it is used with feminine numbers; see #38, 9:3). יַיִן, “wine” and שֶׁמֶן, “oil” are masculine nouns (the latter is feminine in Songs 1:3; see Ibn-Ezra).

64 See Maimonides, Mišneh Torah, Zera'im, Hilkhot Terumah, 17:16.

65 Some scholars refer to this Tosephta. בֵּית הַדָּמַע is explained as: “a place where terumah grain is mixed with other things” (AC 3, 90b); “place in the barn designated for terumah” (Jastrow, 314b; so is Allegro, 137 n. 19); “a large vessel in which other things were collected” (Lurie, 63 n. 2; Lurie refers to Gevaryahu's lecture, yet in the published summary [Gevaryahu, 94-95], only the Tosephta quotation can be found); “store places for terumah” (Greenfield, 139; referring to S. Lieberman, Tosefta 1, 163-64; see also Tosefta ki-Fsuṭah 1, 478 n. 54).

- (1) Objects deposited as a donation in בֵּית הַדְּמַע might have been called כְּלֵי דְּמַע.
- (2) Objects purchased from בֵּית הַדְּמַע funds might have been called כְּלֵי דְּמַע.
- (3) כְּלֵי דְּמַע might have been objects kept in בֵּית הַדְּמַע.
- (4) כְּלֵי דְּמַע may be a contracted form of בֵּית כְּלֵי דְּמַע, "house of the dema^c vessels" (see #50, 11:1); cf. כְּלֵי-י < בֵּית הַכּוֹף־הַכּוֹף, "vesse < ls > of the house of the burial niche" (see #59, 12:8).

דְּמַע VERSUS טַמַּע

The root דְּמַע is related to or a variant of the root טַמַּע (TH, JA), "to mix, absorb, sink, be covered," a dalet-tet interchange.⁶⁶ E.g.,

Rabbi Judah said (that) Samuel said, "There were four hundred slaves — others say four thousand slaves — of Pashhur the son of Immer (the priest), וְכֻלָּם נִטְמָעוּ בְּכֹהֲנֵי (and all of them were mixed [i.e., intermarried] into the priesthood)" (b. Qid. 70b).

Rashi points out that this happened at the time of Jeremiah (cf. Jer. 20:1), and that נִטְמָעוּ means נִדְמָעוּ, "they were mixed."⁶⁷ נִטְמָעוּ and נִדְמָעוּ are Nif'al forms (past masc. pl. third pers.).

The Targum renders וְכֻלָּם נִטְמָעוּ בְּכֹהֲנֵי as וְכֻלָּם נִדְמָעוּ בְּכֹהֲנֵי, "Her (i.e., Jerusalem's or the Temple's) gates sunk into the ground" (Lam. 2:9). Thus, the two roots טַמַּע and דְּמַע may well be related.⁶⁸

Perhaps דְּמַע, vocalized as דְּמַע = טַבַּע (Qal past masc. sg. third pers.), or דְּמַע = טַבַּע (Pu'al past masc. sg. third pers.), could mean "he/it sunk"; cf. וּמִכְּהָרָם שָׁלְשִׁי טָבַעוּ בַּיָּם (Exod. 15:4), "and his (i.e., Pharaoh's) chosen captains sunk in the Reed Sea" (Exod. 15:4). Yet to use this word with the noun כְּלֵי, it must be in a form that can be used as a noun or adjective, such as Pa'ul, i.e., דְּמוּעַ, "hidden, sealed" (an unattested word). Accordingly, כְּלֵי דְּמַע could mean "(a) hidden/sealed vessel(s)"; cf. וְכָל כְּלֵי פֶתוּחִים (Num. 19:15), where פֶּתוּחִים, "open" (Qal pass. part. sg. masc.), is from the root פָּתַח, "to open."

כְּלֵי דְּמַע IN ITEM 4

Item 4 (1:9) contains the phrase כְּלֵי דְּמַע בְּלָגִין וְאַפּוּרִין, "(there are an undisclosed number of) dedicated vessels consisting of flasks and jars with handles."

This phrase has been analyzed as follows. ALLEGRO^{pr}: "vessels of dema^c

66 Cf. the root family בָּטַל - בָּטַל - בָּטַל, "to separate" (see SB, 129b, 158a).

67 Rashi adds that the former slaves of the priest married daughters of the priests, since they considered having priestly status, because they used to consume terumah while being slaves. See also HakKetav wehaqQabbalah on Exod. 22:28; AC 3, 89b-90a; 4, 44a.

oil in a lugin bed and pressed earth.” ALLEGRO: כלי דמע בלגין ואפורין, “tithe vessels, consisting of log vessels and amphorae.” בלגין is a bet essentiae plus לוגין, the plural of לוג, a liquid measure having a volume of six eggs; or לגין (sg., “flagon”). אפורין for אמפורין, amphora, a “two handled vase,” etc. ALLEGRO^{rev}: “tithe vessels, consisting of log measures and amphorae.”⁶⁹ MILIK: כלי דמע בלגין ואפורת, “vase(s) of aromatic spices, sandalwood, and sacred vestments.” בלגין, “sandalwood”; cf. Syriac אבלוג, Biblical Hebrew אלגמים or אלגמים, Ugaritic lmg, Sanskrit valgu, etc. אפורת (= אפורות) plural of אפור - אפורה (BH, MH), “sacred vestment.”⁷⁰ LURIE: כלי דמע בלגין ואפורין, “vessels used for terumah or qodeš: in lagenae and in amphorae.” ואפורין, like the Aramaic לגינא - לגינתא, is from the Greek λάγνησος (lagenos). אפורין is the same as אמפורים, the plural of אמפורה, “a jar having two handles.” Although, לגין once in the Talmud means “toga, vestment,” and this is how Milik interprets it, Allegro’s interpretation is better.⁷¹ LEHMANN: כלי דמע בלגין ואפורת, “heave-offering vessels, consisting of lagena-vessels and redemption.” לגין is the Latin lagona and Greek λάγνησος; cf. מאה לוגין של תרומה, “100 lagenae of the heave-offering” (m. Ter. 9:5).⁷² Alternatively בלגין may be a variant of פלגין, “halves,” a bet-pe interchange. Thus, כלי דמע בלגין = כלי דמע פלגין may mean “terumah vessels of half-size.” The term אפורת is “the key to the riddle of the Copper Scroll.” אפורת (with a prosthetic alef) is from פדה, “to redeem,” and related to the Biblical פדות and Talmudic פדיון, “redemption.” Since אפורת occurs at the beginning of the Scroll, it may refer to all items listed in the inventory. The Scroll reflects an era when various sacred items were redeemed and gathered to be transported to Jerusalem or to the Temple, but for political or Halakhic reasons could this not be done, and they had to be “committed to Genizah according to legal requirements.” This era was between the First and Second Revolt against the Romans, and this inventory was compiled when the fortune of the war had turned against the Jews.⁷³ PIXNER: כלי דמע בלגין ואפור,

70 Milik, 284-85, 251 C-127, 252 C-132; Milik^E, 139.

71 Lurie, 62-64, and nn. 2-4 (twice אפורם must be typographical errors for אפורין). Regarding לגין as “vestment,” Pixner (343 n. 8) remarks, “I was unable to confirm this.” Lurie is right; חֲזֹר וּלְבוֹשׁ לְגִין דִּידֶךָ, “turn back and put on your toga” (y. San. 2:6 [10a]; see also He’Arukh, 304b; AC 5, 15b).

72 This is the version of He’Arukh (304a; AC 4, 15); cf. t. Ter. 8:4. The printed editions of the Mishnah have מֵאָה לְגִינָה שֶׁל תְּרוּמָה (m. Ter. 9:5). לְגִינָה is explained as “garden bed,” or as a variant of לוגין, “logs” (pl. of לוג, a measure equal to the space occupied by six eggs). Thus, “One hundred garden beds (planted with) terumah (seeds),” or “One hundred logs of terumah (seeds planted in a field).” See Maimonides, Bertinoro, Tif’eret Israel, Mele’khet Šelomoh, Hilkhetā’ Gevritā’, Rišon leŠion, Kehati; also, Jastrow, 692b, 694.

73 “Identification,” 97-105. Both פְּרִיִּים (masc., Num. 3:49) and פְּרִיִּין (masc., Exod. 21:30; Ps. 49:9) occur in the Masoretic Text.

"tithe vessels at (the place) of the Logion (= breast plate) and the ephods." The Greek Logion, used by Josephus for the breast plate of the high priest, which was fastened to the Ephod. The Ephod was blue, and it may have something to do with the toponym בַּחֲלֵת.⁷⁴ WILMOT: כְּלֵי דְּמַעַ, "votive vessels"; אֶפְדֹּד, "priestly garment," a "votive object."⁷⁵ WOLTERS: כְּלֵי דְּמַעַ בְּעֵל גִּין וְאֶפְדֹּד, "vessels of tribute of the master of nations, and ephods," i.e., vessels contributed by the Romans, and ephods of the high-priest. בְּעֵל גִּין is like דְּמַעַ and מְעַרְב, where the ayins are absent, while גִּין is a defective spelling for גִּוִּין (= גוֹיִם, "nations"). בְּעֵל גִּוִּים may be an allusion to בְּעֵלֵי גִוִּים, "lords of nations" (Isa. 16:8). The sectarians of Qumran to whom probably the Scroll belonged, "commonly interpret persons and nations mentioned in the Bible to refer to persons and nations of their own time." "Master of nation" refers to Rome. "Vessels of the tribute of masters of nations" denotes vessels containing money or valuables contributed unwillingly by the Romans that may be taxes and expensive items "diverted or embezzled from Roman possession."⁷⁶ GARCIA MARTINEZ: "tithe vessels of the lord of the peoples and sacred vestments."⁷⁷ BEYER: כְּלֵי דְּמַעַ בְּלָגִין וְאֶפְדֹּד, "vessels with priestly shares, and namely (half liter) flasks and (25 liter) amphoras."⁷⁸ McCARTER: כְּלֵי דְּמַעַ בְּלָגִין וְאַפְרִין, "vessels of dema^c polished and wrapped." אַפְרִין is related to the Biblical אָפֶר, "covering, bandage" (1 Kgs 28:38,41); cf. Akkadian apāru, "provide with a headdress" and "be covered." It is parallel to כְּלֵי דְּמַעַ לְבוּשִׁין], "swaddled vessels of dema^c."⁷⁹ VERMES: "containers, sandalwood and ephods (priestly garments)."⁸⁰ WISE: "votive vessels—all of them flasks—and high-priestly garmenture."⁸¹

The word after כְּלֵי דְּמַעַ is בְּלָגִין and כְּלָגִין. The Mishnaic usages of לָגִין - לָגִין (masc., from Latin-Greek), "flask(s)," are: לָגִין שֶׁהוּא מְלֵא מִשְׁקֵין טְהוֹרִין, "a flask (masc.) which is full with clean liquid" (m. Oho. 5:4); cf. שֶׁמֶשׁ שְׁנֵי דֹדִין לְגִינִין גְּדוֹלִים, "there are two pots full of silver" (see #17, 4:8); מְלֵאִין כֶּסֶף שְׁנַטְל פִּיהֶן, "large flasks (masc. pl.) whose openings are removed" (m. Kel. 30:4); וְהֵנִיחַ לְגִינָה עַל הַשּׁוּלְחָן, "and he left a flask (fem., sg.) on the table"

74 Pixner, 343 and n. 8 (וְאֶפְדֹּד is a typographical error, since Pixner says that it is not clear whether it is a letter, or "just an accidental scratch"; likewise, בְּלָגִין in the notes is a typographical error for בְּלָגִין; cf. Greek Logion).

(m. 'A.Z. 5:5). Other Talmudic - Midrashic forms are: לִגְיִן, לִיג, (sg.); לִיגְיָן, לִיגְיָנִי, לִיגְיָנִים, לִיגְיָנִים, לִיגְיָנִים (pl.).⁸² In the Scroll לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן can be singular or plural. If it is plural, then the singular is לִיגְיָן. The following suggestions are offered for the word in question.

בִּית הָעֵצִימֹת, “consisting of (a) flask(s)”; with a bet essentiae (בִּית הָעֵצִימֹת); cf. Allegro).⁸³

עִם לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן = עִם לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן, “with a flask(s)”; cf. בְּמִקְלִי (= עִם מִקְלִי), “with my staff” (Gen. 32:11). Also, “they surrounded him (i.e., Rabbi Yose) בְּלִיגִי וּבְלִיגִי (with flasks and dishes).” Rashi explains these two Aramaic words as, לִיגְיָנִי שֶׁל דְּבִשׁ וּמִתִּיקָה וְקַעְרוֹת שֶׁל תְּבַשְׂלִין, “flasks of honey and sweet things, and dishes of cooked food” (b. Yoma 83b).

בֵּין הָלִיגְיָן־הָלִיגְיָן = בֵּין הָלִיגְיָן־הָלִיגְיָן, “among the flasks” — Often the preposition bet (usually vocalized with a pataḥ, and the next letter has a dageš forte) when prefixed to a singular collective or to a plural noun means “between, among.” Cf. הַיְפָה בֵּין הַנָּשִׁים (= הַיְפָה בֵּין הַנָּשִׁים), “the (most) beautiful among the women” (Songs 1:8; cf. Mešudat David); בֵּין (= בֵּין) בְּפָרְקִים ... אֵלֶּי הֵן בֵּין הַפָּרְקִים ... “Between the chapters ... These (places) are between the chapters” (m. Ber. 2:1-2; see Tif'eret Israel, also Rashi in b. Ber. 13a). Likewise, בֵּין צְרִיחֵי הַחֹרוֹן could mean בֵּין צְרִיחֵי הַחֹרוֹן, “among the catacombs/towers of (the) Horon” (see #40, 9:7; also #7, 2:3).

בִּית לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן or בִּית לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן = בִּית לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן, “holder of flask(s)”; cf. בִּית הָלִיגְיָן־הָלִיגְיָן, “holder of the flasks, and holder of the cups” (m. Kel. 16:2).⁸⁴ The prefix בֵּית־ is common in the Talmud; e.g., וְדָבָרִי, “and the words of the School of Rabbi (Judah the Prince) are Torah words” (b. Hul. 137a); אֶסְמְכִיהָ בְּרִבְיָבְרָבִי, “he was ordained by the School of Rabbi (Judah the Prince)” (TA; b. B.M. 45a). Also cf. בֵּית עֶשְׁתֵּרָה, Beeshterah (Josh. 21:27), i.e., בֵּית עֶשְׁתֵּרָה, Beth-Eshterah, is a variant of עֶשְׁתֵּרֹת, Ashtaroth (1 Chron. 6:56);⁸⁵ and in Palmyrene, = בְּנִפְשָׁא, “The tomb of Thuma (daughter of) Amase.”⁸⁶

בֵּן לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן = בֵּן לִיגְיָן־לִיגְיָן, literally “son of a flask,” i.e., “small flask”; cf. בֵּן רִבְדֹרְבִיד, “small pavement (terrace)” (see #2, 1:5, alt.). Bet for בֵּן occurs in several Biblical names; e.g., בֶּדָן, Bedan, is the same as בֵּן דָּן, “son of Dan,” referring to Samson from the Tribe Dan (1 Sam. 12:11).⁸⁷

82 According to Jastrow (694), the Hebrew forms are: לִיג, לִיג (sg.), לִיגְיָן (pl.); and the Aramaic forms are: לִיגָא, לִיגָא, לִיגָא (sg.), לִיגָא, לִיגָא (pl.). Brand lists the following Hebrew forms: לִיגְיָן, לִיגְיָנִי, לִיגְיָנִים (sg.), לִיגְיָנִים, לִיגְיָנִים (pl.); and Aramaic forms: לִיג, לִיגְיָן, לִיגְיָנִים, לִיגְיָנִים (sg.), לִיגְיָן (pl.; CTL, 251 and nn. 1-16). Brand devotes an entire chapter to the term luggin (CTL, 251-58).

