

the cairn which is in the Pass of the High Priest.”<sup>5</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ: “In the burial-mound of the ford of the High Priest.”<sup>6</sup> BEYER: “In the rubble heap which is located by the ford of the High Priest.” יגר and מגות are Aramaic loanwords.<sup>7</sup> VERMES: In the heap of stones which is at the Ford of the High Priest.”<sup>8</sup> WISE: “At the cairn by the ford of the High Priest.”<sup>9</sup>

The term יגר can be explained as: יגרִיגָר, “(stone) heap, grave site, funeral monument, heathen altar, Yegar/Yeger (as a toponym),” and יגר = יגור, Jagur (a toponym; see #20, 4:13).

מגִיזָה is the construct state of the absolute מגִיזָה. It occurs in the Talmud in the toponym מְגִיזָה קְפוּסְקִיָּא, “Ford of Cappadocia” in Asia Minor.<sup>10</sup> מְגִיזָה is the Targum of the synonyms מַעְבָּר (masc.), מַעְבָּרָה (fem.), and עַבְרָה (fem.), “pass, ford” (from the root עבר, H, A), “to pass/cross.” E.g., the Targum of וַיַּעְבֵּר אֶת מַעְבְּרֵי יַבֶּכָּא is יוֹבְקָא יַת מְגִיזָה (PsJ), “and (Jacob) crossed the Ford of Jabbok” (Gen. 32:23); וּבֵין הַמַּעְבְּרוֹת אֲשֶׁר בִּקֵּשׁ יוֹנָתָן לַעְבֹּר, “and between the passes which Jonathan tried to cross” (1 Sam. 14:4); וּבֵין מְגִיזָה דְּבַעַא דְּבַעַא יוֹנָתָן לַמַּעְבֵּר is וַיַּעְבְּרוּ יוֹבְקָא וְעַבְרָה הָעַבְרָה לַעְבִּיר אֶת בֵּית הַמֶּלֶךְ, “and they crossed the ford to bring over the house(hold) of king (David)” (fem., 2 Sam. 19:19).

מגִיזָה is from the root family of גוז - גוז - גוז, “to cut, pass” (BH, MH, A). The synonyms, מגִיזָה, מַעְבָּר, and מַעְבָּרָה, are formed with locative mems, and they refer to a place where one can cross a river or pass between mountains. The presence of מגות in the Scroll indicates its usage in Proto-Mishnaic Hebrew. Since a number of words derived from this root family appear in the Masoretic Text, מגות may not be an Aramaic loanword.<sup>11</sup>

3 Lurie, 95-95 and nn. 1-2.

4 Pixner, 349 and n. 26.

5 Wolters, 42-45.

6 Garcia Martinez, 462.

7 Beyer, 227-228.

8 Vermes, 376.

9 Wise, 194.

10 E.g., t. Yev. 14:5; t. Shab. 15 (16):8; baraita b. Yev. 25b; the same is mentioned as קְפוּסְקִיָּא without מגִיזָה in t. Yev. 4:5. מְגִיזָה is a variant of מְגִיזָה, e.g., מְגִיזָה קְסִרִי, Mazaga of Caesarea (b. M.Q. 26a). Some of these have been discussed by Milik (240 C-29, 258 C-205, 264 D-16), Allegro (150-51 n. 139), Lurie (94-95 n. 2), and Pixner (349 n. 26). In the Talmudic era a large Jewish settlement existed in Megizah/Mazaga, also known as Caesarea, the capital of Cappadocia (Καππαδόκεια). See S. Krauss, “Cappadocia,” JE 3, 558a-59b; [Eds.,] “קְפוּסְקִיָּא” in OY 9, 204b-05a; L. Roth, “Cappadocia,” EJ 5, 151-152; M. Amit and eds., “קְפוּסְקִיָּא” in EH 29, 970-71; AC 7, 159b-60a, 162; ETG 2, 406-10. אַרְיוֹךְ מֶלֶךְ אֵלְסָר, “Arioch king of Ellasar” (Gen. 14:1), is mentioned in the Genesis Apocryphon as אַרְיוֹךְ מֶלֶךְ כַּפְתּוֹךְ, “Arioch king of Kappatokh,” where כַּפְתּוֹךְ may be for Cappadocia (1QapGen 29B 21:23; see J.A. Fitzmyer and D.J. Harrington, “A Manual of Palestinian Aramaic Text” [1978], 120-21, 344a).

11 Sharvit considers מגות as an Aramaic loanword (“Iyyunim,” 134 and n. 62), and so does Beyer (227).

הַכֹּהֵן הַגָּדוֹל is like the Biblical form הַכֹּהֵן הַגָּדוֹל (e.g., Num. 35:25; Josh. 20:6). Mishnaic Hebrew employs כֹּהֵן גָּדוֹל (e.g., m. Yoma 1:1), i.e., lacking definite articles. Hashmonean coins (135-37 BCE) bear both forms; e.g., יְהוֹנָתָן הַכֹּהֵן הַגָּדוֹל וְחֵבֶר הַיְּהוּדִים, "Johanan (= John Hyrcanus I) the Highpriest and the Assembly of the Jews"; יְהוֹנָתָן הַכֹּהֵן הַגָּדוֹל וְחֵבֶר הַיְּהוּדִים, "Jonathan (= Alexander Yannai) the Highpriest and the Assembly of the Jews"; יְהוּדָה כֹּהֵן גָּדוֹל וְחֵבֶר הַיְּהוּדִים, "Judah (= Judah Aristobulus) (the) Highpriest and the Assembly of the Jews."<sup>12</sup> In the Masoretic Text כֹּהֵן is always spelled defectively, and so in the printed Rabbinic sources.<sup>13</sup>

The use of the preposition, relative, and definite article in the phrase בִּיגְר־בְּתַעֲלַת הַבְּרֵכָה, וּבִיגְר־בִּיגְר־בִּיגְר־שְׂבֻמַּגּוֹת הַכֹּהֵן הַגָּדוֹל בְּמוֹקֵת בְּרִיכְתָּא עֲלִיתָא דִּי, and its Targum, הָעֲלִינָה אֲשֶׁר בְּמִסְלַת שְׂדֵה כּוּבֶס, בְּכִיבֶשׁ חֲקֵל מִשְׁטַח קֶצְרִיא, "by the channel of the upper pool, which is in the highway of the launderer's field" (2 Kgs 18:17).

The adjectives הַגָּדוֹל (masc.) and הַגָּדוֹלָא (fem.) are found eight times in the Scroll (masc., 1:6, 2:12, 4:1 [partly reconstructed], 5:9, 7:1, 10:4; fem., 11:6, 12:8). Likewise, the Scroll has הָעֲלִיִּן (masc., 1:8) and הָעֲלִינָא (fem., 12:4), "the upper." All of these, as well as the noun they modify, are prefixed with the definite article.

הָ[פּוֹרִי] [פּוֹר אַמּוֹת] תִּשַׁע כָּ[כְרִין] ... or הָ[פּוֹרִי] [פּוֹר אַמּוֹת] תִּשַׁע כָּ[כְרִין] ... (7:1-2) [... are bu[r]ied nine [cubits] (deep) [...] k(arsh of [silver])/(unspecified) t[alents],] or "dig nine [cubits] (deep, there are) [...] k(arsh of [silver])/(unspecified) t[alents]" — ALLEGRO: [...] תִּשַׁע כָּ[כְרִין]. It is possible to reconstruct the first lacuna as חֲפּוֹר.<sup>14</sup> MILIK: 22 [...] תִּשַׁע כָּכ. Milik's reading is based on fragments not appearing in his drawing.<sup>15</sup> LURIE: [...] חֲפּוֹר [אַמּוֹת] תִּשַׁע כָּכ. WOLTERS: 22 [...] תִּשַׁע כָּכ (cf. Milik).<sup>17</sup> BEYER: 22 [+40/20] חֲפּוֹר [אַמּוֹת] תִּשַׁע כָּכ (cf. Milik).<sup>18</sup>

The letter before the lacuna in line 7:2 is either a bet or kaf. In Milik's drawing one can detect an additional vertical line that could be the right side of a second kaf. Accordingly, the text can be partially reconstructed as follows. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: [...] תִּשַׁע כָּכ or [...] תִּשַׁע כָּכ; BAKER<sup>dr</sup> and ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: [...] תִּשַׁע כָּכ, 12 See A. Reifenberg, "Ancient Jewish Coins," JPOC, 19 (1939), 74-75; A. Kindler, "Coins and Currency," EJ 5, 699-700, 716-17; also, D. Syon, "The Coins from Gamala. Interim Report," Israel Numismatic Journal 12 (1992/93), 46.