83 This bet is similar to the explanatory waw (וְ).⁸³

84 See Bertinoro, Tif'eret Israel; also, t. Kel. B.B. 4:11.

87 See t. R. Hash. 2(3):3, Targum, Rashi, Radak, Ralbag, Mešudat Zion; also SB, 87a,

בִּלְגִּין וּבִלְגִּין = בִּלְגִּין וּבִלְגִּין, “and (a) flask(s).” Frequently bet interchanges with waw,⁸⁸ including connective waw. E.g., (= וְכָל) וְעַל כָּל עוֹף הַשָּׁמַיִם בְּכָל (= וְכָל), אֲשֶׁר תִּרְמַשׁ הָאָרֶץ, and on every bird of the sky, and everything that creeps on the ground” (Gen. 9:2);⁸⁹ בְּשָׁאַר שְׁנֵי שָׁבוּעַ (pr. ed.) vs. וּשְׁאָר שְׁנֵי שָׁבוּעַ (MS), “and other years of (the) week-year” (m. Shevi. 4:8-9).⁹⁰

בִּלְגִּין וּבִלְגִּין (with a kaf), “such as a flask” or “such as flasks,” with a kaf substantive; e.g., אֶפְרַיִם וּמְנַשֶּׁה כְּרֹאבוֹן וְשִׁמְעוֹן יִהְיוּ לִי, “Ephraim and Menasheh like Reuben and Simeon shall be mine” (Gen. 48:5). Cf. the possible readings of בְּכָלִי וּבְכָלִי דָמַע, “in (a) dedicated vessel(s),” or דָּמַע, “such as (a) dedicated vessel(s)” (see #50, 11:1; also #16, 4:3; #24, 5:3). The possible readings of בִּלְגִּין וּבִלְגִּין and בִּלְגִּין וּבִלְגִּין, as well as בְּכָלִי וּבְכָלִי and בְּכָלִי וּבְכָלִי, practically mean the same, respectively.

בִּלְגִּין, בִּלְגִּין, or בִּלְגִּין, Bilgaiites, may be a plural gentile form of the name בִּלְגַּי, Bilgai; e.g., בִּלְגַּי, Bilgai, the priest (Neh. 10:9); or the name בִּלְגָה, Bilgah; cf. the family בִּלְגָה, Bilgah, was the fifteenth Priestly Watch (1 Chron. 24:14; m. Sukk. 5:8).

The next word in the drawings differ. BAKER^{dr} and MILIK^{dr}: waw/yod, ’alef, pe, waw/yod, dalet/reš, he/het/taw; i.e., ואפודה, ואפודה, ואפודה, ואפודה, etc. ALLEGRO^{dr}: waw/yod, ’alef, pe, a ligature of waw/yod plus dalet/reš, and a ligature of waw/yod plus final nun; i.e., ואפודין, ואפודין, ואפודין, ואפודין, etc.⁹¹ Nine of these possibilities can be explained: (1) ואפודה; (2) ואפודה; (3) ואפודין; (4) ואפודה; (5) ואפודה; (6) ואפודין; (7) ואפודה; (8) ואפודת; and (9) ואפודין. The he endings (options 1, 4, 7) and taw endings (options 2, 5, 8) follow the drawings of Baker and Milik, while the nun endings (options 3, 6, 9) that of Allegro.

אֶפְדָּה - אֶפְדָּה - אֶפְדָּה — The noun אֶפְדָּה (masc.), “ephod,” is a (priestly) service garment (e.g., Exod. 28:15), and a “vessel” used in idol worship (e.g., Judg. 17:5). Likewise, אֶפְדָּה - אֶפְדָּה (fem.) means “ephod” (Exod. 28:8, 39:5), and “cover” of an idol (Isa. 30:22). אֶפְדָּה and אֶפְדָּה may be unattested plural forms for אֶפְדָּה and אֶפְדָּה, respectively.⁹²

91b; BDB 122a.

88 E.g., שֶׁבֶל vs. שוֹלִים, “bottom” (see #38, 9:1-2); שֶׁבֶט vs. שוֹט, “stick, rod”; e.g., שוֹט לְגַדְּכֶם, “A rod for the horse ... and a stick for the back of fools” (Prov. 26:3); פְּרוֹרִים (pl. of פְּרוֹר) vs. פְּרָבֶר, “enclosure,” by the Temple (2 Kgs 32:11 and 1 Chron. 16:18, respectively). However, it is more common in Mishnah manuscripts; e.g., עֲנָה (printed version) vs. עֲנָה (many MSS), “crop” (m. Pe’ah 1:2, 6:7). See MNM 2, 1223-26.

89 Cf. Sa’adiah, Ibn-Ezra, Ma’amar Yom-Tov, HakKetav wehaQabbalah.

90 See the comments of Maimonides, Tosephot Yom-Tov, Mele’khet Šelomoh, Hilufei Girsat’ot, Kehati; also MNM 2, 1225-26.

91 The nouns בִּלְגִּין (if it is plural) and אֶפְדָּה are formed with the plural suffix יָם- (usually masculine), while אֶפְדָּה with יָת (usually feminine).

92 Regarding אֶפְדָּה, cf. Milik, Pixner, etc. The plural אֶפְדָּה, “ephods,” and אֶפְדָּה, “zodiacs,” are known from Middle Age Hebrew (cf. BY 1, 341b-42a).

וְאִפְרָה - וְאִפְרָת - וְאִפְרִין — Perhaps אִפְרָה is a Hebraized form of אֲנִפְרָה, amphora, “jar with handles,” while אִפְרָת = אֲנִפְרָת and אִפְרִין = אֲנִפְרִיסוֹן may be plural forms (cf. Allegro).⁹³ The Midrash says, “(Joab) made two אֲנִפְרָאוֹת, a large and a small” (Pesiqta’ deRav Kahana’, Parašat Šeqalim, 71).⁹⁴ Brand considers אֲנִפְרָאוֹת (fem.) as the plural of amphora (i.e., the mem interchanged with nun).⁹⁵ According to the above suggestions, the mem or nun assimilated into the next pe and is vocalized with a dageš forte.

אִפְרִין could be a Hebraized form of אֲנִפְרִיָּא, where the nun assimilated into the next pe, while the יָא- ending is considered as it were the emphasized masculine Aramaic form of אֲנִפְרִין (abs.). כְּלֵי אֲנִפְרִיָּא, “peddler’s implements” (m. B.M. 2:1), are identified as “poles, pins, hooks, axes strung together” (t. B.M. 2:1).⁹⁶ אֲנִפְרִיָּא is from the Greek ἐμπορία, “trade, merchandise,” or ἀναφορεύς, “a thing on which one can hang something.”⁹⁷

Regarding the assimilation of mem/nun into the next letter, one can compare the unassimilated סוּמְפְנִיָּה (Dan. 3:5), סוּמְפֹנִיָּה (Dan. 3:15), סִמְפֹּנִיָּה (m. Kel. 11:6), סִמְפֹּנִיָּא (t. Kel. B.M. 1:7), סִמְפֹּנִיָּא (m. Kel. 16:8), with the assimilated סִפְנִיָּה (ketiv) and סוּפְנִיָּה (qeri, fem., Dan. 3:10). These words are from the Greek συμφωνία, Latin symphonia, “bagpipe.”⁹⁸

וְאִפְרָה - וְאִפְרִין - וְאִפְרָת — The term אִפְרָה = אִפְרָה may be a feminine form of אִפֵּר (masc.), “ash,” אִפְרָת = אִפְרָת its plural form, while אִפְרִין = אִפְרִיסוֹן could be the plural of אִפֵּר.

וְאִפְרָה - וְאִפְרִין - וְאִפְרָת — The word אִפְרָה = אִפְרָה may be a feminine form of אִפֵּר (masc.), “covering, garment” (1 Kgs 21:38, 41), while אִפְרִין = אִפְרִיסוֹן (masc.) and אִפְרָת = אִפְרָת (fem.) could be plural forms.⁹⁹

אִפְרִין is a variant spelling for אִפְרִיָּוֶן - אִפְרִיָּוֶן (prob. masc., BH), “carrying chair, sedan, palanquin” (Songs 3:9; m. Soṭ. 9:14; t. Soṭ. 15:9). It is related to פִּוּרִיָּא, “bed” (Songs Rabbah on 4:11; b. B.B. 9c, TA).¹⁰⁰

אִפְרִין or אִפְרִין = אִפְרִים, Ephraim, the waw/yod may indicate a Tiberian šewa, cf. שְׁיִבְצָפוֹן, “in/at/by (the) north of” (see #43, 9:14), and in שְׁיִבִּית, Bayer, “Music,” EJ 12, 565. In סוּפְנִיָּה the dageš forte in the pe compensates for the assimilated mem.

99 The plural אִפְרִים occurs in Middle Age Hebrew (cf. BY 1, 360a).

100 Cf. BDB, 68a; Jastrow, 108b, 1146b-47a; Ben-Yehuda (1, 361 and n. 1) suggests that אִפְרִין may originate from Greek.

"which is (in/at/by the) house of" (see #46, 10:5); plus final mem-nun interchange. Cf. Ephraim, son of Joseph, and father of the Tribe Ephraim (e.g., Num. 1:32), who dwelt in the Land of Ephraim (Num. 34:2; Judg. 12:15), and in it were located the city of Ephraim (2 Sam. 13:23), and Mount Ephraim (e.g., Judg. 7:24). The Forest of Ephraim (2 Sam. 18:6) was in Transjordan (2 Sam 18:6). Ephraim was a nickname for the Kingdom of Israel versus the kingdom of Judah (e.g., Isa. 7:5).

אֶפְרַיִם = אֹפִירִים or אֶפְרַיִן = אֶפְרִירִים, Ophirites, a plural gentilic form of אֶפֶר, אֹפִיר, Ophir — cf. Ophir son of Joktan (Gen. 10:29; 1 Chron. 1:23), and the Land of Ophir that was famous for its gold (e.g., 1 Chron. 29:4).

אֶפְרוֹת, אֶפְרָת, אֶפְרוֹת, Ephroth or Ephrath, a variant spelling of אֶפְרָת or אֶפְרָתָה, Ephrath; the first waw/yod may indicate a Tiberian *šewa*², and the second waw a Tiberian long qamaṣ, cf. הַבָּאוֹת = הַבָּאוֹת, "that are coming" (see #1, 1:2). Cf. אֶפְרָתָה and אֶפְרָת, Ephrath, nickname of the Land of Ephraim (Ps. 132:6); name of the second wife of Kaleb (1 Chron. 2:19,50, 4:4); nickname of Bethlehem (e.g., Gen. 35:19, 48:7).

Based on the above discussion, the following readings, vocalizations, and interpretations can be offered for the phrase in question.

כְּלֵי דָמַע בְּלָגִין וּבִלְגִין וְאֶפְרוֹת וְאֶפְרָתִין, "dedicated vessels consisting of (a) flask(s) and (a) service garment(s)/cover(s)"; or "(a) dedicated vessel(s) and (a) flask(s) and (a) service garment(s)/cover(s)." These vessels might have been used to store ashes of the red heifer. Cf. "and shall collect a clean man אֶת אֶפֶר הַפָּרָה (the ash of the [red] heifer)," and Pseudo-Jonathan's rendering, "and shall collect a clean priest יֵת קִטְמָא דְּפִחָר (the ash of the [red] heifer in an earthen qalal vessel)" (Num. 19:9). Some of these suggestions can be compared with, וְכֵלִין כּוֹפְרִין וְכִפְרִין, “and ten/twenty sprinkling vessels”; וְכֵלִין כִּפְרִין (= כְּפֻרִים), “and ten/twenty vessels for redemption,” or “and ten/twenty vessels for the Day of Atonement”; וְכֵלִין כִּפְרִין (= כְּפֻרִים), “and ten/twenty young lion vessels,” perhaps vessels shaped like or having designs of lions, or “and ten/twenty vessels of Kephirim,” i.e., vessels made in or donated by the natives of Kephirim (see, #47, 10:10-11).

כְּלֵי דָמַע IN ITEMS 12 AND 58

The most critical internal information regarding the meaning of the dema^c vessels can be found in the first part of Item 12 (3:2-4). It reports the hiding of כְּלֵי כֶּסֶף וְזָהָב שֶׁל דָּמַע מְזֻרְקוֹת כּוֹסוֹת מְנַקִּיאוֹת קְסָאוֹת כֹּל שֶׁשׁ מֵאוֹת וְחָשֶׁע, “(there are) dedicated silver and gold vessels: sprinkling basins, cups, (show-bread) supports, (show-bread covering) tubes; a total of six hundred and nine.” Thus, the 609 dema^c vessels consists of four types.

Item 58 contains a similar phrase, כְּלֵי־כֶּסֶף וְזָהָב שֶׁל דָּמַע, “(there are) silver and gold dema^c vessels” (12:7). However, here neither the types of the dema^c vessels, nor their number are disclosed in contrast to the vessels identified in Item 12.

The vessels, מְזֻרְקוֹת, כּוֹסוֹת, מְנַקִּיאוֹת, קְסָאוֹת, have been translated as follows. ALLEGRO: “sprinkling basins, cups, sacrificial bowls, libation vessels.”¹⁰¹ MILIK: “bowls, cups, basins, pitchers.”¹⁰² LURIE in the translation uses the same terms, and notes their Rabbinic interpretations.¹⁰³ PIXNER:

The list of dema' vessels in Item 12 resembles the implements of the Altar, as well as Table of Show-bread made by Bezalel. Some of these are clarified by the Rabbis.

And he made אֶת הַסִּירֹת (all the implements of the Altar): אֶת כָּל כְּלֵי הַמִּזְבֵּחַ (the pots), and the shovels, וְאֶת הַמְזַרְקֹת (and the sprinkling basins), and the prongs, and the fire pans; כָּל כְּלָיו (all its [masc.] implements) he made of copper (Exod. 38:3).

And he made אֶת הַכֵּלִים (the implements) that were on the (Show-bread) Table: אֶת הַקְּעֻרוֹתָיו (its [bread] forms [or dishes]), וְאֶת כַּפֹּתָיו (and its spoons), וְאֶת מְנַקְיָיו (and its [bread] supports, וְאֶת הַקְּשֻׁוֹת (and its tubes) בְּהֵן (with which [the show-breads] were covered), of pure זָהָב (gold; Exod. 37:16).

And upon the Show(-bread) Table they shall spread a blue בִּגְד (cloth), and they shall place on it אֶת הַקְּעֻרוֹת (the [bread] forms [or dishes]), and the spoons, וְאֶת הַמְנַקִּיֹּת (and the [bread] supports), וְאֶת הַקְּשֻׁוֹת הַנִּסְסָה (and the [bread] covering tubes); and the constant bread shall remain on it (Num. 4:7).¹¹¹

Rabbi Qatina said, the Torah says: "And you shall make ... "their כַּפֹּת," these are בְּזִיכִין (spoons),¹¹² "their קְשֻׁוֹת," these are סְנִיפִין (side frames), "and their מְנַקִּיֹּת," these are קְנִים (tubes), "אֲשֶׁר יִסָּף בְּהֵן" (which shall be covered [the show-bread] with them; b. Men. 97a; referring to Exod. 25:29).

הַגּוֹנֵב אֶת הַקִּסְוָה (If one steals the kiswah) ... the zealots strike him (m. San. 9:6).¹¹³

קְסוּוֹה is a chest. Rav Judah said: בֵּית מִשְׁלַב בֵּית הַמִּקְדָּשׁ הָיָה (It was a Temple vessel). And so (the Torah) says: "וְאֶת הַקְּשֻׁוֹת הַנִּסְסָה" (and the [show-bread] covering tubes; Num. 4:7)" (y. San. 9:7 [35a]).

What is a קְסוּוֹה? Rav Judah said: כְּלֵי שֶׁרֶת (A service vessel). And so (the Torah) says: "וְאֵת קֶשֶׁת הַנֶּסֶךְ" (and the [show-bread] covering tubes; Num. 4:7)" (m. b. San. 81b).

As for the water libation and as for the wine libation (in the Temple) that was poured either with ... or בְּקִיסוֹאָה (with a half-tube [for bread]), or בְּמִנְקִיּוֹת (with [bread] supports), behold, these are properly done (t. Zev. 1:12)

מִנְקִיאוֹת (pl.), "(bread) supports,"¹¹⁴ is a variant spelling (with an extra ^{alef}) of מִנְקִיּוֹת (Jer. 52:19; also MH) and מִנְקִיָּת (defective, e.g., Exod. 25:29; also in the Temple Scroll); it always appears in the plural. The singular seems to be מִנְקִיָּה or מִנְקִיָּת. It is derived from the root family נָקָה, "to clean, pour," and נָקָה, "to suck," plus a locative mem.¹¹⁵

קֶסָאוֹת (pl.), "(bread) supports,"¹¹⁶ is spelled in the Masoretic Text as קֶשׁוֹת = קֶשׁוֹת (Exod. 37:16; 1 Chron. 28:17; samekh-sin interchange plus an extra ^{alef}).¹¹⁷ קֶשׁוֹאוֹת (extra ^{alef} and waw) is found in the Temple Scroll.¹¹⁸ In Mishnaic Hebrew the singular is קֶסְאוֹאָה, קֶסְאוֹאָה, קֶסְאוֹאָה, and the plural, קֶסְאוֹאוֹת, קֶסְאוֹאוֹת (pl., b. Suk. 48b). The Aramaic forms are: קֶשׁוֹאוֹת, קֶשׁוֹאוֹת, קֶשׁוֹאוֹת, spelled with sin and samekh, and with single or double waw (e.g., Trg. Exod. 25:29, 37:16). Double waw spelling indicates consonantal value (see #22, 5:5-6). In a manuscript mentioned by Jastrow it is spelled as קֶסָאוֹת, exactly as in the Scroll.¹¹⁹

Both מִנְקִיאוֹת and קֶסָאוֹת are spelled with an extra aleph, אֶאוֹת-, instead of the usual ת(ו)ֶ-. This expanded form rarely occurs in the Masoretic Text, but is found more often in Mishnaic Hebrew. E.g., the plural forms of מִנְהָ (fem., "portion," 1 Sam. 1:5) and מִנְתָּ (const., 2 Chron. 31:4; also used as absolute, e.g., t. Dem. 6:13) are מִנְהוֹת (e.g., Neh. 8:12; t. Shab. 17 [18]:5), מִנְהוֹת (Neh. 12:44), and מִנְתָּוֹת (Neh. 12:44, 13:10).¹²⁰ Also, the plurals of 114 As cited, the Gemara equates מִנְקִיּוֹת with קֶנֶת, the plural of קֶנֶה, "reed, cane, tube." מִנְקִיָּת is explained as: "half tubes," "frames," "cups for drawing wine out of a bowl," "ladles," "spoons," "measuring cups," "implements to clean the ovens" (see The Living Torah, 391), "supports," "bearers," "reeds," "branches" (see Herczeg, Exodus, 335); etc.

115 Cf. BDB (667): מִנְקִיָּה or מִנְקִיָּת is from נָקָה. Ben Yehuda (4, 3104b and nn. 2-3): מִנְקִיָּה (following Radak), cf. Syriac מִנְקִיָּת. SB (477a): מִנְקִיָּת from נָקָה. Jastrow (777a, 802b): מִנְקִיָּת is related to נָקָה, "to suck," and to מִנְקִיָּת, "wet-nurse." Even-Shoshan: (a) מִנְקִיָּה, cf. Akkadian naqu, "to pour"; Syriac מִנְקִיָּת (Esh^{dic} 4, 1401a); (b) מִנְקִיָּת (Esh^{con} 2, 1270b). Regarding the types, use, etc., of מִנְקִיָּת, see CTL, 314-16.

116 As cited, the Gemara equates קֶשׁוֹת with סְנִיפִים, the plural of סְנִיף, "attachment, wedge, wall." קֶסָה, an implement, may mean "chest," perhaps a chest shaped implement. קֶשׁוֹת is explained as: "side frames," "forks," "flat plates," "half tubes," "libation cups," "pans" (see The Living Torah, 386, 391), "tubes" (see Herczeg, Exodus, 334); etc.

117 Perhaps the singular is קֶשֶׁה or קֶשְׁה. Steinberg (759a) lists קֶשֶׁה and קֶשְׁה for the singular; from the root קֶשֶׁה, "being thick" (related to the roots כֶּשֶׁה, כֶּסֶה, קֶשֶׁה, and קֶשֶׁה).

118 See Yadin's "Table 6" in The Temple Scroll (Heb.) 1, 177; (Eng.) 1, 229.

119 Jastrow, 1395b. Brand says that the vessel קֶס, which occurs only in the plural, appears in the various sources as קֶסֶס, קֶסֶס, קֶסֶס, קֶסֶס, קֶסֶס, and it is equated by some with the קֶשֶׁת (BH) and קֶסָה (MH; CTL, 505-06).

מִקְוָה (masc.) and מִקְוָה (fem., Isa. 22:11), “gathering (of water), ritual bath,” are מִקְוֹת (e.g., m. Mo’ed Q. 1:2) and מִקְוֹאוֹת (e.g., m. Miq. 1:1).¹²¹

כּוֹסֹת, the plural of כּוֹס, “cup” (BH fem.; MH masc., fem.), occurs only once in the Masoretic Text, גְּבִיעִים מְלֵאִים יַיִן וְכּוֹסֹת, “bowls full of wine and cups” (Jer. 35:5; cf. שְׁנֵי דוּדֵינִדְוִדִּינִי מְלֵאִין כֶּסֶף, “two pots full of silver,” see #17, 4:8), while the singular כּוֹס thirty times (e.g., Gen. 40:11). Although in the Bible כּוֹס is not a ceremonial vessel, in the Talmud it is. E.g.,

כּוֹס בְּכּוֹסוֹת, ([If] a cup [containing unfit sacrificial blood was mixed] among cups [containing sacrificial blood]), Rabbi Eliezer says, “קָרַב כּוֹס אֶחָד ([If the priest] offered [the blood of] one cup [from the mixed cups]), יִקְרְבוּ כָּל הַכּוֹסוֹת, ([the blood of] all the cups shall be offered; m. Zev. 8:8).

The Aramaic cognate of כּוֹס is כֶּס (sg. abs.), כֶּסָּא (sg., emph.), כֶּסִּין (pl. abs.), כֶּסִּיא (pl. emph.), and it is masculine. It occurs in the Elephantine Documents, e.g., כֶּס יִי נְחֹשׁ, “one bronze cup” (Cowley, 36:12,14; Kraeling 7:14); in the Targumim, e.g., the Targum of כּוֹס פֶּרַעַה is כֶּסָּא דְּפֶרַעַה, “(the) cup of Pharaoh,” (Gen. 40:13); of וְכּוֹסוֹת is וְכֶסִּין, “and cups” (Jer. 35:5). כּוֹס may be related to the root כנס, “to gather.”¹²² In addition, כּוֹז - כּוֹ, “cup, jug,” a variant of כּוֹס (zayin-samekh interchange), and כּוֹזִין (pl.) are alternate readings in the Scroll (see #32, 7:14; #56, 12:2).¹²³

120 מִנְתָּה, the archaic form of מִנְהָה, is used in Late Biblical Hebrew. Its cognates are in Aramaic מִנְתָּא (Trg. 2 Sam. 6:19), and in Ugaritic מִנְתָּ. Many lexicographers list מִנְתָּאוֹת and מִנְתָּיִת under מִנְתָּה, while מִנְתָּה under מִנְהָה (e.g., BDB, 584; SB 474b, 477b; ESh^{con} 2, 1266a, 1271b-72a; ESh^{dic} 4, 1388b-89a, 1402a).

121 The expanded אַרְת- ending is common in words of Greek and Latin origin; e.g., אַרְתִּי אֶמְבָּטִיאוֹת, אֶמְבָּטִיאוֹת (pl. of אֶמְבָּטִי, fem., “bathtub”); טַבְּלָאוֹת, טַבְּלָאוֹת (pl. of טַבְּלָא, fem., “tablet, board”; see Jastrow, 74b, 518). Regarding the latter, see #4, 1:12.

122 See SB, 367a.

123 The Ugaritic phrase ks qdš is rendered by Gordon as “a holy cup” (‘nt:I:13), where the masculine noun and adjective (UT, 65). However, according to Dahood, ks qdš is a construct chain, “the cup of holiness.” If it were a noun followed by an adjective, the text would read ks qdšt, i.e., feminine noun and adjective (“An Economic Text,” The Claremont Rash Shamra Tablets [1971], 34). Based on Hebrew usage, both can be justified. Gordon’s is equal to כּוֹס קְדוֹשׁ, “a holy cup” (often in MH כּוֹס is masc.); while the expected biblical form would be כּוֹס קְדוֹשָׁה (BH, כּוֹס is fem.). Dahood’s is like כּוֹס קְדוֹשׁ = כּוֹס שֶׁל קְדוֹשׁ, “(the) cup of holiness,” where כּוֹס can be masculine or feminine; cf. וְכֵלֵי קְדֹשׁ הָאֱלֹדִים, “and the vessels of holiness of the God” (1 Chron. 22:19). The term ks has two plural forms, kst, e.g., in kst, “two cups” (2050:2); cf. בְּשְׁנֵי כּוֹסוֹת, “in two cups (masc.)” (m. Zev. 8:12), כּוֹסוֹת, “two cups (fem.)” (t. Yad. 1:15); and ksm, e.g., ksm tlm (= כּוֹסוֹת שְׁלוֹשִׁים, “thirty cups” (3:19). Thus one can conclude: (a) In Ugarit “holy cups” or “cups of holiness” were in use; cf. כּוֹסוֹת as a type of dema' vessels in the Scroll. (b) The Ugaritic ks may be a double gender noun, as כּוֹס in Mishnaic Hebrew. (c) Ugaritic has two plural forms, kst is equal to the Hebrew כּוֹסוֹת, while ksm is like the Aramaic כֶּסִּין and perhaps כּוֹזִין (MH, CS alt.). Other cognates of כּוֹס are: kasu (Akkadian), ka's (Arabic); see BY 3, 2302 n. 4; ESh^{dic} 3, 1035a; UT, 421b (#1276); WUS, 152-53 (#1348); and כּוֹז - כּוֹ in Aramaic (cf. BY 3, 2279 n. 1). Regarding the types, use, etc., of the כּוֹס and כּוֹז, see CTL, 207-27.

מִזְרָקוֹת (fem.) are “sprinkling basins”; the singular seems to be מִזְרָקָה. The masculine forms are מִזְרָק (e.g., Num. 7:13), and מִזְרָקִים (Zech. 14:20).¹²⁴ The latter also occurs in the Temple Scroll.¹²⁵ They are derived from the root זָרַק, “to throw, sprinkle,” with a locative mem, i.e., a vessel in which the sacrificial blood for sprinkling is received.¹²⁶ E.g., “and half of the blood (Moses) זָרַק (sprinkled) upon the altar” (Exod. 24:6). Also,

(The High Priest on Yom Kippur) slaughtered (the sacrificial animal) and received its blood in the מִזְרָק (sprinkling basin; m. Yoma 4:3).

Aramaic uses the same word, מִזְרָק (masc. sg. abs.), מִזְרָקָא (masc. sg. emph., or fem. sg. abs.), מִזְרָקָא (masc. sg. emph.), מִזְרָקְתָּה (fem. sg. emph.), etc.¹²⁷ Also, וּמִזְרָקֵיָא זִי זְהָבָא וּכְסָפָא and וּמִזְרָקֵיָא זִי זְהָבָא וּכְסָפָא, “and the gold and silver sprinkling basins” that were in the Temple of Elephantine (Cowley 30:12 and 31:11, respectively).¹²⁸

While מִזְרָקוֹת וְתִשְׁעֵי, “a total of six hundred and nine” vessels mentioned in Item 12 is enormous, one should not be surprised by this number (as Lurie points out). The Mishnah states:

(Every early morning) the (priests) entered לְשֵׁכֶת הַכֵּלִים (the chamber of the vessels) and brought out from there ninety-three כֵּלֵי כֶסֶף וְכֵלֵי זָהָב (silver vessels and gold vessels). (Then) the (priests) gave drink to the (lamb) of the daily offering from כּוֹס שֶׁל זָהָב (a gold cup; m. Tam. 3:4).

כָּל הַכֵּלִים (all the vessels) which were in the Temple had duplicates and triplicates so that if the originals became impure (the priests) may bring the duplicates in their place (m. Hag. 3:8).

Thus, every day 279 ritually purified silver and gold vessels were prepared in 124 According to Ben-Yehuda (4, 2890b-91a), the singular of מִזְרָקִים is מִזְרָק (masc.), while of מִזְרָקוֹת is מִזְרָקָה (fem.). BDB (284b), SB (443a), Jastrow (756a), Harkavy (365b), and Even-Shoshan list only מִזְרָק (ESH^{con} 2, 1193b-94a; ESH^{dic} 3, 1284b).

125 See Yadin's “Table 6” in The Temple Scroll (Heb.) 1, 177; (Eng.) 1, 229.

126 Surprisingly, Ben-Yehuda (4, 2890b n. 1) doubts whether the root of מִזְרָק is זָרַק.

127 In Numbers Ch. 7 the phrase מִזְרָק אֶחָד occurs twelve times (7:13, 19, etc.), once as הַמִּזְרָק הָאֶחָד (7:85), and once מִזְרָקֵי כֶסֶף (7:84, pl. const.). The Targumim render these as follows. מִזְרָקֵי רַכְסָף, רַמְזִירָקָא חַד, מִזְרָקָא חַד; מִזְרָקֵי כֶסֶף, רַמְזִירָקָא חַד, מִזְרָקָא חַד (TO); מִזְרָקֵי רַכְסָף, רַמְזִירָקָא חַד, מִזְרָקָא חַד (PsJ); מִזְרָק חַד (Frag., only 7:13). Neophyti renders מִזְרָק אֶחָד as מִזְרָק חַד (masc.), however, later in the verse the word וּמִזְרָקָה (e.g., 7:13) or וּמִזְרָקְתָּה (fem., e.g., 7:19) is added as an explanation. The latter forms support Ben-Yehuda's listings of מִזְרָק as masculine, and מִזְרָקָה as feminine. The Targum for the plurals מִזְרָקוֹת and מִזְרָקִים are מִזְרָקֵיָא (e.g., Exod. 38:3, TO, PsJ, TN; Zech. 14:20), and for the verb זָרַק is זָרַק (TO, PsJ, e.g., Lev. 17:6). Pseudo-Jonathan often renders זָרַק as זָרַק (e.g., Lev. 1:5, 11), a dalet-zayin interchange. Regarding the types, use, etc., of the מִזְרָק, see CTL, 278-81.

128 In Numbers 30 is a draft of Cowley 31. It is a petition for the reconstruction of the Jewish Temple sent to Baghi, the governor of Judah, from the community leader Jedania and the priests of Elephantine in 407 BCE. See B. Porten, Jews of Elephantine and Arameans of Syene (1976), 91-98.

the chamber of the vessels for the daily services. Obviously, during pilgrimage and high holidays many more were prepared. Also cf.

שְׁתֵּי לְשָׁכָאוֹת (two chambers) were in the Temple. One is the chamber of the secret (gifts used for needy persons), and the other is לְשֶׁכֶת הַכֵּלִים (the chamber of the implements). Who wants to donate כְּלִי (an implement), זָרְקוֹ לְתוֹכוֹ (tosses it in it). And once in every thirty days the treasurers open it (i.e., the chamber), וְכָל כְּלִי (and every implement) which they find there which is useful לְבִדָּק הַבַּיִת (for the Temple upkeep) they leave it, and the rest they sell for their values, and they (i.e., the proceeds) fall לְלִשְׁכַת בִּדָּק הַבַּיִת (to the chamber for the upkeep of the Temple; m. Sheq. 5:6).¹²⁹

One can postulate that the last Mishnah may also refer to כְּלֵי דָמַע, “dedicated vessels,” donated by individuals to the Temple.