13 Cf. Bendavid 1, 99. Thorion (165) notes that the "i" in שְׂבֻמַּגּוֹת is defectively spelled, while הַכֹּהֵן is a plene spelling.

14 Allegro<sup>Pr</sup>; Allegro, 45, 151 n. 140.

15 Milik, 291.

16 Lurie, 94-95. This reading is based on Lurie's translation, since the transcription of [ תִּשַׁע כָּכ ] has some typographical errors.

17 Wolters, 44.

18 Beyer, 227.

[... כַּכְרִין], [... כַּכְרִין], “si[lver kk ...],” or [... כַּכְרִין], “si[lver talents ...],” etc. See Appendix A.

The suggested restorations are similar to the following phrases in the Scroll: 22 חֲפֻרֵּי אַמּוֹת שֶׁבַע כֹּכ, “are buried seven cubits (deep) 22 s(ilver) k(arsh),” or “dig seven cubits (deep, there are) 22 s(ilver) k(arsh)” (7:12-13); 7 חֲפֻרֵּי אַמּוֹת שְׁלוֹשׁ כֹּכ, “are buried three cubits (deep) 7 s(ilver) k(arsh),” or “dig three cubits (deep, there are) 7 s(ilver) k(arsh)” (8:9); 23 חֲפֻרֵּי אַמּוֹת שְׁלוֹשׁ כֶּסֶף כֹּכ, “are buried three cubits (deep) 23 s(ilver) k(arsh),” or “dig three cubits (deep, there are) 23 s(ilver) k(arsh)” (5:10-11); TP 40 חֲפֻרֵּי אַמּוֹת שֶׁשׁ עָסָרָה כֶּסֶף כֹּכ, “are buried sixteen cubits (deep) 40 s(ilver) k(arsh). (Code:) TP,” or “dig sixteen cubits (deep, there are) 40 s(ilver) k(arsh). (Code:) TP” (3:6-7); etc. Regarding חֲפֻרֵּי, see #17, 4:7; for אַמּוֹת, #1, 1:2-3; for כֹּכ, Appendix A.

ITEM 29

באמא של [המימ של] 7:3
 האשוח הצפון[ני של ...] 7:4
 בארבע רוחות [מש]ולו 7:5
 משה אמות עשרין ו[אר]בע 7:6
 ככרין ארבע מאות 7:7

7:3 At the [water] canal [of]
 7:4 the north[ern] pool [of ...]
 7:5 with four sid[es, from its e]dge
 7:6 (at) a distance of twenty-[fo]ur cubits,
 7:7 (there are) four hundred (unspecified) talents.

COMMENTARY

Due to a large triangular V-shaped lacuna, more than a third of the text of the first six lines of Column 7 was lost. On the left side of the lacuna, the drawings of BAKER and MILIK have ול above בע. According to the continuous drawings of BAKER, the position of the letters ול corresponds to between lines 4 and 5, and בע to line 6 of Column 8. In the continuous drawings of ALLEGRO ולו is positioned next to line 5, and בע between lines 6 and 7 of Column 8. In addition, there is a longitudinal cut between Columns 7 and 8 where the segments were separated at the time of the opening of the rolls. Thus, the corresponding lines between Columns 7 and 8 may not necessary be correct.<sup>1</sup> According to MILIK, לו is at the end of line 7:4, while for ALLEGRO, ולו is at the end of line 7:5. Yet both agree that בע is the end of line 7:6.

באַמאַבאַמאַ שֶׁל [הַמִּימ שֶׁל] הָאֲשׁוּחַ הָאֲשִׁיחַ הַצִּפּוֹן[נִי שֶׁל ...] בְּאַרְבַּע רוּחֹת (7:3-5)
 מֶשׁ[וּלְוֹ שְׁבַשׁ] וְלוֹ, “In/at/by the [water] canal [of] the north[ern] pool [of ...]
 with four sid[es, from/which is in its e]dge/bo[ttom] — ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>: “In the ‘m’ of the north[ern] pit [...] in four ... [...].” ALLEGRO: [...] שֶׁל באַמאַ שֶׁל [...] הָאֲשׁוּחַ הַצִּפּוֹן[נִי (?)] בְּאַרְבַּע דּוּרִיִּין (?) ... לִסְמֹל [...] וְלוֹ of [...] the north[ern] reservoir [...] in four po[ts] (?) ... to its l[eft] (?)” לִסְמֹלוֹ is like in 10:6. The דּוּרִיִּין must be huge pots, each holding 75 lbs.
 ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>: “In the water conduit of [...] the north[ern] reservoir [...] in four [...].”<sup>2</sup> MILIK: האשיח הצפוני הגדול בארבע רוחות [...] “In the aqueduct of Qe[...] of the north[ern] reservoir [which is lar]ger having four sid[es].” קי is a part of the toponym. The northern reservoir is perhaps larger than the southern one. Alternately, רוחותיו, רוחותו, or רוחותיהם.<sup>3</sup> LURIE: ... בארבע דודין [...] “In the canal of [so and so] to the left of the northern pool [of so and so] in four po[ts] from its left.” Due to the lacuna the name or owner of the canal is missing.<sup>4</sup> PIXNER: ... באמא של קי [...] “Along the water conduit of Qi... at the northern pool, which is bigger and has four sides.”<sup>5</sup> WOLTERS: ... באמא של [...] האשיח הצפוני [...] “In the aqueduct of [...] the northern reservoir on the four sides [...]”<sup>6</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ: “In the channel of Qi[...] in the North cistern [which is lar]ge with four si[des] [...]”<sup>7</sup> BEYER: באמא של מים של האשוח הצפוני העגול בארבע רוחותיו [...] “In the wat[er] channel of the northern reservoir, that is [rounded] in [its] four directions.”<sup>8</sup> VERMES: “In the water conduit of Q[...] [the greater northern reservoir, in the four directions.”<sup>9</sup> WISE: “In the aqueduct of [...] the northe[rm] reservoir [...] having four si[des].”<sup>10</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Regarding the cuts, see “Reflections on the Opening of the Scroll” in the Introduction,

The restoration, באמאבאמא של המים של האשוח האשיח הצפוני של [...] is comparable to הַצֶּפֶן מִן הָאֵשֶׁךְ מִן הָאֵשֶׁךְ מִן הָאֵשֶׁךְ [...] “In/at/by the head of the water canal [that comes/goes to] Secacah to/from the north” (see #21, 5:1-2). “The northern pool” suggests that this site also had another pool (cf. Milik). The name or location of this pool is missing due to the lacuna (cf. Milik, Lurie). Regarding אמה, see #21, 5:1; for אשוח-אשוח, #55, 11:12.

לְאַרְבַּע רוּחוֹת means “in/by/at (the) four sides/directions”; cf. אַרְבַּע רוּחוֹת, “into the four direction of the heavens” (Dan. 11:4); אַרְבַּע רוּחוֹת, “four direction of the heavens” (Dan. 7:2; BA); שְׁמִינָה וְעוֹשֶׂה חֶצֶר עַל פִּי, “four direction of the heavens” (Dan. 7:2; BA); אַרְבַּע רוּחוֹת, “and (the contractor) shall make a courtyard upon the mouth of the (burial) cave ... (he shall open) four (caves) for its (i.e., the courtyard’s) four sides” (m. B.B. 6:8). רוּחַ (pl. רוּחוֹת, BH, MH), “side, direction, wind, spirit, soul,” is a double gender noun;<sup>11</sup> אַרְבַּע, and “The Drawings” in the Discussion.

2 Allegro, 45, 148 n. 107, 151 nn. 140-41; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

3 Milik, 291-92, 231 B-15b, 239 C-14, 242-43 C-58, 244 C-70; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 140 (the incomplete English translation is a typographical error).