כְּלֵי דָמַע VESSELS IN ITEM 13

Item 13 (3:9) contains the phrase וְלְבוּשֵׁי דָמַע וְכֵלֵי דָמַע, “(there are/is [a]) dedicated vessel(s) and (or that are) covers/garments” — This phrase has been analyzed as follows. ALLEGRO¹²⁹: “a plated (?) vessel of dm^c oil.” ALLEGRO: כְּלֵי דָמַע וְלְבוּשֵׁי, “tithe vessels and garments,” the final nun being on the cut. לְבוּשֵׁי refers to priestly robes (cf. m. Tam. 1:1) or of the High Priest.¹³⁰ MILIK: כְּלֵי דָמַע לְכוּשֵׁי, “vase(s) with resin from the Aleppo pine.” לְכוּשֵׁי is like לְכוּשֵׁי, “the woolly substance of cedar twigs” (m. Shab. 2:1), and the Aramaic לגש. The Talmud explains לְכוּשֵׁי as שׁוּכַא דְאַרְזָא, “prickly bark of cedar” (b. Shab. 20b).¹³¹ GREENFIELD takes “strong exception” to Milik’s interpretation of לְכוּשֵׁי.¹³² LURIE: וְלְבוּשֵׁי, “and garments,” refers to the sanctified priestly robes; cf. t. Men. 1:7; Par. 4:6-7.¹³³ PIXNER: “tithe vessels, sacred garments,” i.e., כְּלֵי דָמַע לְבוּשֵׁי.¹³⁴ WOLTERS: The third word can be vocalized as לְבוּשֵׁי, “my garment,” לְבוּשֵׁי, “my garments,” and לְבוּשֵׁי (pl.) constructed to the next word, i.e., לְבוּשֵׁי בֵּיתָא, “garments of its entrance.” The reading “my garments,” which is connected with the “ephods” mentioned in 1:9, is preferable. כְּלֵי דָמַע לְבוּשֵׁי means “vessels of tribute, my garments.” This implies that “the composer of the Copper Scroll must have been a leading priest, perhaps the High Priest, of the Qumran 129 Lurie (75 n. 5) discusses these three Mišnayot (there is a typographical error, Tam. 3:1 should be 3:4). In Addition, בְּלִשְׁכַת הָרֶמֶס, “in/at/by (the) chamber of (the) herem,” is a possible reading in the Scroll (see #43:16). Regarding בֵּית, see #7, 2:3.

community.”¹³⁵ McCARTER: [כְּלִי דְמַע לְבוּשִׁין], “swaddled vessels of *dema*ˢ.” It is parallel to וְאִפְרִין ... כְּלִי דְמַע, “... and wrapped vessels of *dema*ˢ” (1:9).¹³⁶ GARCIA MARTINEZ: “tithe-vessels and my garments.”¹³⁷ BEYER: כְּלִי לְבוּשִׁי, vessels with jar (resin?) of priestly share.¹³⁸ VERMES: “vessels of offering, garments.”¹³⁹ WISE: “votive vessels, priestly clothes.”¹⁴⁰

The last word in the drawings differ. BAKER^{dr} and MILIK^{dr}: לְבוּשִׁי. ALLEGRO^{dr}: וְלְבוּשִׁין, clear waw in front of the word and final nun on the cut where the roll was sliced. Since Allegro’s drawing indicate the cuts, the preferred readings is לְבוּשִׁין or וְלְבוּשִׁין (see “The Drawings” in the Discussion).

לְבוּשִׁים is the plural of לְבוֹשׁ (masc.), “garment,” furniture “cover” of the tabernacle (from the root לָבַשׁ, “to dress”).¹⁴¹ If it is (ו)לְבוּשִׁי or (ו)לְבוּשִׁי, then the yod is a shortened יֵין-ים- plural ending. Cf. הַשְּׁלִישִׁי or הַשְּׁלִישִׁי for הַשְּׁלִישִׁים, “officers, trustee” (alt.; see #2, 1:5), הַכֵּל or הַכֵּל for הַכֵּלִין, “the vessels” (alt.; see #4, 1:10); also the verbal formations of שְׂרוּי or שְׂרוּי for שְׂרוּיִם, “which (they, masc.) water,” and שְׂרוּיִ שְׂרוּיִ for שְׂרוּיִם, “which are (masc.) watered” (alt.; see #45, 10:3).¹⁴²

141 Cf. TO, PsJ, TN, in Num. Ch. 4. לְבוֹשׁ in Jer. 10:9 may be a “garment” or “cover” of an idol.

142 The shortened plural ending is common in Aramaic, it also occurs in Biblical and Mishnaic Hebrew. E.g., יְהוּדָאִין vs. יְהוּדָאִי, “Jews” (TO Exod. 2:6 and 2:13, respectively); חֲמֹרִין vs. חֲמֹרִין, “donkeys” (TO Num. 31:28 and Gen. 45:23, respectively); מַלְאָכִי vs. מַלְאָכִי, “evil messengers” (Ps. 78:49; see Rabbeinu Meyuhas, Me’iri). חֲלוּנִים (= חֲלוּנִים), “recessed windows” (1 Kgs 6:4; see Me’iri, Radak); (צִידוֹנִים) (= צִידוֹנִים), “and all Sidonians” (Ezek. 32:30; see Rid, Radak, Mešudat Zion); כְּהֵנִים לְיִשְׂרָאֵלִים instead of כְּהֵנִים לְיִשְׂרָאֵלִים, “priests, Levites, Israelites, impaired priests, converts, and freed slaves” (m. Qid. 4:1). Most commentators consider these to be plural; e.g., Rashi and Tosephot Rabbi Isaac ben Samuel the Elder of Dampierre (b. Qid. 69a); Penei Mošeh and Qorban ha’Edah (y. Qid. 4:1 [35b]); Bertinoro, Tosephot Yom-Tov, Tif’eret Israel, and Kehati (m. Qid. 4:1). Jastrow (242b, 500a, 602a, 615b) says that these are denominative forms, i.e., one who belongs to or a descendant of a group. The shortened form is usually vocalized with a šere, as in the Targumim, but it could be a long hiriq, or the yod is preceded by a pataḥ (or qamaṣ in pausal form). E.g., הַרְדֵּר עַמִּי (= עַמִּים) תַּחְתִּי (cf. Trg. רִי הַרְדֵּר עַמִּי תַּחְתִּי, “He who subdues nations under me” (Ps. 144:2; see Rashi, Rid, Minḥat Šay); וְרֹבְבֵי יִשְׂשָׁכָר (cf. Trg. וְרֹבְבֵי יִשְׂשָׁכָר, “and the princes of Issachar” (Judg. 5:15; see Radak, Ralbag, Mešudat David, Mešudat Zion); עַל כָּל אַצְלֵי יָדַי (= יָדַי) (cf. Trg. עַל כָּל אַצְלֵי יָדַי (= יָדַי), “upon all arm joints/pits” (Ezek 13:18; see Rashi, Rit, Radak, Mešudat Zion); עַל תְּלֵמֵי שְׂדֵי (= שְׂדֵים = שְׂדֵים), “upon the furrows of the fields” (Hos. 12:12; see Radak). Also see Rabbeinu Meyuhas, A Commentary on the Book of Job and its editor, Ch.B. Chavel’s note on Job 1:3; Peruṣ le-Sefer Tehillim, Ḥibro Rabbi Menahem ben Rabbi

כְּלִי כֶסֶף וְכִלְיָ זָהָב וּבְגָדִים resembles the verse כְּלִי דָמַע וּלְבוּשִׁין and its Targum, מְנִין דְּכֶסֶף וּמְנִין דְּזָהָב וּלְבוּשִׁין, “silver articles and gold articles and garments” (TO, PsJ, TN, Gen. 24:53; see #59, 12:9). Cf. כְּלִי־כְלִי דָמַע, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) consisting of a flask(s) and (a) (service) garment(s)/cover(s)” (1:9; alt.); כְּלִי־כְלִי דָמַע סוּת, “(a) dedicated garment(s)/cover(s)” (11:4); and כְּלִי־כְלִי דָמַע אוּ דָמַע סוּת, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) and/or (a) dedicated garment(s)/cover(s)” (11:10).

כְּלִי דָמַע IN ITEMS 22 AND 50

Item 22 contains the phrase כְּלִין שֶׁל דָּמַע = כְּאִלִּין שֶׁל דָּמַע (plene spelling, non-constructed state), same as כְּלִי דָמַע, “(there are an undisclosed amount and unspecified type of) dema^c vessels” (see #22, 5:7).

Item 50 has the phrase בְּכִלְי־כְּכִלִי דָמַע, “in/like dema^c vessels.” Regarding the readings of the scholars and for further discussion, see #50, 11:1.

In these two items the type and amount of the dema^c vessels are not indicated. Yet they are followed by the phrase בְּתִכְוִיבְתְּכוֹן־בְּתִכְוִיבְתְּכוֹן אֶצְלָם that may contain the relevant information (see Appendix E).

כְּלִי דָמַע IN ITEM 33

Item 33 contains the phrase כְּלִי דָמַע וּסְפָרִין אֶל הַכְּלִין, “(there are an undisclosed number of) dedicated vessels, and (there are an undisclosed number of) documents in/on/among the vessels” (8:3). Here the type of dema^c vessels are not identified, but indicated that on, in, or among the vessels there are also hidden documents.

This phrase is similar to כְּלִי דָמַע וּלְבוּשִׁין, “(there are) dedicated vessels and covers/garments” (#13, 3:9), and כְּלִי דָמַע בְּלִגִּין וְאַפּוּרִין, “(there are) dedicated vessels consisting of flasks and jars with handles” (#4, 1:9). Regarding the scholars readings, and for further discussion, see #33, 8:3.

כְּלִי דָמַע IN ITEMS 51, 54, AND 55

Items 51 (11:4), 54 (11:10), and 55 (11:14) contain five difficult words that modify the term דָּמַע (the first one appears twice). Since some letters are undistinguishable (e.g., he, het, and taw; waw, zayin, yod, that may be a short-legged final nun, or a short-headed reš), plus letters may be interchanged, each of these words can be read more than one way. The text is practically in continues script, therefore, many of these words, including דָּמַע, may be part of larger Hebrew or Judeo-Aramaic terms.¹⁴³ It is noteworthy that these three difficult phrases appear in the same column (Column 11), and are followed with the equally difficult phrase ותבן ותכן בתכן וכתבן אצלמון (see Appendix E). The table below shows the possible readings for these lines.

Practically in all cases, כלי refers to both halves of the line. If the possible Judeo-Aramaic readings the word starts with the relative dalet, same as the Hebrew שָׁל, the previous Hebrew word כָּלִי (sg.) or כָּלִי (= כְּלִים, pl.) must be an absolute form (cf. the previously discussed לבושיסין = לבושיסין).

The three phrases and/or the five words have been analyzed as follows. ALLEGRO^{PF}: (11:4) כלי דמע סיה דמע סנה, “a vessel (vessels) of Sīh oil, Seneh oil”; כלדדמע, the dalet is a dittograph or an error for yod. For כלי without yod, cf. 12:6. Aramaic כְּלִיד means “cup” (Jastrow, 642a). סיה = שִׁיחַ (BH), “bush, shrub.” Clearly to the Qumranites a sort of oil or resin. סנה might support the identification of rubus for this bush. (11:10) כלי דמע או דמע סיה, “vessels of Dema^c or Sīh oil”; דמע standing alone, as in 9:1, different from the דמע defined by סיה. (11:14) “a vessel filled with oil of Surā” (i.e., כְּלִי כְּלִי, “cup”; סורא, “a bitter herb (Jastrow, 969b). ALLEGRO^{PF}: (11:4) “a cup of Sīh oil, Seneh oil” (i.e., כלד דמע סיה דמע סנה); כלד, Aramaic כְּלִיד, “cup” (Jastrow, 642a); cf. 11:14. Revised again to, “a cup of incense in pine wood and a vessel of incense in cassia wood.” (11:14) כלי מלאה ... בה, gender of כלי is in question. Revised to כליד מלאה, “a cup filled with oil of Surā.” Revised again to, כלי דמע לאח, “a vessel of liquid (לח) out of Surā”; דמע לאח, “moist (fresh) dema^c.”¹⁴⁴ ALLEGRO: סיה, “sweepings, refuse”; סנה, “spoil”; או, “or”; לאח = לח, “liquid”; סורא, “degenerated.”¹⁴⁵ MILIK:

143 There are other possible Aramaic readings in the Scroll, e.g., מְהֶה (= מְהֶה), “from/of gold” (9:12. alt.); תִּשַׁע עֶשְׂרֵה (= תִּשַׁע עֶשְׂרֵה), “nineteen” (2:8. alt.).

144 Some of these corrections are indicated in a letter by Allegro sent to Harding on December 1, 1956.

145 Allegro, 53, 164 n. 268. Allegroⁱⁱ does not translated these terms.

לֹאֶה, "cedar"; אֶרְכֹּס, "senna perfume"; סִנָּה, "Cilician pine"; סִיח or סוּח, "aloes wood"; סִירָא, "white pine."¹⁴⁶ LURIE: סוּח, "impure" (it is like סָחִי, "refuse"; cf. כְּסוּחָה, "like refuse," Isa. 5:25); the second סוּח is a dittograph; אוּ, not translated (it may be a typographical error); לֹח = לִח, "liquid"; סוּרָא = סוּרָה, "set aside."¹⁴⁷ PIXNER: סוּח, "soah (?)"; סִנָּה, "sneh (?)"; אֶז, "az (?)"; לֹאח, "lah (?)"; סִירָא, "sirah (?)".¹⁴⁸ WOLTERS: סוּח, "Suah's"; סִנָּה, "Sene's"; אֶז, "Az's"; לֹאֶה, "Leah's"; סִירָא, "Sira's".¹⁴⁹ BEYER: סִיח, "Artemisiastrauch"; סִנָּה, "Brombeerstrauch"; אֶרְכֹּס, "Zeder"; אֶל־לֹאֶה, "Aloe"; סִירָא, "Becherblume."¹⁵⁰ GARCIA MARTINEZ: "pine (?) resin"; "cassia (?) resin"; "myrtle (?) tree"; "aloes"; "white pine."¹⁵¹ MCCARTER: סִיח = שִׁיח, "(wild) growth"; סִפִּיח = סָפִיח, "aftergrowth"; אוּ, "or"; דְּמַע <מַע, מְלֹאָה, "dema^c of full growth"; סוּרָא, "set apart."¹⁵² VERMES: "resin"; "senna"; "cedar"; "aloes"; "... Applying this method, one can rewrite any text in any shape or form.

For these difficult words/phrases the following readings, vocalizations, and interpretations are offered.

סִיח or סִיחָ (prob. masc.) may mean "scraper"; cf. the Arabic siḥ ('סִיח), "knife." It may be related to סוּחָה (fem.) and Aramaic סְחִיתָא - סְחוּתָא, "scraps, offal, refuse, garbage" (from the root סָחַה, "to scrape"). Cf. "and their corpses (will be) כְּסוּחָה (Trg. כְּסָחִיתָא, like refuse) in the middle of the streets" (Isa. 5:25; cf. Lurie); also, "וְסָחִיתִי (and I will scrape away) her (i.e., Tyre's) soil from her, and I will give/make her לְצִחִיתָ סָלַע (into a bare rock)" (Ezek. 26:4; see #60, 12:10).

סוּח, Suah, Scraper, is a personal name; cf. בְּנֵי צוּפָח סוּח וְחֶרְנֶפֶר, "The sons of Zophah: Suah, and Harnepher," of the Tribe Asher (1 Chron. 7:36).

146 Milik, 296-297, 251 C-124, C-126, C-128-129; Milik^E, 142. Greenfield (139b) takes "strong exception" to Milik's interpretations of אֶז (i.e., אֶרְכֹּס) and לֹאֶה.

153 Vermes, 377.

154 The readings of the text are those of Milik, the restorations of Wilmot, the translations of Wise ("David J. Wilmot and the Copper Scroll," 21; Wise, 197).

סוּחַ and סִיחַ may be variants of שוּחַ, Shuah (Gen. 25:2; 1 Chron. 1:32; samekh-šin interchange; see #55, 11:12), and צִיחָא, צִיחָא, Ziha (Ezra 2:43; Neh. 7:46, 11:21; samekh-šade; see #60, 12:10).

סִיחַ = שִׁיחַ (masc., pl. שִׁיחִים; samekh-šin interchange), “tree, bush” (cf. Allegro^{pr}) — E.g., וְכָל שִׁיחַ הַשָּׂדֶה (TO, PsJ, וְכָל אֵילָנֵי הַקֶּלָּא, “and all tree of the field” (Gen. 2:5; see Ibn-Ezra); בֵּין שִׁיחִים (Trg. בֵּינֵי אֵילָנֵי צִיחָא, “among the trees” (Job 30:7; cf. Ibn-Ezra, Ralbag, Mešudat David).

סוּת, a biblical hapax legomenon, is parallel to לְבוּשׁ, “garment, cover”: “He washes לְבוּשׁוֹ (his garment) in wine, and in the blood of grapes סוּתָה (his clothes)” (Gen. 49:11).¹⁵⁵ The term סוּת (prob. fem.) is a synonym of כְּסוּת (prob. fem.), “garment” (from the root כָּסַה, “to cover”; e.g., Exod. 21:10). The plural of סוּת occurs once in the Mishnah, -וֹת עוֹשֶׂה סוּתוֹת, “and the form of the dressmakers” (m. Kel. 16:7; see Maimonides).¹⁵⁶ סוּת appears in Phoenician, שִׁכְבַּת בְּסוּת, “I ... lay (fem.) in a robe”; (שִׁכְבַּת בְּסוּת, “עֲלַמַּת יֵתֵן בֶּשֶׁת וְגִבֹּר בְּסוּת, “he gave a maid for a sheep and a man for a garment”;¹⁵⁷ and in Punic לְסוּת (= לְסוּת), “for a garment.”¹⁵⁸ The Akkadian simtu (pl. simati), “jewel, vessel,” and the Ugaritic šmt, “garment,” are cognates of סוּת (waw-mem interchange).¹⁵⁹ The waw of סוּת (pl. סוּתוֹת, 155 סוּתָה is an archaic form of סוּתוֹ (see #13, 3:10; also Rashi and Ibn-Ezra on this verse). The Samaritan Pentateuch has כְּסוּתוֹ (= כְּסוּתוֹ), “his garment” (A. Freiherr von Gall, Der Hebräische Pentateuch der Samaritaner [1918], 107). In addition, the phrase כְּסוּת עֵינַיִם is usually rendered as “covering of the eyes” (Gen. 20:16). Yet it could be כְּ-סוּת עֵינַיִם, “as/like a cover for eyes,” thus, there may be a second biblical occurrence of this rare noun. If kaf is the first letter of a word, it may be a root letter or preposition. E.g., כְּדוּר, “ball” (Isa. 22:18, 29:3; m. Kel. 23:1), cf. Rashi’s second explanation, Radak, Mešudat Zion, Mešudat David (perhaps from the root כָּרַר, “to shoot”; cf. BDB, 461b-62a), or כְּ-דוּר = דוּר - רור כְּדוּר, “like the circle,” cf. Targum and Rashi’s first explanation (from the root כָּרַר, “to make a circle/heap, to dwell”). כְּפָתִים (Ps. 147:17) is either of the root כָּפַת, “to bind” (cf. כוּתְפֵין, MH, “they bind up,” m. Tamid 4:1; מְכַפְתִּין, BA, “they bound,” Dan. 3:23, 24; also הכְּפִישְׁנִי, BH, “he made me enwrap,” Lam 3:16, from the root כָּפַשׁ, “to bind, bend,” a šin-taw interchange), cf. Rashi’s second explanation, or כְּ-פָתִים, “like crumbs” (פָּתִים, Lev 2:6, “crumbs,” of the root פָּתַת, “to break up”), cf. Rashi’s first explanation and Mešudat Zion. The Talmud asks, “What does כְּרוּב (Cherub) mean? Rabbi Abahu said, כְּרִבָּא (like a youngster), because in Babylon a suckling is called כְּרִבָּא; i.e., כְּ-רִבָּא would be the Hebrew form of the Aramaic כְּרִבָּא (b. Suk. 5b; b. Hag. 13b, see Rashi; also see Rashi, ‘Amar Neqe’, Mizrahi, Gur Aryeh, and Sifte Hakhmim on Exod. 25:18).

156 Some manuscripts have סַאגוֹת, סִיאגוֹת, סַאבוֹת. See Bertinoro, Meleḥket Šelomoh, Hilufei Girsā’ot, Tif’eret Israel, Kehati; Jastrow, 970b; BY 5, 4001a and nn. 3-4; ESh^{dic} 4, 1780a).

159 Torczyner says that the Akkadian simtu is like the Talmudic כְּלִים (H) and מֵאֲנִי (A), “vessel,” both having the meaning of “garment” (“Zu einigen akkadisch-hebräisch Wortbeziehungen,” MGWJ 80 [1936], 18). Aistleitner renders šmt as “wertvoller Stein; Karneol סוֹתוֹת) is consoriantal (cf. Phoenician). Cf. דוֹר (e.g., Jer. 24:2; pl. דְּוָרִים, 2 Chron. 35:13, and דוֹדִים, 2 Kgs 10:7; דוֹרִינֹן, CS 4:8), “pot”; שׁוֹךְ (e.g., Prov. 7:8; pl. שְׁוָקִים, Songs 3:2), “street”; שׁוֹר (e.g., Exod. 21:28; pl. שְׁוָרִים, Hosea 12:12), “ox”;¹⁶⁰ etc. סוֹת is related to מְסוֹה, “cover” (Exod. 34:33-35), the taw became a silent he, and matches the pair of לְבוֹשׁ and מְלִבוֹשׁ, “garment”; in both the mem is locative.¹⁶¹

סִנָּה, “bush” — E.g., וַיֵּרָא וְהִנֵּה הַסִּנָּה בֹעֵר בְּאֵשׁ וְהַסִּנָּה, “in a flame of fire out of the bush; he saw and behold, the bush was burning in the fire, but the bush was not consumed” (Exod. 3:2).

סִנָּה, Sannah, is a toponym; cf. קִרְיַת סִנָּה, Kiriath-sannah, a priestly city, same as דִּבְרִי, Debir, and קִרְיַת סִפֶּר, Kiriath-sepher (e.g., Josh. 15:15,49); also, בְּנֵי הַסִּנְאָה, “sons of Hassenaaah,” or “sons of the Senaah” (Neh. 3:3).

סִנָּה, Seneh, is a toponym; cf. בּוֹצֵז, Bozaz, and סִנָּה, Seneh, were two peaks near Gibeah; between them was a mountain pass (1 Sam. 14:4).

סִנָּה = סִינָה (defective) may be a variant of סִרָה = סִירָה = סִירָא (nun-reš interchange); cf. חֶפֶן, חֶפֶן, חֶפֶר, חֶפֶר, for חֶפֶר or חֶפֶר (see #17, 4:7). סִירָא is discussed latter.

סִנָּה may be a variant of צִנָּה (fem., samekh-šade interchange), “shield.” In the verse, “and you will be carried off בְּצִנּוֹת (with shields), and your lasts בְּסִירוֹת דּוֹגָה (with fish hooks)” (Amos 4:2; see Radak),¹⁶² the plural צִנּוֹת and סִירוֹת are parallel words, and may be related (samekh-šade and nun-reš letter interchanges). סִנָּה may refer to a shield shaped implement.

סוּרָא, Sura', a toponym (cf. Allegro¹⁹⁷); cf. the city of סוּרָא, Sura', or סוּרָא, Sura' of Euphrates, in Syria, which was an important caravan station

(?), i.e., “valuable gem; carnelian gem (?),” and compares it to the Akkadian samtū (WUS, 311 [#2644]). See also UT, 429b (#2445).

160 שְׁוָרִים (pl.) occurs once in the Masoretic Text, otherwise, שׁוֹר (sg.) is used as a collective noun. Mishnaic Hebrew employs both שׁוֹר and שְׁוָרִים. Its Aramaic cognate is תוֹר (šin-taw interchange); e.g., Onkelos renders שׁוֹר and פָּר as תוֹר, (Exod. 31:37, 29:1) and תוֹרָא (emph.), “(the) ox”; פָּרִים (pl.) as תוֹרִין (pl.), “oxen” (Exod. 25:5); פָּרָה (fem.), “cow,” as תוֹרְתָא (emph.), “(the) cow” (Num. 19:2); and פָּרוֹת (pl.) as תוֹרְתָא (pl. emph.), “(the) cows” (Gen. 32:15). An Aramaic inscription reads, [וּשְׁבַע] שׁוֹרָה יִהְיֶנָּק עֵגֶל, “[and seven] cows shall give suck for one calf,” where שׁוֹרָה is a collective noun (KAI, 1, 41 [#222]). One can assume that Hebrew once had all four forms: שׁוֹר, “ox”; שְׁוָרִים, “oxen”; שׁוֹרָה or שְׁוָרָה, “cow”; and שׁוֹרוֹת or שְׁוָרוֹת, “cows.”

161 Ibn-Ezra on Gen 49:11. Rashbam (following Dunash) says that the waw of סוֹת מְסוֹה is a root letter, and they represent two types of garments (Exod. 34:33). Hizquni also connects סוֹת with מְסוֹה, and says that their root is סוּה (Exod. 34:33). See also MK 2, 792d; SB, 478b, 591a; BDB, 691b; ESH^{dic} 4, 1407, 1780a. There are semantic relations between the nominal and verbal forms of בָּגָד, “garment, cover,” vs. בָּגָד, “betrayal,” and בָּגָד, “act dishonestly”; מְעֵיל, “robe,” vs. מְעֵל, “act dishonestly”; and סוֹת, “garment, cover,” and מְסוֹה, “cover,” vs. הִסִּית, “to instigate” (Hif'il of the root סוֹת; cf. HR 3, 813).

(e.g., b. 'A.Z. 16b; b. B.M. 61b), and Sura' in Babylon, which was famous for its academy (e.g., b. 'Eruv. 8a; b. Ta'an. 21b).¹⁶³

סִירָא = סִירָה may be a feminine form of סִיר (masc.), "prison," the assumed singular of סִירִים (pl. BH) of the phrase מִבֵּית הַסִּירִים, "from the prison" (Eccl. 4:14).¹⁶⁴

סִירָא = סִירָה (fem., MH), "enclosure, chain" — E.g., לְסִירָה אֲבָרָהֶם חוּץ לְסִירָה, "Abraham is outside of the prison, and I (Sarah) am placed in the prison (i.e., court of Pharaoh)" (Gen. Rabbah 40:2).¹⁶⁵

סִירָא = סִירָה may be a feminine form of סִיר, "pot," which is masculine in the Masoretic Text except once, הַסִּיר הַגָּדוֹלָה, "the large pot" (2 Kgs 4:38). The service vessels סִירוֹת (pl.), "pots," were used in the Tabernacle (Exod. 38:3, mentioned earlier) and in the Temple (1 Kgs 7:45, etc.).

סִירָא = סִירָה may be the feminine form of סִיר (masc.), "thorn" (Hos. 2:8). Cf., on the above mentioned Midrash, Pseudo-Rashi says, כָּמוֹ — סִירָה קוֹץ וְדֹרֶדֶר, "sirah is like thorn and thistle." The plurals are סִירִים, "thorns"; as כְּקוֹל הַסִּירִים תַּחַת הַסִּיר, "like the sound of the thorns under the pot" (Eccl. 7:6; word-play), and סִירוֹת, "hooks" (Amos 4:2; mentioned above by סִנָּה).

סִירָא = סִירָה (JA), "coat of armor" — Cf. the opening of Aaron's robe had to be כְּפִי תַּחֲרָא, "like the opening of a coat of armor" (Exod. 28:32; see Rashi). This phrase is rendered by the Targumim as, כְּפֹם שִׁירִין (TO); כְּפֹם לְשִׁירָא (PsJ); כְּפֹם סִירָא (Frag.), and כְּפֹם סִירָה (TN). Also cf. שִׁרְיָה (Job. 41:18); שִׁרְיָן (e.g., Isa. 49:17); שִׁרְיוֹן (e.g., 1 Sam. 17:5, 38; m. Shab. 6:2); סִרְיָנוֹ in סִרְיָנוֹ, "his coat of armor" (Jer. 51:3). The plurals are שִׁרְיָנִים (Neh. 4:10), שִׁרְיָנוֹת (2 Chron. 26:14), and סִרְיָנוֹת, "coats of armor" (Jer. 46:4; samekh-šin interchange). Perhaps סִירָאוֹה is a priestly robe resembling a coat of armor, thus a synonym of סוֹת, "garment."

סִירָא, Sirah, a personal name; cf. יֵשׁוּעַ בֶּן יִשׁוּעַ בֶּן סִירָא, Simeon son Jesus ben Sira (Sirach, Σειράχ), the author of Wisdom of Ben Sirah or Ecclesiasticus, who lived in the Second Temple era (second cent. BCE). סִפְרָ בֶּן סִירָא, "Book of Ben Sira," is often mentioned or cited in the Talmud (e.g., t. Yad. 2:13; y. San. 10:1 [36a]; b. B.Q. 92b).¹⁶⁶ Many of the offered sugges-

163 See J.D. Eisenstein, "סִירָא" in OY, 7, 166a-67b; M. Beer, "סִירָא" in EH 25, 591; E. Bashan, "Sura," EJ 15, 521-23.

164 This phrase is explained as a defective form of מִבֵּית הַסִּירִים, "from the prison" (see Ibn-Ezra, Meṣudat David, Meṣudat Zion; also BY 5, 4000a and n. 1).

165 See Mattenot Kehunah on the Midrash; also Jastrow, 987a; BY 5, 4032b-33a and n. 4; ESH^{dic} 4, 1796b. Kohut derives סִירָה from Arabic or from Greek (AC 6, 126b). סִירָה seems to be related to the previously mentioned סִיר, as well as יִרָה (fem.), "circle, ring" (Exod. Rabbah 27:9; from the root זִיר - זור, "to go around," zayin-samekh interchange).

166 A large part of the original Hebrew text was discovered in the Cairo Geniza, in Qumran (Cave 2), and in Massadah; and it was edited from the various manuscript by M.Z.H. Segal, Sefer Ben-Sira' haššaleṃ (1972). See also, M.Z.H. Segal, "בֶּן-סִירָא" in EH 9, 165-67; M.H. Shulevitz and Eds., "Ben Sira, Simeon ben Jesus," EJ 4, 550; M.Z.H. Segal and eds., "Ben Sira, Wisdom of," EJ 4, 550-53.

tions for סורא - סירא may be derived from the root סור - סיר (BH, MH, A), "to go around, turn aside."

או — Since או and ו in Hebrew and Aramaic are interchangeable, both could mean "or" and "and" (see #34, 8:7).¹⁶⁷ Thus, או ודמע = או דמע, "and/or (a) dedicated." If או means "or," it would indicate that the compile(s) did not know what type of vessels were hidden in this place.

או, או, או, or או may be a masculine form of אנה (fem.), "desire," or או is a defective spelling of אנה (from the root אנה, "to desire"). Cf. ודרונים או. שרר (ketiv), "and for princes the desire for old wine" (Prov. 31:4).¹⁶⁸ Also cf., בכול את (= אנה של) נפשך, "with all your soul's desire" (Deut 12:20).

אוי (defective), a personal name; cf. אוי, Evi, one of the five kings or princes of Midian (Num 31:8; Josh. 13:21); also אואל, Uel (Will/Desire of God) son of Bani (Ezra 10:34); and רב אוי סבא, Rabbi 'Iwya' the Old, a Babylonian Amora (e.g., b. San. 57b).

אי (masc.), "island, overseas" — cf. ישרי אי, "island dwellers" (Isa. 23:2,6); מלכי האי אשר בעבר הים, "the kings of the (is)land which is at the other side of the sea" (Jer. 25:22). The plurals are איים (e.g., Isa. 40:15) and אין (Ezek. 26:18).

אי, Ai, may be a shortened form of איה, or אי is a defective spelling for איה, Aiah, a personal name; cf. רצפה בת איה, "Rizpah daughter of Aiah," the concubine of King Saul (2 Sam. 3:7).