4 Lurie, 95 and nn. 1-2. In the translation ארבע דודין is missing. (This item contains at several typographical errors.)

5 Pixner, 349.

6 Wolters, 44-45.

7 Garcia Martinez, 462.

8 Beyer, 227-28.

9 Vermes, 376.

10 Wise, 194.

11 רוּחַ is one of those nouns that forms its plural in Hebrew with רוּחוֹת, i.e., רוּחוֹת, and in “four,” is feminine, and the bet could mean “with,” e.g., בִּרְכַשׁ גָּדוֹל, “with great possessions” (Gen. 15:14); בְּחֵיל קָבֵד מְאֹד, “with a very large entourage” (1 Kgs 10:2). Accordingly, בְּאַרְבַּע רוּחוֹת can be rendered as, “with/-having four sides” (cf. Milik, Pixner), i.e., a four sided pool, rather than being round (contrary to Beyer’s suggestion).

Allegro’s restoration, בְּאַרְבַּע דִּוְדִּין/דִּוְדִּין ... לְסַמָּוּלוֹ, “in four pot[s] ... to its left,” is acceptable. It resembles the phrases שְׁמֵי דְדִינִי/דִינִי מְלֵאִין, “there are two pots full of silver” (see #17, 4:8), and בְּבוֹאֶךָ לְסַמָּוּלוֹ, “as you come/go to its (masc.) left/north” (see #46, 10:6).

If the text is restored as שְׁבִשְׁוֹלֵי = שְׁבִשְׁוֹלֵי = שְׁבִשְׁוֹלֵי (defective), “which is in its (masc.) edge/bottom,” then שְׁבִשְׁוֹלֵי is the last word of this phrase; if it is restored as מְשֻׁלֵּי = מְשֻׁלֵּי = מְשֻׁלֵּי (defective), “from its (masc.) edge/bottom,” then מְשֻׁלֵּי is the first word of the next phrase. Regarding שְׁוֹלִים, see #4, 1:11.

(7:5-6) [מְשֻׁלֵּי/שְׁבִשְׁוֹלֵי] וְלֹא מִשָּׁח אֲמוֹת עֶסְרִין וְאַרְבַּע [שְׁבִשְׁוֹלֵי] (7:5-6) its [ed]ge/[bo]ttom (at) a distance of twenty-[fo]ur/[se]ven cubits” — ALLEGRO<sup>12</sup>: “[...] in measurement ten cubits [...]” (i.e., מִשָּׁח אֲמוֹת עֶסְרִין [...] [...]). ALLEGRO: “... to its [left] (?), a distance of twenty cubits fo[ur] s[its] (?)”; “the upright of the r of ‘sryn falls on the cut.”<sup>12</sup> Allegro does not recognize the waw before the lacuna. MILIK: מִשָּׁח אֲמוֹת עֶסְרִין וְאַרְבַּע, “measure twenty-four cubits”; עֶסְרִין (defective), rather than עֶסְרִין <ו>. LURIE: מִשָּׁח אֲמוֹת עֶסְרִין וְאַרְבַּע, “to its [left] measure twenty-[fo]ur cubits.”<sup>14</sup> WOLTERS: [...] מִשָּׁח אֲמוֹת עֶסְרִין [...] seven [...].<sup>15</sup> The other scholars agree with Milik.<sup>16</sup>

מִשָּׁח represents two roots: מִשָּׁח, “to anoint” (BH, MH, A); and מִשָּׁח, “to measure” (BH, MH, A).<sup>17</sup> מִשָּׁח in the Scroll (7:6, 9:1, 12:12) can mean “measure” or “distance.” The following are possible vocalizations and interpretations for this word.

Aramaic with מִשָּׁח, i.e., מִשָּׁח.

12 Allegro, 45 (there are two typographical errors), 152 nn. 144, 145; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24. Regarding מִשָּׁח, see #11, 2:14. Regarding letters on the cut, see “The Drawings” in the Discussion.

13 Milik, 291.

14 Lurie, 95.

15 Wolters, 44-45. (Apparently מִשָּׁח [שְׁבִשְׁוֹלֵי] is a typographical error for מִשָּׁח [...]; cf. “Analysis,” 250).

16 Pixner, 349; Garcia Martinez, 462; Beyer, 227-28; Vermes, 376; Wise, 194.

17 מִשָּׁח and מִשָּׁח could mean “(priestly) portion,” thus related to Mishnaic Hebrew מִשָּׁח, “to measure.” E.g., וְזֶה מִשָּׁח אֶהְרֵן וּמִשָּׁח בָּנָיו, “this is the portion of Aaron and the portion of his sons” (Lev. 7:35), and לָךְ נָתַתִּים לְמִשָּׁח וּלְבָנָיִךְ, “I have given them to you (Aaron) and your sons as a portion (Num. 18:8); cf. ESh<sup>dic</sup> 4, 1552b; ESh<sup>con</sup> 2, 1335a.

משח is related to the root מתח, “to stretch out, expand, pull” (šin-taw interchange).<sup>18</sup> E.g., וַיִּמְתְּחֵם כְּאַהֲל לְשֶׁבֶת, “and he spread them out as a tent for dwelling” (Isa. 40:22); הַמּוֹתֵחַ זְמוּרָה מֵאֵילָן לְאֵילָן, “he who stretches a vine from one tree to another” (m. Kil. 6:9).

משח is related to the root מִשַּׁח, “to draw, pull, measure” (het-kaf interchange).<sup>19</sup> E.g., וַיִּמְשְׁכוּ וַיַּעֲלוּ אֶת יוֹסֵף מִן הַבּוֹר, “and they drew and they lifted up Joseph from the pit” (Gen. 37:28); מִשְׁוֹךְ מִן הַקֶּרֶן כָּל־פִּי צִפּוֹן אַרְבַּע אַמּוֹת, “a distance from the (altar’s) horn northward four cubits” (m. Tam. 2:5).

מִשַּׁח (Qal, masc. sg. imperative) means “measure!” (Milik, Lurie, etc.). Forms of מִשַּׁח (verbal and nominal) are frequently used in the Aramaic New Jerusalem Text (4Q554 2:20,22, 3:8,17, 4:21, etc.).

מִשָּׁח = מְשׁוּחַ (defective, Qal pass. part. masc. sg., Pa‘ul, also used as an adjective or noun) means “is measured” or “a measure, distance”; cf. חָפֵר = חָפּוּר, “is hidden” (e.g., 3:6). מְשׁוּחַ is like מְתוּחַ (masc.) - מְתוּחָה (fem.), “stretched” (e.g., m. Kel. 21:3), or מְשׁוֹךְ, “measure, distance.”

מִשָּׁח (masc., cf. כִּתְּבָהּ), or מִשַּׁח (cf. דִּבֶּשׁ; see 8:4, #34), is either a loanword or a cognate of the Aramaic מִשָּׁח, “measure, length, distance.” E.g., אֲנָשִׁין דְּמִשָּׁחָן (TO of מְדוּתָא), “men of size” (Num. 13:32); מִשָּׁח עֲתִיר, “rich in measurable goods” (b. B.B. 145b).<sup>20</sup> The feminine מִשָּׁחָה (BH) and מִשָּׁחָה (BH), “measurement, portion,” appears in the word וּמִשָּׁחֹתֵיהֶם or וּמִשָּׁחֹתֵיהֶם, “and their measurements” (see #60, 12:12). In Mishnaic Hebrew מִשַּׁח, “to measure,” מְשִׁיחָה (fem.), “(measuring) rope,” מְשׁוּחַ (masc.), “surveyor” (pl. מְשׁוּחֹת, m. Kel. 14:3), may be Aramaic loanwords.<sup>21</sup>

Regarding עֲסָרִין וְאַרְבַּעֵין[שׁ]בַּע, the drawings differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: ‘ayin, samekh, an almost vertical line, one can detect the bottom part of a final nun, a lacuna of five-six letter spaces, bet of which the bottom line is separated, and ‘ayin. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: ‘ayin, samekh, damaged reš (part of the left top is missing), damaged final nun (only the very bottom can be seen), a lacuna of five-six letter spaces, bet, and ‘ayin. ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: ‘ayin, samekh, a damaged reš (there is a cut where the leg of this reš should be),<sup>22</sup> the top of this reš runs into the next yod, final nun, waw, a lacuna of five-six letter spaces, bet, and ‘ayin. Consequently, the readings differ. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: עֲסָרִין וְאַרְבַּעֵין[שׁ]בַּע; there

18 Cf. Jastrow, 861a; SB, 513b, 520b; ESh<sup>dic</sup> 4, 1552a, 1586b.

19 Jastrow, 853a, 861a; SB, 512b, 513b, 520b; ESh<sup>dic</sup> 4, 1552a, 1586b.

20 See Rashi who is quoting the Targum on Num. 13:32; also, the commentary of Rabbeinu Gershom.

21 Levine says that “the term מִשָּׁחָה (measure, measurement) in Lev. 7:35 (cf. לְמִשָּׁחָה in Num. 18:8) occurs in the Aramaic papyri from Elephantine (Kraeling 4:12; 9:11; 12:28), dated to the fifth century BCE. He adds that according to S. Kaufman, this word is native to Aramaic, despite its occurrence in Akkadian as mišhītu (“Priestly Writers,” IDB, 5, 683-87). Wolters also discusses these term מִשָּׁח (“The Last Treasure,” 422-24).