אן, On (the waw is read as a short-legged final nun) — e.g., און, On, Heliopolis in Upper Egypt (Gen. 41:45,50, 46:20); On, son of Peleth (Num. 16:1), also אונו, Ono, a city in Benjamin (e.g., Neh. 6:2), אונן, Onan, son of 167 The prefixed ו often means או, "or"; e.g., ומכרו ונמצא בידו, "whether he sold him or in his possession" (Exod. 21:16), vs. וסבחו או מכרו, "whether he slaughters it or sells it" (Exod. 21:37). The Targumim (TO, PsJ, TN) closely follow the Masoretic Text. Also, לא חולצין ולא מבימין, "they neither perform the rite of haliṣah nor they enter into levirate marriage" (m. Yev. 11:2), vs. או חולצין או מבימין, "they either perform the rite of haliṣah or they enter into levirate marriage" (m. Yev. 11:4). Although usually unrecognized, או could mean ו, "and"; e.g., ... ואז ... או אז (= ... ואז ... ואז), and its Targum Onkelos, ... ובן ... או לרכא, "and then ... and then ..." (Lev. 26:41); Trg. או לאיל (TO, PsJ) is rendered by Sa'adiah Ga'on as ולאל, "and for the ram" (Num. 15:6; see also Rashi and Siftei Hakhmim; b. Men. 91b); או תיש, Trg. ותישא, "and male goat," and it is rendered by Sa'adiah Ga'on as ואלתים in Judeo-Arabic (= והתיש or ותיש; Prov. 30:31). Referring to the last two cases, Sa'adiah Ga'on states that או is instead of ו (see J. Kafah, Peruṣei Rabbeinu Sa'adiah Ga'on 'al haTorah [1984], 145, n. 1; Mišlei 'im Targum wFeiruš haGa'on Rabbeinu Sa'adiah ben Yosef Fayyumi zš"l [1994-95], 282-83).

168 The following vocalizations have been offered. BDB (16a): או (abs.), או (const.), prob. fem. Steinberg (15b): או is an infinitive for אוו, thus שרר = או שרר (i.e., "desire for wine"). Harkavy (10a): או, a verbal noun of אנה, "to desire." Ben-Yehuda (1, 92a n. 3): some consider או or או as a masculine form of אנה. Gordis (150, 199 n. 510): או, "desire, appetite," from the root אנה, like צו, "command!," is from the root צוה, "to command."

Judah (e.g., Gen. 38:4,9), אֹנָם, Onam, son of Shobal the Horiite (Gen. 36:23; 1 Chron. 1:40), and Onam the son of Jerahmeel (1 Chron. 2:26,28). Moreover, אֹן may be a variant of the name הֹן, cf. הֹן בְּרִיהַ דְּרַב נַחְמָן, “Hon the son of Rabbi Nahman,” a Babylonian Amora (e.g., b. Yev. 34a).

אָר = אור (defective, masc.), “fire” (the waw is read as a short-headed reš). E.g., רָאִיתִי אור, “I saw a fire” (Isa. 44:16). Also, אור, Ur, Fire, is a personal name; cf. אֶלְיָפָל בֶּן אור, “Eliphaz son of Ur,” one of King David’s mighty warriors (1 Chron. 11:35); and a toponym, אור כַּשְׁדִּים, Ur Kasdim in Mesopotamia, the birthplace of Abraham (Gen. 11:28,31, 15:7; Neh. 9:7).

לֶאָה, Leah (cf. Wolters), a personal name; cf. Leah, the wife of Jacob, and mother of six tribes of Israel (e.g., Gen. 29:23). לֶאָה (from the root לָאָה, “be weary, impatient”) means “delicate, weak.”¹⁶⁹

לֶאָה may be an unattested singular masculine form of לֶאָה, “delicate” (used an adjective).

לֶאָח = לח (masc., pl. לָחִים, BH) means “moist, wet.” Its antonym is יָבֵשׁ (masc., pl. יָבֵשִׁים, BH), “dry, drystuff.” E.g., כָּל עֵץ לֶח וְכָל עֵץ יָבֵשׁ, “every moist tree and every dry tree” (Ezek. 21:3); וְעֵצִים לָחִים וְיָבֵשִׁים, “and grapes, moist or dried” (Num. 6:3). Regarding the plene spellings of לֶאָח and דְּמֶלֶאח (mentioned below), cf. כָּלִין for כָּלִין (see #22, 5:6).

The second and third words of line 11:4, and the last two words of line 11:10 can be read as דְּמַעְסָה or דְּמַעְסָה, while the last two words of line 11:14 as דְּמַעְסִּיא - דְּמַעְסִּיא or דְּמַעְסִּיא - דְּמַעְסִּיא (the waw is read either as a short-headed reš or a final nun in middle position). Likewise, the last two words of line 11:4 can be read as דְּמַעְסָה = דְּמַעְסָה. The result of these readings are the same, since nun-reš interchange (for similar cases, see #38, 9:1-2). דְּמַעְסִּיא (JA) is the same as שֶׁל הַמַּעֲשֵׂר (H), “of the tithe.” מַעְסֵר שֵׁנִי, “second tithe,” occurs in the Scroll (see #4, 1:10-11).

The first two words of line 11:10 can be read as דְּמַעְסָה, where דְּמַעְסָה (JA) = הַדְּמַע (H); or דְּמַעְסָה is an unattested feminine form of דְּמַע (masc.); cf. בֵּיב (masc.) and בֵּיבָאָה (fem.), “drain canal” (see #42, 9:11).

The letters דֶּם appears twice in line 11:14. The second דֶּם was corrected to דְּמַע by adding an ayin was added below the line between the mem and the next letter samekh. The first דֶּם is preceded by כָּלִי and followed by לֶאָה, לֶאָה, or לֶאָת. It was left uncorrected, but the scholars amend it to דְּמַע. Although this is a logical solution, it raises some questions. Why the scribe left uncorrected the first דֶּם in the same way as he did the second one? Could he overlooked it? It is an error at all? Indeed, the five letters after כָּלִי can be read several ways with or without emendation, as follows.

דֶּם = דָּם (masc., BH, MH), “blood,” often refers to the blood sprinkled at various offerings, such as הַדָּם הַזֶּה, “blood of the guilt offering” (e.g., Lev.

169 Cf. SB, 403b-404a; BDB, 521a.

14:17); דַּם זֶבַח, “blood of meal offering” (e.g., 2 Kgs 16:15); דַּם הַחֲטָאת, “blood of the sin offering” (Lev. 4:25); דַּם עֲלֵה, “blood of elevation offering” (2 Kgs 16:15); דַּם הַפָּר, “blood of the bull offering” (e.g., Lev. 4:7); דַּם הַשְּׁלָמִים, “blood of the peace offering” (e.g., Lev. 7:14); דַּם הַתָּמִיד, “blood of the daily offering” (e.g., b. Yoma 33a).

דְּמָלָה (JA) = שֶׁל מְלָאָה (H), “of fullness, elevated gift” — Cf. Allegro’s preliminary reading and that of McCarter.¹⁷⁰

דְּמָלַח = דְּמָלַח (JA) = שֶׁל מָלַח (H) “of salt” — Regarding מַלַּח, see #6, 2:1; #13, 3:8.

דְּמָלָח = דְּמָלוּחַ (JA) = שֶׁל מְלוּחַ (H), “of mallow” — Cf. הַקִּטְפִּים מְלוּחַ, “who are scraping moss/mallow on the trees” (Job 30:4). מְלוּחַ (prob. masc., hapax legomena) may be derived from לַח, i.e., something moist, wet;¹⁷¹ or from מָלַח, “salt,” thus “mallow, moss, salt-wort, atriplex,” a plant growing in salt-marsh.¹⁷² The plural can be found in a baraita, “‘Our forefathers used to eat מְלוּחִים (mallows) ..., so let us eat מְלוּחִים (mallows).’ וַהֲעֵלוּ מְלוּחִים עַל שׁוּלְחָנוֹת שֶׁל זָהָב (And they brought up mallows on golden tables)” (b. Kidd. 66a; see Rashi).

Based on the above discussion, the following suggestions are offered. For clarification purposes, the Hebrew in the construct state, as well as the Judeo-Aramaic phrases are also rendered in the Hebrew non-construct state.

כְּלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל דְּמַע שֶׁל סוּחַ וּכְלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל דְּמַע = כְּלִי דְּמַע סוּחַ דְּמַע סְנְהוּסְנָה, “(a) dedicated scraper tool(s) (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]) of Sannah/Seneh”; or “(a) dedicated vessel(s) of Suah (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]) of Sannah/Seneh” (11:4). These vessels might have been made or donated by Suah and the natives of the place Sannah/Seneh.

כְּלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל דְּמַע שֶׁל שִׁיחַ וּכְלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל דְּמַע שֶׁל = כְּלִי דְּמַע סִיחַ דְּמַע סְנָה, “(a) dedicated tool(s) for trees (and [a]) dedicated (tool[s]) for bushes.” Perhaps these were used in לְשִׁכַּת הָעֵצִים, the Wood Chamber of the Temple, where aged and physically blemished priests, cleaned and prepared wood for the Altar (cf. m. Mid. 2:5; also see #8, 2:5).

כְּלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל דְּמַע שֶׁל סוּת וּכְלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל דְּמַע שֶׁל = כְּלִי דְּמַע סוּת דְּמַע סְנָה, “(a) dedicated garment([s]) and [a]) dedicated coat(s) of arm (type robe[s]).” These might have been priestly garments.

כְּלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל דְּמַע שֶׁל סוּחַ־שִׁיחַ וּכְלִי־ = כְּלִי דְּמַע סוּחַ־שִׁיחַ וּכְלִי־סְנָה, “(a) dedicated scraper([s]) and [a]) vessel[s]) of the tithe”; “(a) dedicated vessel(s) of Suah (and [a]) vessel[s]) of the tithe”; or “(a) dedicated garment([s]) and [a]) vessel[s]) of the tithe.”

כְּלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל הַמַּעֲשֶׂר וּכְלִי־כֶלִים שֶׁל = כְּלִי דְּמַעֲסָרָה דְּמַע סְנְהוּסְנָה־סְנָה־סְנָה

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, דָּמַע שֶׁל סֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) tithe vessel(s) (and a) dedicated (vessel[s]) of Sannah/Seneh”; “(a) tithe vessel(s) (and [a]) dedicated coat(s) of arm”; or “(a) tithe vessel([s] and [a]) dedicated (tool[s]) for bushes.”

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִיכֵלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) vessel(s) of the tithe of the tithe” — The the Levites had to give to the priest from the tithe they received from the farmers הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה מִן הַסֵּנָה, “an elevated gift for the Lord, a tithe from the tithe” (Num. 18:26). The Targumim render הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה מִן הַסֵּנָה as מַעֲשָׂא מִן מַעֲשָׂא (TO), “the tithe from the tithe,” and הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה מִן הַסֵּנָה, “one out of ten from the tithe” (TN). This tithe is also known as הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “the priestly portion of the tithe” (e.g., m. Bik. 2:5; m. Dem. 4:1; see also #4, 1:10-11).

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִיכֵלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) and/or (a) dedicated (vessel[s]/-tool[s]) of/for Suah/scraping/tree/garments(s)” (11:10).

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִיכֵלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated expensive/overseas vessel([s] and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]/tool[s]) of/for Suah/scraping/tree/garments(s).”

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִיכֵלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) of Evi/Aiah/On (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]/tool[s]) of/for Suah/scraping/tree/garments(s).”

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִיכֵלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) of fire/Ur, (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]/tool[s]) of/for Suah/scraping/tree/garments(s).”

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) and (a) dedicated (vessel[s]/tool[s]) of Suah/scraper/tree/garments(s).”

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) and/or (a) tithe (vessel[s]).”

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated vessel([s] and [a]) tithe (vessel[s]).”

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) of Leah (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]) of Sirah/Sura/chain” (11:14) — The first half of this suggestion somehow resembles the event when Laban searched the tents of Jacob, לֵאָה (Leah), etc., and Jacob’s angry response, “אֵת כָּל כְּלִי בֵּיתִי (of all your household objects), what did you find בֵּיתִי (of all your household objects)?” (Gen. 31:33,37).

הַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה = כְּלִי דָּמַע וְהַסֵּנָה וְהַסֵּנָה, “(a) dedicated delicate vessel(s) (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]) of Sirah/Sura/chain” — Cf. מִכָּל כְּלִי חֲמֻדָּה, “from every precious vessel" (Nahum 2:10); ולכל כלי חמה, "and all precious vessels" (2 Chron. 32:27)

כליובלים של דמע לח וכליובלים של דמע = כלי דמע <ע> לאח דמע סיראוסורא של סיראוסורא, "a dedicated implement(s) for moist (things and [a]) dedicated pot(s)/hook(s)/(tool[s]) for thorns."

כליובלים של דמע לח וכליובלים של המעשר = כליובלי דמע <ע> לאח דמעסירא, "(a) dedica <ted> vessel(s) for liquid (and [a]) tithe (vessel[s])."

כליובלים של דם לח וכליובלים של דמע = כליובלי דם לאח דמע סיראוסורא של סיראוסורא, "(a) vessel(s) for liquid (sacrificial) blood (and [a]) dedicated vessel[s]/tool[s]) of/for pot(s)/coat of arm (type garment[s])/torn/hook/-Sirah/Sura/chain."

כליובלים של דם לח וכליובלים של המעשר = כליובלי דם לאח דמעסירא, "(a) vessel(s) for liquid (sacrificial) blood (and [a]) tithe (vessel[s])."

In the last four suggestions, כלי הלח ... כליובלי resembles the term כלי הלח, "vessels for the liquid," i.e., vessels used for measuring and/or to hold liquid substances. Both types were used in the Temple. E.g.,

כלי הלח מקדשים את הלח (Vessels for liquid sanctify liquid), and measuring vessels for drystuff sanctify the drystuff. אין כלי הלח מקדשין את היבש (Vessels for liquid do not sanctify the drystuff), and measuring vessels for drystuff do not sanctify liquid; m. Zev. 9:7; cf. t. Zev. 9:11).

Samuel said: Although they (i.e. the sages) said, אין כלי הלח מקדשין את היבש (Vessels for liquid do not sanctify the drystuff), these words refer to measuring vessels, אבל מורקות מקדשין (but sprinkling basins do sanctify; b. Zev. 88a).

Rashi explains that כלי הלח means "קערות ומורקות (dishes and sprinkling basins) for (sacrificial) blood, wine, and oil" (b. Zev. 88a; cf. Bertinoro and Tif'eret Israel on the Mishnah). Accordingly, מורקות, כוסות, and מנקיאות, mentioned in Item 12, are various types of כלי לח.

כליובלים של מלאה וכליובלים של סירה = כליובלי דמלאה דמע סיראוסורא, "(a) vessel(s) of elevated gift (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]) of Sirah/-Surah"; "(a) vessel(s) of elevated gift (and [a]) dedicated (tool[s]) for thorns"; or "(a) vessel(s) of elevated gift (and [a]) dedicated pot(s)/hook(s)."

כליובלים של מלאה וכליובלים של המעשר = כליובלי דמלאה דמעסירא, "(a) vessel(s) of elevated gift (and [a]) tithe (vessel[s])." It may refer to vessels used to keep or carry elevated gifts or tithe. This resembles the verse מלאתך is its Targum, מעשרתכון ודמעכון, "your tithes and your dema's" (TN), discussed earlier. Thus, מלאה would be a technical term used in the Scroll in addition to דמע, חרם, מעשר שני, and אצר השבוע. According to these readings, כלי דם לח, כלי דמע לח, and כלי מלח could be Temple vessels, while כלי מעשר, כלי מלאה, and כלי דמע are like כלי דמע, dedicated vessels.

כליובלים של מלח וכליובלים של סירה = כליובלי דמלאה דמע סיראוסורא, "(a) salt vessel(s) (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]) of Sirah/Surah"; "(a) salt vessel(s) (and [a]) dedicated (tool[s]) for thorns”; or “(a) salt vessel(s) (and [a]) dedicated pot(s)/hook(s).”

כלי־כלים של מלח וכלי־כלים של המעשר = כלי־כלי דמלאח דמעסירא, “(a) salt vessel(s) (and [a]) tithe (vessel[s])”; or “(a) vessel(s) of salt of the tithe” — The latter may refer to saltholders used by the sacrifices bought by the exchange money of מעשר שני, “second tithe,” in Jerusalem. The term מעסר שני appears in the Scroll (see #4, 1:10-11). The Torah commands:

וְכָל קָרְבַּן מִנְחָתְךָ בְּמֶלַח תִּמְלֹחַ (And all your meal offerings you shall salt it with salt); and you shall not leave out מֶלַח (salt), the covenant of your God from your meal offering; עַל כָּל קָרְבְּנֶךָ תִּקְרִיב מֶלַח (on all your [animal] offerings you shall offer salt; Lev. 2:13).

It is conceivable that vessels containing salt were used by the sacrifices in the Temple, and such vessels are mentioned here.

כלי־כלים של מלוח וכלי־כלים של דמע של = כלי־כלי דמלאח דמע סיראוסורא, “(a) vessel(s) of mallow (and [a]) dedicated (vessel[s]/tool[s]) of/-for Sirah/Sura/thorns/pot(s)/hook(s).”

כלי־כלים של מלוח וכלי־כלים של המעשר = כלי־כלי דמלאח דמעסירא, “(a) vessel(s) of mallow (and [a]) tithe (vessel[s]).”

The following two sets of readings for the three phrases in question, although possible, are highly improbable. In the second set a single ‘ayin would serve two words (i.e., דמע and עסרא).

(העסרה =) כלי דמ עסרה דמ עסנה, “ten vessels for (sacrificial) blood, ten (vessels) for (sacrificial) blood” (11:4).

כלי דמע או דמ עסרה, “ten vessels of dema^c and/or (sacrificial) blood” (11:10).

כלי דמ לאח דמ עסורא (= עסרה), “ten vessels for liquid (sacrificial) blood (and) for (sacrificial) blood” (11:14).

כלי דמע <ע>סרה דמע <ע>סנה (= עסרה), “ten dema^c vessels dema^c (vessels)” (11:4).

כלי דמע או דמע <ע>סרה, “ten dema^c vessels and/or dema^c vessels” (11:10).

כלי דמ <ע>לאח דמע <ע>סורא (= עסרה), “ten for liquid dema^c vessels (and) dema^c (vessels)” (11:14).

The second set is somewhat similar to the suggestions of Wilmot and Wise. However, one would expect the masculine עסר, rather than עסרה (fem.). “ten,” since כלי, דמ, and דמע are masculine nouns. In addition, many of these readings would contain dittographs.

It is unlikely that any of the dema^c objects listed in the Scroll were כלי חרש, earthenware, to store or carry heave offerings or tithes to the priests or Levites. Such vessels would be neither consecrated nor valuable. In addition, ritually defiled earthen vessels cannot be purified, they must be broken, as the Torah commands, and the Sifra further explains:

וְכֵל כְּלִי חֶרֶשׁ (And any earthen vessel) which any of them (i.e., certain dead creatures) falls אֶל תּוֹכוֹ (into its interior), כָּל אֲשֶׁר בְּתוֹכוֹ (everything in it) shall become impure, וְאַתָּה תִּשְׁבְּרוּ (and you shall break it; Lev. 11:33).

וְכֵל כְּלִי חֶרֶשׁ (And earthen vessel) that a men having discharge touches יִשְׁבֵּר (shall be broken); וְכֵל כְּלִי עֵץ (and every wooden vessel) shall be rinsed בְּמֵיִם (in the waters; Lev. 15:12).

Why it is said, "וְאַתָּה תִּשְׁבְּרוּ (and that you shall break it)"? It teaches that that (earthen vessel) has no purification only שְׁבִירָתוֹ ([by] breaking it [will be purified]; Sifra 8:13 on Lev. 11:33; cf. Rashi on this verse).

Therefore, it is improbable that one would hide earthen vessels (some in grave sites) and list them on an expensive material, such as copper, unless the earthen vessels contained documents or scrolls.

According to the alternate readings כְּלִי דְּמֵלָאָה = כְּלִי דְּמֵלָאָה, "mele'ah vessels," may refer to dedicated vessels in which the בכורים, "first fruit" offerings were presented.¹⁷³ Likewise, כְּלִי דְּמַעְסִיָּא = כְּלִי דְּמַעְסִיָּא, "ma'asar or tithe vessels," may refer to vessels in which tithes were presented to the Levites or priests.¹⁷⁴ Since מְלָאָה, תְּרוּמָה, מַעְשֶׂר, and דְּמַע are synonyms, כְּלִי דְּמַע, כְּלִי דְּמֵלָאָה, and כְּלִי דְּמַעְסִיָּא, are various types of dedicated objects.

Finally, one can conclude that כְּלִי דְּמַע are not "vessels containing aromatic species, tithes, or heave offerings." Rather they are "dedicated objects" or ceremonial Temple vessels, most of them made of precious metals, even, if some of them were used to carry tithes or heave offerings.¹⁷⁵

CONCLUSION

The term dema' vessel is unknown from any other sources. Since the Copper Scroll lists various types of dema' vessels, and some of them are known to have been used in the Tabernacle and in the Temple, it is best rendered as "dedicated objects/vessels/tools" for Temple use. For those dema' objects that are unknown, numerous possible explanations are offered. Although many of these suggestions can be challenged, until further evidence becomes 173 Cf. וְהַעֲשִׂירִים מְבִיאִים בְּכֹרֵיהֶם בְּקִלְתוֹת שֶׁל כֶּסֶף וְשֶׁל זָהָב, "The rich people bring their firstfruit (to the Temple) in silver and gold baskets" (m. Bik. 3:8).

174 During the Second Temple era the farmers brought their bikkurim, terumah, and ma'aser to the Temple storehouse, and handed them over to the priest and/or Levites (cf. Mal. 3:10; Neh. 10:37-40, also 13:5).

175 Some of these terms have more than one meaning, while often the same meaning is expressed with more than one terms. מְלָאָה, "full, ripe," חֶלֶב, "fat, good," ראשית, "firstling," בְּכֹרִים, "first ripened fruits," all connote the best selected for dedication, and apparently all had similar semantic development. On the other hand, many cultic terms have opposite meanings; e.g., חָרָם, set apart for priestly or Temple usage vs. doomed to destruction; קֹדֶשׁ, holy vs. abomination (cf. קֹדֶשׁ ... קְדֻשָּׁה, "male cult prostitute ... female cult prostitute," e.g., Deut 23:18).

available, these may be the best solutions. Also, some vessels that are not specified as dema^c vessels in the Scroll, may also be dema^c vessels. In addition, some of the vessels might have been used to keep in them documents.

Based on the numerous suggestions discussed, the various dema^c (and non-dema^c) objects mentioned in the Scroll can be grouped as follows.

- (1) Dedicated vessels used in the Temple.
- (2) Dedicated garments used by the priests.
- (3) Dedicated tools used in the Wood Chamber of the Temple.
- (4) Dedicated objects donated by certain individuals or families.
- (5) Dedicated objects named after the place of their origin, or donated by the natives of those places.

To name an object based on its origin is quite common in various languages. For example, “damask,” is a silk fabric named after the city of Damascus; “Damascus blade” is a sword or blade originally made in Damascus.

Finally, the last two groups resemble somewhat the suggestions offered by Lurie and Pixner that the Greek letters in the Scroll may indicate the sources of the deposits, as it is discussed in Appendix C.

APPENDIX E

THE PHRASE בתכן\כתבן אצלמון

INTRODUCTION

The highly problematic two-word phrase בתכן\כתבן אצלמון appears five times in the Scroll, and it always follows the term כלי דמע in some form (see Appendix D). The chart below shows where this phrase occurs.

5:7	וכתבן \ ובתכן	אצלמ	כאלין של דמע	#22
11:1	כתבן \ בתכן	אצלמ	בכלי דמע	#50
11:4	ותבן \ ותכן	אצלמ	סות דמע	#51
11:11	וכתבן \ ובתכן	אצלן	או דמע	#54
11:14	בתכן \ בתכן	אצלן	לאח דמע	#55

The first word appears in three forms; in addition, the letters bet and kaf are indistinguishable. Thus, this word can be read in ten different ways: בתכן, בתכן, וכתכן, וכתכן, ובתכן, ובתכן, כתכן, כתכן, ותכן, and ותכן (11:4). There are three possible solutions for the last two readings: (a) the spelling is correct. (b) The waw is an interchange of bet, i.e., ותכן = בתכן or ותכן = בתכן. (c) The letter bet or kaf is missing due to a scribal error, i.e., ו>כ<תכן, ו>ב<תכן, or ו>כ<תכן.

The second word appears three different ways: אצלמ (5:7); אצלן (11:14); and וצלמ or וצלמ, where the waw/yod is either a scribal error for an alef, or it is a cursive alef; i.e., אצלמ (11:1, 11:4). Since mem and nun interchange, the second word is practically the same in all five cases.

READINGS OF THE SCHOLARS

The scholars read and interpret the phrase in question as follows. ALLEGRO^{PF}: בתכן וצלמ, "in a measure and shape (?)" (11:1), cf. 11:4, 11:11; found always where כלי דמע are mentioned. It may be a measuring instrument. The next one is rendered as, "and a measure and a shape (?)" (i.e., ותכן וצלמ; 11:4). אצלן, "parsley" (11:11); בן אצלן, "extract of parsley" (11:15); "a kind of parsley" (compared to a Greek plant name) hung on tombs, mostly planted in garden borders. ALLEGRO^{PF} (after the opening of the second roll): בת בן אצלמון, "a 'bath' of bn 'šlm," (5:7); cf. 11:11 and 11:15, which should read בת בן אצלן, "a bath of ben ešlan," both with nun at the end. ALLEGRO^{PF}: אצלן (תוכן =) תכן, "within, nearby, close by." ALLEGRO: ובתכן-אצלמון, "(and) in(side) them, figured coins"; for ובתכן read בתכן or ובתכן. "Nearby" for אצלמון, does not suit the context, rather it is a collective singular with a prosthetic ʾalef of צלם, “coins with images stamped on them,” cf. Syriac דְּסִימָא, “silver coins.” The phrase בתכן אצלמון is “always after the dema^c vessels which are otherwise presumably empty.” ALLEGRO^{ev}: “arranged side by side (?).”¹ MILIK: תכּוֹן־בתכן אצלמון, “(And) just nearby”; always at the beginning of the item. תכן means “measure, distance”; אצל is אצל, “near,” plus the plural possessive suffix. תכּוֹן אצלמון means “à de distance, tout près (du site précédent).” Cf. תכן לבנים, “number of bricks” (Exod. 5:18), and the Qumranite usage of תכן.² LURIE: אצלמון (from צלם, “image”) means “coins that carry the figure of the Roman Caesar.” Cf. coins having the figure of the Caesar (b. Bekh. 50a). The impure צלם coins were hidden in impure vessels. בתכן אצלמון is rendered as, “in them (i.e., in the dema^c vessels) are coins (carrying the figure of the Caesar).”³ LEHMANN: אצלם is like אסימון, “defaced coins”; cf. Lurie. Lehmann’s explanation is the opposite of Allegro’s suggestion. He also disagrees with Milik’s translation.⁴ SHARVIT connects בתכן אצלמון to the previous items as does Allegro. He questions the interpretations of Milik, Allegro, and Lurie.⁵ SARFATI: כְּתָבָן אצלמון, “their dockets with them.” Sarfati amends ותכן אצלן (11:4) to ו>כ-תכן אצלן. Sarfati originally translated בתכן אצלמון as “the measure of the contents in the vessels are listed with them,” but he later rejected it.⁶ QIMRON supports Sarfati’s reading.⁷ PIXNER follows Milik. He also discusses the suggestions of Allegro and Sarfati.⁸ WILMOT agrees with Sarfati.⁹ WOLTERS (follows Sarfati): “their document is beside them.”¹⁰ GARCIA MARTINEZ (follows Milik): “Close by”; “Very near there”; and “Very close by.”¹¹ BEYER: בתכן אצלמון, “their measures with their enclosed list of quantities.”¹² VERMES (follows Milik): “Quite close to them”; and “Next to them.”¹³ WISE (follows Sarfati and Wilmot): “along with their inventory list” (5:9), “and their inventory list is next to them.”¹⁴ MCCARTER:

וּכְתָבָן אֶצְלָם "and their register (writing) alongside them," or perhaps, "as regards them, with respect to them." Thus, these vessels were accompanied with a written record, identifying their content, origin, ownerships, purpose, destination, etc. McCarter also discusses the suggestions of Milik, Allegro, and Lurie.¹⁵ GOLB (spells as Sarfati): כְּתָבָן is a defective spelling for כְּתָבִין (pl. of כְּתָב), "documents, scrolls." The five cases of כְּתָבָן אֶצְלָם (= כְּתָבִים אֶצְלָם), "there are documents with them," report that in addition to the undisclosed number of various dema' vessels there are also an undisclosed number of hidden documents. Golb comments that Sarfati's reading, כְּתָבָן אֶצְלָם, "their notes are with them," refers to the undisclosed number of various dema' vessels, perhaps listing their number or origin. According to Golb, the Dead Sea Scrolls originate from Jerusalem, and comprises all groups of Judaism, not only Essenes. The Scroll refers to eight locations where documents or books were hidden; five times כְּתָבָן אֶצְלָם, twice (סֵפֶר־יָן), "book(s), document(s)," and the detailed copy of the Scroll mentioned in the last item. These documents were hidden in various places, just like the Dead Sea Scrolls in the Qumran caves. For Golb the Copper Scroll and the reading of כְּתָבִין substantiate his conviction that there is no Qumran-Essenes connection.¹⁶

POSSIBLE SOLUTIONS

As noted above, Milik, followed by Pixner, Garcia Martinez, and Vermes, place the phrase in question at the beginning of their respected items. However, the other scholars (correctly) connect כְּתָבָן אֶצְלָם with the end of the previous item. This can be justified because:

- (1) כְּלִי דָמַע is always preceded by כְּתָבָן אֶצְלָם.
- (2) אֶצְלָם, and possible כְּתָבָן אֶצְלָם have plural possessive suffixes, thus referring to כְּלִי דָמַע, which is plural in most, if not all, cases.
- (3) In these five items no numbers for the dema' vessels are given.
- (4) כְּתָבָן אֶצְלָם must refer to information about כְּלִי דָמַע (such as content, amount, size, origin), thus they must end their respected items.¹⁷

Both words are quite difficult to read, vocalize, and interpret. Also, often the prepositions bet-kaf-lamed-mem interchange, and so waw and bet.

וּבְתָכָן or בְּתָכָן, and וּבְתָכָן or בְּתָכָן, "(and) with a/the number/measurement"; כְּתָכָן or בְּתָכָן, and וּכְתָכָן or כְּתָכָן, "(and) as a/the number/measurement";

ment”;¹⁸ תָּכֵן could mean בְּתָכֵן, “and/with a number/measurement” — תָּכֵן (masc.), “number, measurement” (cf. Milik), is practically the same as מִתְכִּנֶּת (fem.), “measurement, proportion” (Ezek. 28:12, 43:10), and מִתְכִּנֶּת (fem.), “measurement, proportion” (e.g., Exod. 5:8; 2 Chron. 24:13). These are derived from the root תָּכֵן (BH), “to measure, regulate.”¹⁹ תוֹכֵן occurs twice in the Masoretic Text (the first one is mentioned by Milik).

And now go (pl.) to work, וְתָכֵן (and straw) will not be given to you (pl.), וְתָכֵן לְבָנִים תִּתְּנוּ (and you [pl.] shall deliver the quota of bricks; Exod. 5:18).

The ephah and the bath יהיה תָּכֵן אֶחָד (shall be the same measure), the bath shall contain a tenth of a homer, and the ephah a tenth of a homer; according the homer shall be מִתְכִּנֶּתוֹ (its measure; Ezek. 45:11).