22 See “The Drawings” in the Discussion.

ITEM 30

|                        |      |
|------------------------|------|
| במערא שאצל המקרא]א[ של | 7:8  |
| בית הקצ חפר אמות שש    | 7:9  |
| כדין של כסף שש         | 7:10 |

- 7:8 In the cave which is near the cool chamb[er] of 7:9 the summer palace, are buried six cubits (deep),
 7:10 six silver pitchers.

COMMENTARY

(7:8-9) במערא ובמערא שאצל המקרא]א[ של בית הקצ (= הקיץ) הקצ והקצ (7:8-9), "In/at/by a/the cave which is near the cool chamb[er] of the summer palace/Beth Hakkoz/House/Family of Hakkoz/Koz/remotest/tallest house/Temple" — ALLEGRO<sup>PT</sup>: "In the cave which opposite (or near) the Sanctua[ry ?] of the House of the End Period (?)" (i.e., של בית הקצ, (במערא שאצל המקדש] של בית הקצ, ALLEGRO: "In the inner chamber which is adjacent to the cool room of the Summer House." קיץ is a contraction of קיץ, "summer."<sup>1</sup> MILIK: במערא שאצלה בקר[ב] לבית הקץ, "In the cave which is nearby, in the vi[ci]nity of Bet ha-Qos." Bet ha-Qos, the residence of Bene ha-Qos (i.e., the clan of Hakkoz), identified as Tell el-Qos.<sup>2</sup> LURIE: במערא קיץ, "In the cave which is near the cool room of Beth Hakkoz." Since מקרה and בית הקיץ, "summer house," are synonyms, the reading must be בית הקוץ, named after the priestly order of בני הקוץ.<sup>3</sup> PIXNER: "In the cave close by, near Beth-Hakos."<sup>4</sup> THORION: בית הקיץ with a question mark; cf. the word play on קיץ, "summer," and קץ, "end," in Amos 8:1.<sup>5</sup> WILMOT: של המקרא]א[ של, "At the burial cave which is next to the cold-chamber of Bet Hakotz."<sup>6</sup> MCCARTER: בית הקץ, "house or estate of the Hakkoz (family)"; this priestly family live in the area of Jericho (cf. Ezra, Neh., and Chron.). בית הקץ may refer to a pagan temple; a Midrash (on Ps. 14) identifies pagan temples as בתי הקוץ, "houses of the thorn."<sup>7</sup> WOLTERS: במערא שאצל המקרא]מ[ול בית הקץ, "In the cave which is

1 Allegro, 45, 152 nn. 146-148; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

2 Milik<sup>E</sup>, 140, 149; Milik, 235 B-21c, 265 D-18, 258, C-204, 291-92.

3 Lurie, 96 and n. 2.

4 Pixner, 349.

5 Thorion, 165 and n. 2.

6 "David J. Wilmot and the Copper Scroll," 20.

next to the fountain opposite the end house.”<sup>8</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ: “In the cavity next to it, in the vicinity of Beth-Chagosh.”<sup>9</sup> BEYER: במערא שאצל, המקורול בית הקץ, “In the cave which is near the circular building of the summer house (the outmost house [?]; the House of the [priest family] haq-Qos [1 Macc. 8:17]?).”<sup>10</sup> VERMES: “In the nearby cave in the proximity of Bet ha-Qos.”<sup>11</sup> WISE: “In the cave that is next to the cold-chamber belonging to the family of Hakkoz.”<sup>12</sup>

Since מַעְרָה, “cave,” also means “burial cave” and “ritual bath” (see #7, 2:3), this item may refer to the burial cave of the priestly watch of Hakkoz.

שָׂאֶצֶל = אֲשֶׁר אֶצֶל, “which is near,” is a compound relative-preposition, like שֶׁתַּחַת, “which in below” (2:1,10, 11:8), and שֶׁנֶּגֶד, “which is in opposite” (2:7). Cf. אֲשֶׁר אֶצֶל לְשֶׁכֶּת הַשָּׂרִים, “which is next to the Chamber of the Officers” (Jer. 35:4); שֶׁבְּשׂוּמְרוֹן שֶׁבְּצֶד שְׁכֶם שָׂאֶצֶל אֱלוֹנֵי מוֹרָה, “which are in Samaria, which are near Sechem, which are beside the Oaks of More” (m. Sot. 7:5; see #57, 12:4). Regarding אֶצֶל, see Appendix E.

In the drawings the end of line 7:8 differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: המקו (the lower part of the qof is missing), a lacuna, followed by ול. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: המק, a letter fragment, a lacuna, followed by ול. ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: המק (most of the bottom of the mem is missing, there is a crack at the lower part of the mem and qof), a letter fragment, a lacuna, followed by של. The fragment before the lacuna in Milik’s and Allegro’s drawings may be part of a bet, dalet, he, het, reš, or taw. The lacuna exceeds a full square letter size, thus, a letter or two may be missing.

The following are possible readings, vocalizations, and interpretations, for the word before the lacuna, for the letters after the lacuna and the first word of the next line, and then for the phrase in question.

מִקְוֵה (defective) — cf. מִמְקָר, “from the source of” (Lev. 12:7). מִקְוֵה means “fountain/well/source” (from the root קוּר, “to dig,” plus a locative mem). E.g., “they have forsaken Me, מִקְוֵה מַיִם חַיִּים (the Fountain of Living Water), to dig out בְּאֵרֹת (wells), broken בְּאֵרֹת (wells) for them, which can not hold water” (Jer. 2:13); “מִקְוֵה (a fountain) shall be opened for the house of David” (Zech. 13:1); מִקְוֵה דְּטִבְרִיָּא (A), “the fountain of Tiberias” (Pesiqta’ deRav Kahana’, Bešallah 89b).<sup>13</sup> Also, “Because gathering of (מִקְוֵה) of malice is sin, and its fountain (מִקְוֵה) gushes forth licentiousness” (Ben Sira 10:13). In the latter מִקְוֵה is parallel to מִקְוֵה, “gathered (water),” which is a

7 “The Copper Scroll Treasure,” 145-46; cf. N. Golb, Who Wrote the Dead Sea Scrolls? (1995), 321.

8 Wolters, 44-45.

9 Garcia Martinez, 462.

10 Beyer, 227-28.

11 Vermes, 376.

12 Wise, 194.

13 Jastrow (747a, 830a) reads מִקְוֵה דְּטִבְרִיָּא, “the hot spring of Tiberias” (noted later).

synonym of מַעְרָה, “ritual bath.”

[מַקְרָה] or [הַמַּקְרָה] (cf. Lurie) — מַקְרָה, “cool chamber” (BH, from the root קרר, “be cool,” plus a locative mem),<sup>14</sup> occurs twice in the Masoretic Text: בַּעֲלִית הַמַּקְרָה, “in the upper level cool chamber” (Judg. 2:20), and בְּחִדּוֹר הַמַּקְרָה, “in the room of the cool chamber” (Judg. 3:24).<sup>15</sup> The Targum of הַמַּקְרָה is בֵּית קִיטָא, “the summer palace.” Likewise, Rashi and Rid say that בַּעֲלִית הַמַּקְרָה means בֵּית קִיטָא and בֵּית הַקִּיץ, respectively (Judg. 3:20; cf. Radak, Ralbag, Mešudat David, Mešudat Zion). Also, the Targum of בֵּית יַעַר הַלְבָנוֹן, “the Palace of the Forest of Lebanon,” is בֵּית מְקִירַת מְלָכֵיָא, “the Kings’ Cool Chamber/Palace” (1 Kgs 7:2; 10:17,21);<sup>16</sup> בֵּית הַחֶרֶף עַל בֵּית הַקִּיץ, Trg. בֵּית סִתּוּא עַל בֵּית קִיטָא, “the winter palace with the summer palace” (Amos 3:15; see Radak; cf. Jer. 36:22). In one of his Old Aramaic inscriptions Bar-Rakub son of Panamu II (eight cent. BCE) says, לָהֶם פֶּהָא = לָהֶם וְהוּא בֵּית שְׁתּוּא לָהֶם וְהוּא בֵּית קִיטָא (= בֵּית שְׁתּוּא לָהֶם וְהוּא בֵּית קִיטָא in Hebrew), “and it was for them the winter palace and it (i.e., the same) was for them the summer palace.”<sup>17</sup> The Babylonian Jews had בֵּי קִיטָא, “summer synagogue,” and בֵּי סִתּוּא, “winter synagogue” (b. B.B. 3b, BTA; see Rabbenu Gershom, Rashi, and Tosaphot). Accordingly, הַמַּקְרָה - מְקִירַתָא and בֵּית הַקִּיץ - בֵּית קִיטָא are synonyms.

[מַקְרָה] or [הַמַּקְרָה] — מַקְרָה, “beam-work” (BH, masc., from the root קרה, “furnish with beam”), occurs in the verse, “By laziness הַמַּקְרָה (the beam-work) sinks in, and by idleness of the hands leaks הַבֵּית (the house)” (Eccl. 10:18), where מַקְרָה and בֵּית are parallel words.

[מַקְרָה] or [הַמַּקְרָה] — מְקוּרָה means “roofed” construction (MH, Pe‘ulah, adj., from the root קרה, “furnish with beam”). E.g., בֵּית שְׁחָצִיו מְקוּרָה וְחָצִיו, “a house which its half is roofed and its half is not roofed” (baraita, b. ‘Eruv. 93a).

הַמּוֹקֵד — מוֹקֵד (masc., from the root יקד, “to burn,” plus a locative mem) means “hearth” (Ps. 102:4); מוֹקְדֵי עוֹלָם, “everlasting hearths” (Isa. 33:14; Ps. 102:4). It also means “fire-place, hot chamber.” E.g., בֵּית מוֹקֵד, a room in the Temple where fire was constantly maintained (m. Shab. 1:11; m.

14 About 80 per cent of the expected he endings in the Scroll are written with an alef, thus the reading of מַקְרָה may be better than מִקְרָה. Moreover, since the absolute מִקְרָאָה is followed by בֵּית, שָׁל בֵּית, or לְבֵית, it is superior to the construct מְקִירַת (Allegro), although occasionally the construct is used instead of the absolute form. E.g., מִכַּת בְּלִיתִי סֶרָה instead of מִכַּת בְּלִיתִי סֶרָה, “with an unceasing stroke” (Isa. 14:6, see Radak, and Me’iri on Ps. 61:1). These may reflect the archaic feminine forms where the original taw is retained.

15 Allegro notes both verses; Lurie the first verse.

16 See Rashi and Radak on the first verse. The first verse is noted by Allegro.

17 See KAI 1, 40; 2, 232-34 (#216:18-19); F.M. Cross, Jr., and D.N. Freedman, Early Hebrew Orthography (1952), 30-31, 61-64; M. Avi-Yonah, “בֵּית חֶרֶף” in EB 2, 76. Note: פֶּהָא = וְהָא (waw-pe interchange); similarly, in Arabic fa- = wa-, “and, also”; כִּיצָא = כִּיצָא (kaf-qof interchange).

Tam. 1:1; m. Mid. 1:1; MH); מוֹי דְמוֹקֵר דְטַבְרִיָּה, “water of the hot chamber of Tiberias” (Esth. Rabbah Parašah 3:7; JA).<sup>18</sup>

הַמִּקְדָּשׁ [א] or הַמִּקְדָּשׁ [ה] — מוֹקֵדָה (feminine form of מוֹקֵד) means “hearth, fireplace,” as in עַל מוֹקֵדָה עַל הַמִּזְבֵּחַ, “upon the altar’s hearth” (Lev. 6:2).<sup>19</sup>

הַמִּקְדָּשׁ [ש] (cf. Allegro<sup>Pr</sup>) — מִקְדָּשׁ means “sanctuary, Temple” (from the root קדש, “to consecrate,” plus a locative mem); e.g., וַעֲשׂוּ לִי מִקְדָּשׁ וְשֹׁכְנֵתִי, “and they (the Israelites) shall make me a sanctuary, so I may dwell among them” (Exod. 25:8); וַיִּבְנוּ לָהּ בֵּית מִקְדָּשׁ לְשִׁמְךָ, “and in it (in Jerusalem) they have built you a sanctuary for your name” (2 Chron. 20:8).<sup>20</sup> Thus, this phrase could mean, “In the ritual bath which is near the sanctuary of Beth Hakkoz/the summer palace.” This option is interesting because: (1) It may refer to the Temple of Jerusalem. (2) It would imply that the priestly watch of Hakkoz had a residence in the Temple area. (3) It may indicate that the Temple had a summer house or palace. (4) בֵּית הַקִּיץ could be a summer synagogue or sanctuary (see below). Cf. מִקְדָּשׁ מְעַט, “little sanctuary” (Ezek. 11:16; see Targum, Rashi), which is according to Rabbi Isaac, refers to synagogues and study houses in Babylon (b. Meg. 29a).

הַמִּקְוָה [ה], הַמִּקְוָה [א], or הַמִּקְוָה [ה] — מִקְוָה (masc.) and מִקְוָה (fem.; once מִקְוָה, 2 Chron. 1:16; pl. מִקְוֹת, מִקְוֹת; from the root קוה, “to gather”) means “reservoir, ritual bath.” E.g., מַעְיָן וּבֹר מִקְוֵה מֵיִם, “a fountain or a cistern of gathered water (i.e., mikve)” (Lev. 11:36); אֶרְבָּעִים סָאָה מִקְוֵה שֵׁשׁ בּוֹ, “a mikve that has in it (masc.) forty se’ah (a certain measurement of water)” (m. Miq. 1:7, 7:6). The Targum for מִקְוָה (fem.) is מִקְוֵיָא (pl. of מִקְוָה, “reservoir,” Isa. 22:11). מִיקְוֹת = מִקְוֹת (pl.) appears later in the Scroll as an alternate (see #45, 10:3). This reading follows Baker’s drawing, while the reš of מִקְר[א]וה in Milik’s and Allegro’s could be a scribal error for a waw; cf. רמחצא for ומחצה (see #39, 9:6).

הַמָּקוֹם — מָקוֹם means “place” (from the root קום, “to stand, arise,” plus a locative mem)” Its secondary meaning is “sanctuary, Temple.” E.g., the 18 Jastrow (747a) renders מוֹקֵד דְטַבְרִיָּה as “hot spring of Tiberias,” so Kohut (comparing to Arabic mwqd; AC 5, 223b), and Krupnik-Silbermann (2, 17b).

19 The translation is based on Radak’s Sefer haššorašim (The Living Torah, 523). Ibn-Ezra says that מוֹקֵדָה with an extra he, is the same as מוֹקֵד, although they may be two different nouns. According to Gordon, מוֹקֵדָה means הַמּוֹקֵד, “the hearth,” cf. בֵּיתָהּ = הַבֵּית, “the house” (Isa. 14:17), הַצִּפּוֹן = צִפּוֹנָה, “the north” (Jer. 1:15), and לְשֹׁאֵלָה = לְשֹׁאֵל, “to the Sheol” (Ps. 9:18). The definite article he appears at the end of the word (“Iyyun Tefillah” in Siddur Ošar haTefillot [1915], 77a). This could indicate that in Biblical Hebrew the definite article may appear as a final he as in Aramaic; e.g. דְּהִבָּהּ (Dan. 2:35), same as דְּהִבָּא (Ezra 5:14), in Hebrew הַזֶּהָב (e.g., Gen. 2:11; Targ. דְּהִבָּא, “the gold.”