כִּיָּא כּוֹל קִיִּצִי אֶל יָבוֹאוּ לְתִכְנֵם, e.g., בְּתִכְנֵם, “since all of God’s end-times will come according to their fixed order as He decreed” (1QpHab 6:12-13);²⁰ מִשְׁקָל לְתִכְוֵן (= לְתוֹכֵן), “weight of measure” (4Q299 8:2); בְּמִדָּה רוּחָם מִלֵּיהֶם בְּמִשְׁקָל תוֹכֵן, “their spirit by measure, their words by weight of measure” (Q434 fl ii:10). Likewise, Kallir says, תוֹכֵן מִצְוֹת מַעֲשֵׂיהֶם, “number of their positive commandments.”²¹

וּבְתוֹכָם = וּבְתָכֵן, and בְּתוֹכָם = בְּתָכֵן, “(and) in/with among them (masc.)”; וּבְתוֹכָם = וּבְתָכֵן, “(and) as/like their (masc.) midst (there are)”; וּבְתוֹכָם = וּבְתָכֵן, “and/with among them (masc.)” — תָּכֵן is the substantive תוֹךְ־תָּוֶךְ (BH, MH), “among, midst,” plus the plural masculine possessive suffix suffix תָּ-ם (cf. Allegro, Lurie).²² E.g.,

(If) one finds כְּלִי (a vessel) and upon it is written קָרְבֵּן (offering) — Rabbi Judah says, “If it is made of clay, שְׁבִתוֹכוֹ קָרְבֵּן (it is

18 The unusual forms, בְּתוֹכֵן, בְּתוֹכֵן, בְּתוֹכֵן, and בְּתוֹכֵן, might have been existed in ancient Hebrew; cf. וְתָכֵן (MT) and לְתִכְנֵם (DDS), both mentioned later.

19 תָּכֵן (may be related to תָּקַן, “to become straight,” e.g., Eccl. 1:15; Dan. 4:33, BA; kaf-qof interchange), could be a secondary formation of the root כָּוֵן, “to be firm,” like תָּרַם, “to remove ashes from the altar, to separate priestly share,” is from the root רוּם, “to lift.” תָּכֵן has Qal (e.g., Prov. 24:12), Nif'al (e.g., 1 Sam. 2:3), Pi'el (e.g., Ps. 75:4), and Pu'al (2 Kgs 12:12) verbal formations. 22 Cf. בְּתוֹכָהּ, “in its (fem.) midst” (e.g., Gen. 41:48); מִתּוֹךְ הָאֹהֶל, “from the midst of the Tent” (Exod. 33:11); “and David’s Throne לְתוֹכָהּ־בְּתוֹכָהּ תָּכִין (soon You shall establish in it [i.e., in Jerusalem]),” in the Eighteen Benedictions (see A.L. Gordon, “Iyyun Tefillah,” Siddur 'Ošar haTefillot [1915], 170b). In addition, In Biblical Hebrew and Biblical Aramaic the suffix mem usually indicates masculinity, while nun femininity. Yet Mishnaic Hebrew uses both indiscriminately for masculine forms.

non-consecrated but its content is an offering), if it is made of metal, הוא קָרְבָּן וּמָה שֶׁבְּתוֹכוֹ חוּלִין (it is an offering but its content is non-consecrated).” (The sages) said to (Rabbi Judah), “It is unusual for people to gather non-consecrated (food) into קָרְבָּן (an offering [vessel])” (m. Ma’as. Sh. 4:10).

(If) one found כְּלִי חֶרֶס (a clay vessel) and upon it is written קָרְבָּן (offering) — הוא קָרְבָּן וּמָה שֶׁבְּתוֹכוֹ קָרְבָּן (it is an offering and its content is an offering),” these are the words of Rabbi Meir. But the sages say, “It is unusual for a man to sanctify כְּלִי חֶרֶס (a clay vessel).” (If) one found כְּלִי מִתְכוֹת (a metal vessel) and upon it is written קָרְבָּן (offering) — הוא קָרְבָּן וּמָה שֶׁבְּתוֹכוֹ קָרְבָּן (it is an offering and its content is an offering). If it was empty, it is prohibited to use it unless one is certain that it was sanctified (or of Temple) but has been redeemed (t. Ma’as. Sh. 5:2).

כְּלִי חֶרֶס/מִתְכוֹת ... וּמָה שֶׁבְּתוֹכוֹ, “a clay/metal vessel ... and its content,” resembles the phrase כְּלִי דִמְעָה ... בְּתוֹכָן אֲצִלְמוֹן. Also, cf. וַיִּפְעֲמָנִי זָהָב בְּתוֹכָם, “and gold bells are among them” (Exod. 28:33).

וּתְבִין or בְּתִבֵּן, and וּבְתִבֵּן or וּבְתִבֵּן, “(and) in/with (the) straw”; וּתְבִין, “and/with straw” — תִּבֵּן (fem., BH, MH) is “straw”; see the above cited verse וּתְבִין לֹא יִתֵּן לָכֶם, “and straw will not be given to you” (Exod. 5:18).

וּכְתָבָם = וּכְ-תִבֵּן and וּכְתָבָן, כְּתָבָם = כְּתָבָן, “(and) their (masc.) document(s)/note(s)” (cf. Sarfati) — כְּתָבָן (masc., BH, BA, MH, TA), “document, note, record, letter,” plus the plural possessive suffix nun (cf. Sarfati), must refer to the undisclosed number of the dema‘ vessels, they may list their type, number, or origin. E.g., “These (priests) sought כְּתָבָם הַמְתִּיחִישִׁים (their genealogical records), but they could not be found” (Ezra 2:62; Neh. 7:64).

וּכְתָבִים = וּכְ-תִבֵּין and וּכְתָבִין, כְּתָבִים = כְּתָבִין, “(and) documents/notes” (cf. Golb) — כְּתָבִים is the plural of כְּתָבָן (masc.; cf. Golb). E.g., “A fable לְכָתְבִין שֶׁל מֶלֶךְ (of the king’s letters) that entered a district, וְכָל מְדִינָה וּמְדִינָה (and every district) that the כְּתָבִין (letters) arrived ...” (Lev. Rabbah 11:7); וְכָל כְּתָבִי הַקּוֹדֵשׁ מִצִּילִין אוֹתָן מִפְּנֵי הַדִּלְקָה, “One must save (on Sabbath day) all Holy Scriptures from the fire” (m. Shab. 16:1).

וּכְתוּבִין = וּכְ-תִבֵּן and וּכְתוּבִין, כְּתוּבִים = כְּתוּבִין, “(and) writings/Scripture” — כְּתוּבִים (masc.) is the plural of כְּתוּבָן, “it is written” (Qal Pa’ul pass. part. masc. sg., used as an adj. and noun), often means verse, Scripture. E.g., הַכּוֹתֵב תּוֹרָה נְבִיאִים וּכְתוּבִים, “He who writes Torah, Prophets, and Writings” (b. Ket. 50a); הַכְּתוּב אוֹמֵר, “the verse says,” (m. Pe’ah 8:9, etc.); שְ�נֵי כְתוּבִין, “two verses” (Sifra Lev. Petiḥa’ 1:2). Also, הִנֵּם כְּתוּבִים עַל סֵפֶר דְּבָרֵי הַיָּמִים לְמַלְכֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל, “behold, they are written in the Book of Chronicles of the Kings of Israel” (1 Kgs 14:19).

אֶצְלָם, “with/by/near/among them” — The preposition אֶצְלָם (BH, MH), “with, by, near, next, among,” plus the plural possessive suffix -ם-; e.g.,

עֲשָׂרָה כְּדֵי שֶׁמֶן מְלֵאִים יֵשׁ לִי אֶצְלָךְ, “I have ten pitchers filled with oil in your possession” (b. Ket. 108b).²³ Also,

And our enemies said, “They will not know (us), and they will not see (us), before we come אֶל תוֹכֶם (into their midst) and kill them, and we will stop the work.” And it came to pass, when Jews came who lived אֶצְלָם (near them [i.e., the enemy]), they said (or warned) to us ten times ... (Neh. 4:5-6).

In these verses אֶל תוֹכֶם = בְּתוֹכֶם and אֶצְלָם have parallel meanings.²⁴ Yet, the two words in the phrase בִּתְכֵן אֶצְלָמֶן cannot be synonyms.

אֶצְלָם = צֶלֶם, “image, form,” with a prosthetic ’alef — צֶלֶם (masc., pl. צֶלָמִים; BH, MH) means “form, image”; e.g., “When Adam had lived one hundred thirty years, בְּדַמּוֹתוֹ כְּצֶלְמוֹ (and he begot [a son] in his likeness, like his image)” (Gen. 5:3).²⁵

אֶצְלָמֶן = אֶלְעֵל צֶלֶם, “at/to/upon the image/form” — אֶצְלָם prefixed with an ’alef, a contraction of אֶל or עַל, “at/to/upon,” as often in Mishnaic Hebrew and in Aramaic; cf. אֶרְוַח or אֶרוּחַ = אֶלְעֵל רֹוח, “upon the width-/interval/space,” or אֶרְוַח or אֶרוּחַ = אֶלְעֵל רוּחַ, “to/at/by/on/along the side-/edge/corner” (see #1, 1:3. alt.).

אֶצְלָם may be a defective and contracted form of אֵי צֶלֶם, “(coin) without figure” or “faceless coin.” Cf. אֵי אֶפְשָׁר, “impossible” (m. Ket. 12:3); אֵי אֶפְשִׁי, “I do not want” (m. Ket. 6:2); אֵי אַתָּה, “you (sg.) not” (m. ’Avot 2:1); אֵי אַתָּם, “you (pl.) not” (m. Sot. 8:1); אֵי שֶׁכֶּר, “not strong drink” (qeri, Prov. 31:4), and אֵי כְבוֹד or אֵיכְבוֹד, Ichabod or Inglorious, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eli the Highpriest (1 Sam. 4:21 and 14:3, respectively);²⁶ אֵיזָבֵל, Jezebel (e.g., 1 Kgs 16:31), which may be interpreted as אֵי זָבֵל, “(the) non-exalted.”²⁷ אֵי is a short form of אֵין, the construct state of אֵין, “not, nothing”; cf. אֵי נָקִי, “(the) non-innocent” (Job 22:30), vs. אֵין נָקִי, “no one exempt” (1 Kgs 15:22).²⁸ Accordingly, אֶצְלָם = אֵי צֶלֶם may be parallel

23 The terms כְּדֵי (2:11, etc.) and מְלֵאִים (4:8) occur in the Scroll.

24 אֶל may mean ב- in BH; cf. אֶל הַכֶּלִּין = בְּהַכֶּלִּים = בְּכֶלִּים, see #33, 8:3.

25 See also D.J.A. Clines, “The Etymology of Hebrew SELEM,” JNSL 3 (1974), 19-25.

26 See Rashi and Mešudat Zion on 1 Sam. 4:21; Prov. 31:4; Job 22:30; Radak on 1 Sam. 4:21. Minḥat Šay notes (on 1 Sam. 14:3) that most books have אֵיכְבוֹד (cf. Koren Bible).

27 Cf. BDB, 33a.

28 The cognates of אֵיִן־אֵין are: אֵן in Moabite, וְבֵר אֵן בְּקֶרֶב הָקֵר (= וְבֵר אֵין בְּקֶרֶב הָקֵר in Heb.), “and there is no well in the midst of the city” (KAI 1, 33 [#181:24]); אֵי in Phoenician, “because there is none” (KAI 1, 3 [#14:5]; aianu, “it was not,” in Akkadian; iy, “where is/are?” or perhaps “there is none,” in Ugaritic; ’ayna, “where is/are?” in Arabic. Gordon connects אֵיה, “where is/are?” with אֵין, “there is/are none.” Also, אֵיזָבֵל with iy zbl (“No Prince,” 49:IV:29,40), and the personal names iyb’l (= אֵי־בַעַל, “No Baal,” 1107:2), iytlm (= אֵי־תֵלֶם, “No Furrow,” 1064:21, etc.), iyṛ (= אֵי־שׁוֹר, “No Bull,” 328:17, etc.); these names may refer to perished deities (UT, 356a [#143]; 393a [#816]; 498a [#2556]; 506a [#2738]; see also ESh^{dic} 1, 75b).

to אֶסִּמוֹן־אֶסִּמוֹן (MH), "defaced coin," of Greek origin, ἄσημος, ἄσημον, "uncoined metal, bullion"²⁹ (e.g., m. 'Ed. 3:2; t. Ma'as. Sh. 1:4). This resembles Lehmann's suggestion but in a complete different manner.

אֶצְלָמֹן may be a variant of אֶסְלָם (sade-samekh interchange), סֶלֶם - סוֹלֵם, "ladder, step" with a prosthetic 'alef. סֶלֶם occurs in the Masoretic Text (only once, Gen. 28:12; Trg. סוֹלָמָא, in Mishnaic Hebrew (e.g., B.B. 3:6), in Phoenician, המִּפְקָד (= המִּפְקָדָה) והסלמות אשר למפקד ... צלמם בסלמות המפקד (הנה והסלמות אשר למפקד ... statuses on the steps of the guard-post" (CIS 88:4-5), where both אֶצְלָם and סֶלֶם occur.³⁰

Based on the above discussion, the following possible readings, vocalizations, and translations of the phrase in question are offered.

בְּתִכְוִיפְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן or בְּתִכְוִיפְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן, "(and) with/as a/the number/measurement (concerned, it is) near/among them (masc.);"; וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן, "and a/the number/measurement near/among them" — These refer to the masculine דְּמַעַ, i.e., a list of the number or weight of the vessels is near or among the vessels. Cf. Item 12 where the number of the various dema' vessels are listed (cf. Milik's note).

בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "(and) with a number (of) faceless (coins)"; בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן, "(and) as/regarding their content (there are) faceless (coins)"; וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָם = וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן, "and/with a number (of) faceless (coins)" — Accordingly, the dema' vessels contain an undisclosed number of faceless coins.

בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן, "(and) in/with straw near/among them (masc.);"; וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן, "and/with straw near/among them" — The dema' vessels are protected by straw.

בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "(and) in (the) straw (is) a form"; וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָם = וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן — This would be in addition to the dema' vessels.

בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "(and) in (the) straw (there is/are) (a) faceless (coin[s])"; וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָם = וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן — This would be in addition to the dedicated vessels.

בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "(and) with straw upon a form"; וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "and straw upon a form" — This would be in addition to the dedicated vessels.

בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "(and) in them (are) faceless coins"; בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "(and) as their content (there are) faceless coins"; וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָם = וְתִכְוִי אֶצְלָמֹן, "and they contain faceless coins" — The dema' vessels contain faceless coins.

בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם = בְּתִכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיכְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִיבְתִּכְוִי אֶצְלָם, "(and) among them (there is) a form”; $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “(and) as/regarding their content, (there is) a form”; $\text{וְתִכְּנוּיָכֶם אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{וְתִכְּנוּיָכֶם אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “and their content (is) a form” — Perhaps the form was used to produce dema^c vessels.

$\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “(and) among them (there is) a ladder”; $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “(and) as/regarding their content, (there is) a ladder”; $\text{וְתִכְּנוּיָכֶם אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{וְתִכְּנוּיָכֶם אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “and they contain a ladder” — There is a ladder among the dema^c vessels.

$\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “(and) their document(s) is/are near/with them” (cf. Sarfati) — The documents regarding the dema^c vessels are hidden with the vessels.

$\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “(and) documents are near/with them” (cf. Golb) — There are documents with the dema^c vessels.

$\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “(and) writings/-Scriptures are near/with them (masc.),” i.e., the dema^c vessels.

The phrase $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ “(there are) dema^c vessels and documents in/on/among the vessels” (8:3), supports the last three suggestions.³¹

Finally, there are many similarities between the five cases of $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ and the phrase $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$.

- (1) In these cases no number of dema^c vessels are given.
- (2) $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ precede the phrases $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, as well as the phrase $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “there are dema^c vessels and documents/books among/upon the vessels” (8:3).
- (3) $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, and $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ are synonyms.
- (4) $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “among/near them,” i.e., among or near the vessels, practically means the same as $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, “in/at/among the vessels.”
- (5) These documents may refer to Scriptures.
- (6) These documents may describe the amount, type, size, and source of the vessels. This may be the reason why their number are not mentioned.

CONCLUSION

Five items end with the phrase $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$, which must refer to the previously mentioned dema^c vessels. Although some of the suggestions are more logical than others, it is rather difficult to select any from the numerous possible readings, vocalizations, and interpretations offered.

This discussion exemplifies the challenge faced to accurately interpret the Copper Scroll. It indicates that where readings are questionable, a skeptical approach is quite warranted. Uncertainty as to the true meaning of disputed readings will remain, until new relevant material is uncovered in the future.

31 Where $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ = $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$ or $\text{בְּתִכְּנוּיָכֶם וְכֶתֶב אֲצִלְמוֹן}$; see #33, 8:3.