20 מִקְדָּשׁ in Exod. 15:17 has an unusual vocalization; see Ibn-Ezra. בֵּית הַמִּקְדָּשׁ, “Temple,” occurs only once in the Masoretic Text (2 Chron. 37:17), but it is common in Mishnaic Hebrew. The Targumim use מִקְדָּשׁ, מִקְדָּשָׁא, and בֵּית מִקְדָּשָׁא (e.g., Onkelos Exod. 25:8, 16:17, 23:19, respectively).

verse וַיֵּרָא אֶת הַמָּקוֹם מֵרֶחֶק, “and (Abraham) saw the place from afar” (Gen. 22:4), refers to Mount Moriah, where subsequently King Solomon built the Temple (see Ba'al haṭTurim). The phrase הַמָּקוֹם שֶׁל בֵּית, may be an Aramaism, i.e., בֵּית אֶתְרָא or בֵּית דְּבֵית, “the place of (the) house of”; cf. the Targum of מָקוֹם is בֵּית מִישְׁרֵי (TO), and אֶתְרָא בֵּית מְשֻׁרֵי (PsJ), “resting place” (Deut. 1:33), and of מִמְּקוֹמוֹ, “from His place,” is בֵּית שְׁכִינְתִּיהָ, “from His dwelling/sanctuary” (Ezek. 3:12).

בִּקְרוֹתָא or בִּקְרוֹתָא (with a bet) — בִּקְרוֹתָא (MH, בִּקְרוֹתָא, A) means “cattle yard” (from בִּקְרָא, “cattle”).<sup>21</sup> Frequently in the Scroll bet and mem are undistinguishable; cf. Milik’s reading of בִּקְרוֹתָא or בִּקְרוֹתָא.

וּלְבֵיתָא, “and of (the) house of” (Baker<sup>dr</sup>, Milik<sup>dr</sup>), where the word is interrupted. Regarding בֵּית, see #7, 2:3; for interrupted words, #12, 3:1-2.

שֶׁל בֵּית (= אֲשֶׁר לְבֵיתָא), “(which is) of (the) house” (Allegro<sup>dr</sup>). The lacuna does not affect these two readings.

בֵּית מוֹל (Baker<sup>dr</sup>, Milik<sup>dr</sup>; cf. Wolters), “[op]posite of (the) house of,” or “[in] front of (the) house of”; the mem is missing due to the lacuna. The preposition מוֹל (BH, MH, A; once vocalized מוֹל, Deut. 1:1, and once spelled with an extra alef, לְמוֹאֵל, Neh. 13:38), means like בְּנֵי, “opposite, in front of” (see #3, 1:8). מוֹל may be a composition of מִן and אֵלֵי.

שֶׁל בֵּית, וּלְבֵיתָא, or אֲשֶׁר לְבֵיתָא, is followed by הַקָּצָא with the definite article he. בֵּיתָא, “(the) house of the,” may be part of a toponym, and it could mean “city/place/family of (the)” (see #7, 2-3).

בֵּית הַקָּצָא = בֵּית הַקָּצָא — קָצָא is a contracted form of קָצִיץ, “summer”; cf. שָׁשׁ (1 Chron. 29:2) vs. שֵׁשׁ, “marble” (Songs 5:15; Esth. 1:6, see Ibn-Ezra); יְרוּשָׁלַם (ketiv) vs. יְרוּשָׁלַיִם (qeri).<sup>22</sup> Contracted forms are known from early Hebrew inscriptions<sup>23</sup> and the Mesha Stone.<sup>24</sup> Moreover, in the Gezer Calen-

21 E.g., t. Mo'ed Q. 2:11; b. Mo'ed Q. 12a. Rashi says that בִּקְרוֹתָא is a cattle yard. The Targum (PsJ, N) for וַאֲלֵהֶם רָץ אַבְרָהָם, “and Abraham ran to the cattle” is וּלְבִקְרוֹתָא, “and Abraham ran to the cattle yard” (Gen. 18:7). Peruṣ Jonathan explains וַאֲלֵהֶם אַבְרָהָם as “oxen yard,” and elsewhere (Deut. 7:13) refers to He'Aruckh (101a) for additional examples. Kohut (AC 2, 163) and Ben-Yehuda (1, 602b and n. 1) compares בִּקְרוֹתָא with the Arabic baqrut, “cattle-yard.”

22 The contracted form occurs 637 times, while the non-contracted only four times (Jer. 26:18; Esth. 2:6; 2 Chron. 25:1, 32:9). In Biblical Aramaic יְרוּשָׁלַם appears 26 times. Likewise, the Targumim use the contracted form. See Gordis, 100-01, 173 nn. 118-120; D.N. Friedman, “The Masoretic Text and the Qumran Scrolls: A Study in Orthography,” Textus 2 (1962), 89-90. In most western languages Jerusalem follows the contracted form.

23 E.g., יָין for יָיִן, “wine,” and יָיִן, “wine of”; נָבֵל יָיִן (= נָבֵל יָיִן), “one pitcher of old wine” (cf. וּנְבֵל יָיִן, “and a pitcher of wine,” 1 Sam. 1:24); יָיִן כְּרָם (= יָיִן כְּרָם), “wine of vineyard” (cf. כֵּיין לְבָנוֹן, “like wine of Lebanon,” Hos. 14:8; KAI 1, 34; 2, 184-85 [#185:3-4; #187:1-2]).

24 E.g., קָרִיתָא, the same as קָרִיתָא of קָרִיתָא (ketiv) vs. קָרִיתָא (qeri, Ezek. 25:9), cf. קָרִיתָא (Gen. 14:5); מֵאתָא vs. מֵאתָא (e.g., Gen. 11:23, “two hundred”) (KAI 1, 33; 2, 168-79 [#181:10,20]). See also Early Hebrew Orthography, 39-43, 47, 59; “The Masoretic Text dar קַץ = קִיץ means "summer fruit"<sup>25</sup> (cf. קִיץ, 2 Sam. 16:1, etc.). The contracted form is considered to be North-Israelite usage, while the non-contracted Judahite. בֵּית הַקִּיץ, "summer house/palace," is discussed above.

בֵּית הַקּוֹז = בֵּית הַקּוֹז (defective), Beth Hakkoz or "House/Family of Hakkoz" (cf. Milik.). The family Hakkoz was the seventh out of twenty-four priestly watches selected by a lot to serve in the Temple at the time of King David (1 Chron. 24:7-10). After returning from Babylonian exile, the Hakkoz family was disqualified from priestly service due to their questionable genealogical status as priests (Ezra 2:61; Neh. 7:63). Later the uncertainty was resolved and "Meremoth the son of Uriah בֶּן הַקּוֹז (son of Hakkoz)" (Neh. 3:4,21) had an important role in rebuilding the Temple.<sup>26</sup> In the Baraita of the Priestly Watches the seventh one is מִשְׁמֶרֶת הַקּוֹז עֵילָבוּ, "the priestly watch of Hakkoz (from) 'Eylavu." According to Klein, עֵילָבוּ, or better עֵילָבוֹן, a contraction of עֵין לָבוֹן, White Spring, was located at the northeastern corner of the Valley of בֵּית נְטוּפָה (Beth Netophah).<sup>27</sup> The latter may be identical with הַנְּטָף mentioned in the Scroll (see #38, 9:1). In the Mishmerot fragments several times the watch of Hakkoz is mentioned; e.g., בְּשִׁלּוּשִׁים בּו שְׁבַת הַקּוֹז (4Q325 fl:6), "On the thirtieth in it (i.e., the second month) is the Sabbath (i.e., entire week of service belongs to) Hakkoz."

Since קוֹז, "torn, thorn-bush," is a personal name (1 Chron. 4:8), the he may be the definite article. Thus, בְּנֵי הַקּוֹז could mean "the sons of Koz/-Thorn" or "sons of Hakkoz," and בֵּית הַקּוֹז, "the House/Family of Koz/-Thorn" or "the House/Family of Hakkoz"; cf. עֵדֶן, Eden (Ezek. 27:23), and בֵּית עֵדֶן, Beth-eden or "House of Delight" (Amos 1:5) in Assyria, vs. בְּנֵי עֵדֶן, "sons of Eden/Delight" (2 Kgs 19:12; Isa. 37:12); also בֵּית לֶחֶם, Beth-lehem, "House of Bread" (e.g., Judg. 19:2), vs. בֵּית הַכֶּרֶם, Beth-cherem, "House of the Vine" (Jer. 6:1; Neh. 3:14).

בֵּית הַקֶּץ = בֵּית הַקֶּץ — In two parallel biblical verses both מְלוֹן קֶץ, "remotest lodge," and מְרוֹם קֶץ, "remotest height," refer to the Temple: וְאַבְוָאָה and the Qumran Scrolls: A Study in Orthography," 89-90, 96-97; E. Lipinski, "Etymological and Exegetical Notes on the Meša' Inscription," Orientalia NS 40 (1971), 336; Gordis, 100, 173 nn. 119-20.

25 KAI 1, 34; 2, 181-82 (#182:7).

26 See B. Porten: "Exile, Babylonian," EJ 6, 1040; N. Avigad, "A New Class of Yehud Stamps," IEJ 7 (1957), 149-50; K. Koch, "Ezra and Meremoth: Remarks on the History of the Priesthood," "Sha'arei Talmon" (1992), 105-110.

27 This baraita was reconstructed by Klein (SY, 162-63, 165 [mentioned by Lurie]). Also cf. וְהַקְּצוּ וְהִלְעֲבוּ כַּהֲנֵי עֵילָבוּ, "and the priests of Eylavu (where Hakkoz dwelled) were excommunicated and humiliated," in the seventh paragraph of the Qinah (elegy) אִיכָה יִשְׁבָּה by Rabbi Eleazar Kallir (c. seventh cent.) on the destruction of the 24 priestly watches (is recited on the Fast of the Ninth of Ab). See A. Rosenfeld, The Authorised Kinot for the Ninth of Av (1970), xix, 99-101, 100 n. 5; B.Z. Schischa, Seder Qinot hamMevo'arot leTiš'ah be'Av (1986), 103-107.

מָלוֹן קָצָה, “and I (Sennacherib) shall come to His (i.e., the Lord’s) remotest lodge” (2 Kgs 19:23), and וְאָבֹא מְרוֹם קָצוֹ, “and I shall come to His remotest height” (Isa. 37:24).<sup>28</sup> מָלוֹן (masc., from the root לִוְלִין, “to lodge,” plus a locative mem), “lodge,” is a synonym of בֵּית, “house”; cf. also לִינָה, בֵּית לִינָה, “sleeping room” (Sifri Wa’Eṭhannan 29). Thus, בֵּית הַקָּצ, “the remotest/tallest house,” may refer to the Temple.<sup>29</sup>

אֲשֶׁר לְבֵית הַקִּיץ = שֶׁל בֵּית הַקִּיץ = שֶׁל בֵּית הַקָּצ, “(which is) of the summer house/palace”; cf. שֶׁל בֵּית הַשּׁוֹאֲבָה הַשְּׂאֹבָה, “of the house/place (where) water (was) drawn (for libation in the Temple)” (m. Suk. (5:1); אֲשֶׁר לְבֵית הַ, “which is of the Temple of the Lord” (Zech. 7:3).

וּלְבֵית הַקָּצ = וּלְבֵית הַקִּיץ, “and of the summer house/palace”; cf. הַמֶּלֶךְ, “and of the palace of the king” (1 Kgs 10:12).

מוֹל בֵּית הַקִּיץ = [מ]וֹל בֵּית הַקָּצ, “[op]posite the summer house/palace”; cf. מוֹל בֵּית פְּעוֹר, “opposite Beth-peor (House of Peor)” (Deut. 3:29, 4:46, 34:6).

אֲשֶׁר לְבֵית הַקּוֹץ = שֶׁל בֵּית הַקּוֹץ = שֶׁל בֵּית הַקָּצ, “(which is) of the House/Family of Hakkoz,” or “(which is) of the House/Family of the Koz/Thorn.”

וּלְבֵית הַקּוֹץ = וּלְבֵית הַקָּצ, “and of the House/Family of Hakkoz,” or “and of the House/Family of the Koz/Thorn.”

מוֹל בֵּית הַקּוֹץ = [מ]וֹל בֵּית הַקָּצ, “[op]posite Beth Hakkoz,” or “[op]posite the House/Family of Koz/Thorn.”

אֲשֶׁר לְבֵית הַקָּץ = שֶׁל בֵּית הַקָּץ = שֶׁל בֵּית הַקָּצ, “(which is) of the remotest/tallest house,” or “(which is) of the Temple.”

וּלְבֵית הַקָּץ = וּלְבֵית הַקָּצ, “and of the remotest/tallest house,” or “and of the Temple.”

מוֹל בֵּית הַקָּץ = [מ]וֹל בֵּית הַקָּצ, “[op]posite the remotest/tallest house,” or “[op]posite the Temple.”

The aforementioned suggestions may imply that the cave, ritual bath, or burial cave was located near or opposite the cool chamber, fountain, fire-place, hot chamber, mikve, sanctuary, roofed section, beam work, or cattle yard which was a part of the summer palace, Beth Hakkoz, House/Family of the Koz/Thorn, remotest house, tallest house, or Temple, etc.

חֲפֻרוֹתֶּיךָ שֵׁשׁ כַּסֵּף בְּדִיןִין שֵׁשׁ כַּסֵּף שֵׁשׁ (7:9-10), “are buried six cubits (deep), six silver pitchers/bars,” or “dig six cubits (deep, there are) six silver pitchers/bars” — Regarding חֲפֵר, see #12, 3-6; #17, 4-7; for אֲמוֹת, #1, 1:2-3; for the phrase כַּסֵּף שֵׁשׁ בְּדִיןִין, #10, 2:11.

28 Regarding the first verse, see Radak and Ralbag, for the second, Mešudat David. מְרוֹם may be a variant of מָלוֹן, lamed-reš and nun-mem interchanges.

29 This reading (see Lefkoviṭs<sup>diss</sup> 1, 498, 502, 507-08) is somewhat similar to the suggestions offered by Allegro<sup>pr</sup>, Wolters, and one of Beyer’s alternate readings.

ITEM 31

|                       |      |
|-----------------------|------|
| בדוק תחת פנת המשמרה   | 7:11 |
| המזרחית חפור אמות שבע | 7:12 |
| כך                    | 7:13 |

- 7:11 In Dok, below the corner of the eastern
 7:12 guard post, are buried seven cubits (deep)
 7:13 22 k(arsh of) s(ilver).

COMMENTARY

(7:11) בְּדוֹק־בְּדוֹק, “In/at/by (the) Dok,” or בְּדִיק־בְּדִיק, “in/at/by a/the siege-wall” — ALLEGRO<sup>PF</sup>: “In an empty space (?) or bulwark, siege wall (BH).” ALLEGRO: בְּרִיק, “In an empty space,” rather than בְּדִיק, “in the bulwark, siege wall.”<sup>1</sup> MILIK: בְּדוֹק, “At ha-Doq; הָדוֹק is the Hebrew form of the Aramaic דוֹקָא, “the watch-post, observatory.” It is identified with Δωχ (Macc. 16:15), modern Jebel Qarantal, northwest of Jericho.<sup>2</sup> The other scholars, including ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>, agree with Milik.<sup>3</sup>

דוֹק can be identified with: (1) Dok or Dokos, a fortress three miles north of Jericho (Milik, Beyer). Its name is preserved in the nearby village ‘Ayn al-Duk, the ancient Naarah.<sup>4</sup> (2) דוֹקִים/דוֹקִים, Doqim/Duqim, or דוֹקִים, Doqaim (pl. or dual of דוֹק/דוֹק), was located near Caesarea; טֶקֶסִים דְּקִיסְרִין, “wall/garrison of Caesarea ... wall/garrison of Doqim/Duqim” (y. ‘A.Z. 1:2 [2b]).<sup>5</sup> (3) Beth Duqqu, an Arab village about twelve miles northwest of Jerusalem.<sup>6</sup>

1 Allegro<sup>PF</sup>; Allegro, 45, 142 n. 151.

2 Milik, 291-92, 231 B-15c, 249 C-112, 265 D-19; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 140, 148.

3 Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24; Lurie, 97 and n. 1; Pixner, 349-50 and n. 27; Wolters, 44-45 (renders “[Mount] Duq); Garcia Martinez, 462; Beyer, 229; Vermes, 376; Wise, 194.

4 נַעֲרָה (Josh. 16:7), same as נַעֲרָן (1 Chron. 7:28; a final he-nun interchange). See M. Avi-Yonah, “Dok,” EJ 6, 153-154; “Naarah,” EJ 12, 735-36; SB, 563a.

5 Kohut suggests that דוֹקִים by Caesarea is דִּיקִינוֹס, Diokenos of the Targumim (PsJ Num. 34:8; Frag. Num. 34:15), and may be identical with Dio Caesarea (AC 3, 123a). Moreover, דוֹקִים may be a corrupted form of דוֹקוֹס (Dokos), a graphical interchange of samekh and final mem; cf. לִי־סָטִים for לִי־סָטִים, λήστας, “robber” (cf. Jastrow, 708b-09a). According to Jastrow (288a, 535b, 1269a), דוֹקִים (from the root דוֹק, “to examine, watch, look”) is Dokos, a stronghold near Jericho; cf. צוֹפִים, “Outlook, Scopus,” near Jerusalem.

6 Klein suggests that דוֹקִים is by Caesarea, but it may be Beth Duqqa (“Zur Ortsnamenkunde Palästinas,” MGWJ 64 [1920], 189-90; SY, 35a).

It is also possible to read as בְּרִיקָא בְּרִיקָא, “in/at/by a/the siege-wall” (cf. Allegro). בְּרִיקָא is usually rendered as “bulwark, siege wall, forts, towers, observation post.” Jeremiah reports that Nebuchadnezzar’s army besieged Jerusalem and “built a בְּרִיקָא against it סָבִיב (all around)” (Jer. 52:4; 2 Kgs 25:1); and that “The entire Chaldean army tore down all the חֲמוֹת (walls) of Jerusalem סָבִיב (all around)” (Jer. 52:14; 2 Kgs 25:10). Thus, as the walls were “all around” the city, so was the בְּרִיקָא built by the Babylonians “all around” the walls of Jerusalem. In addition, לְשַׁפֵּךְ סִלְלָה לְבִנוֹת בְּרִיקָא, “to pour out a ramp, to build a siege wall” (Ezek. 21:27), shows that בְּרִיקָא is a constructed fortification.<sup>7</sup>

The Targum of בְּרִיקָא is כְּרָקוּם (Jer. 52:4), כְּרָקוּם (Ezek. 4:2), “bulwark, round entrenchment,” while the plural כְּרָקוּמִין/קְרָקוּמִין is the Targum of מְצוֹר (masc., Deut. 20:20), and מַעְגָּל, “barricade” (1 Sam. 17:20; see Radak). כְּרָקוּם is also used in Mishnaic Hebrew (e.g., m. Git. 3:4; see Bertinoro).<sup>8</sup> The verb בָּנָה, “to build,” is also used to create a מְצוֹר. The Targumic כְּרָקוּם suggests that בְּרִיקָא, מְצוֹר, and מַעְגָּל are synonymous technical military terms; the first two are constructed by the city’s attacker, while the third by its defenders. It seems that בְּרִיקָא and מְצוֹר are “siege walls” erected by the enemy around the city wall. A similar term, מְלוֹא, Millo, “rampart,” appears twice in the Scroll as alternate readings (see #13, 3:8; #14, 3:11).

(7:11) תַּחַת פִּנֵּת הַמִּשְׁמֶרֶת הַמְּזוּרָה, “below the corner of the eastern guard post — Regarding the third word, the drawings differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: the bottom of the mem is separated and joined to the next waw. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: the bottom of the mem is separated both sides, while the top of the waw is joined to the next he/het/taw.<sup>9</sup> The photographs of the ZUCKERMANS seem to support this ligature. ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: הַמִּשְׁטָח, it will be discussed later.

MILIK reads this word as הַמִּשְׁמֶרֶת, and renders “fortress.”<sup>10</sup> Most scholars

7 Rashi in Ezek. 4:2 renders בְּרִיקָא in Old-French as mangonel, “stone throwing catapult,” and סִלְלָה as bastion, “rampart.” The latter in some editions is פּוֹרְיִירָא, for(ji)er, “to pierce, percer” (Greenberg, 135; 292, nn. 423–34). Webster’s New Universal Unabridged Dictionary defines “mangonel” as “military apparatus formerly used for throwing stones, etc.” (1095a). See also Pseudo-Rashi on 2 Chron. 26:15.

8 These terms have been explained as: כְּרָקוּם, Umschanzung, Bollwerk (“round entrenchment, bulwark”); כְּרָקוּם, runde Lagerumwallung, Bollwerk im Kriegslager (“round camp wall, bulwark of a war camp”), from the Greek χαράκωμα (AC 4, 326b, 341b–42a). כְּרָקוּם, etc., “troop of siege, stage of siege, camp of besieger, the Roman castra, work of siege”; reduplicated form of כָּרַם, as כָּרַם (MH), “to encircle,” which itself is a denominate form of כָּרַם (BH, MH), “enclosure, plantation, vineyard” (Jastrow, 669b, 671a); כְּרָקוּם (MH, masc., from the Greek charakoma, a battering ram used at the time of the siege) is the conqueror army, an army that attacks a city and positions against it a siege to conquer it (ESh<sup>dic</sup>, 3, 1107b).

9 Milik (291–92) notes this ligature.

10 Milik, 291–92, 249 C-111; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 140.

agree with Milik reading, but they translate it differently; ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>, PIXNER, WOLTERS, and WISE: "the guardhouse"; GARCIA MARTINEZ: "the citadel"; VERMES: "the guard-post."<sup>11</sup>

The reading of Milik's drawing seems to be המשמרה or המשמות, where the waw could be: (1) a scribal error for a reš; (2) a short legged final nun in medial position; (3) a short headed reš. Accordingly, this word can be read as: המשמרה, המשמרת, המשמה (= המשמנה = המשמרה), or המשמות (= המשמרת = המשמרת), a nun-reš letter interchange; cf. הדרומית for הדרומית, or הדומית (= הדנומית = הדרומית; see #37, 8:14).

משמרה (fem.) is from the root שמר, "to watch, keep, protect," with a prefixed locative mem and a suffixed he/taw. Of the many meanings of משמר (masc.), משמרת, משמרת (BH, MH), the most appropriate one is "guard-post." Cf. על מצפה (upon the watch tower) ... I stay continually in the daytime, ועל משמרת (and on my guard-post) I stand all the nights" (Isa. 21:8), i.e., מצפה, "watch tower" (from the root צפה, "to see, look," see #25, 6:2, with a prefixed locative mem) is parallel with משמרת."<sup>12</sup>

The phrase תחת פנת המשמרה המזרחית is ambiguous (the last three words are feminine). (1) המזרחית (fem.) may refer to המשמרה המזרחית, i.e., "below the eastern corner (tower) of the guard post." Thus, דוקדוק had a guard post, and the treasure was hidden below its eastern corner (tower) of that guard post. (2) המזרחית may refer to פנת המשמרה המזרחית (fem.), i.e., "below the corner (tower) of the eastern guard post." Thus, דוקדוק had more than one guard posts, and the treasure was hidden below the corner (tower) of the eastern post. Regarding this phrase, see #12, 3:1-2.

משמרה connotes that the guard-post was for defensive purposes, while דוקדוק in the Bible refers to that built by the enemy. Perhaps דוקדוק in the Scroll refers to a structure built earlier. משמרה may support the reading of דוקדוק as the siege wall having one or more guard posts. On the other hand, if the reading is דוקדוק, "observation post," it might had been named after its guard-post. משמרה, "guard-post," is an additional technical 11 Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24; Pixner, 349; Wolters, 44-45; Wise, 194; Garcia Martinez, 462; Vermes, 376.

12 משמרת plus the singular first person possessive suffix yod. משמר (masc.) means "protected place," such as "jail" (Gen. 42:17), "magazine" (Neh. 13:14); or "something that protects," such as "group of watchmen" (Neh. 4:3) and "guard" (Neh. 4:16). משמרת (fem.) means "guard" (Num. 8:26), "charge of keeping something" (Num. 1:53), and "post of watchman" (Hab. 2:1). משמרת (pl. משמרות, MH), "watch," is used for the twenty-four watches of the priests and Levites (see #30, 7:9). משמרה (MH, BH), "watch," is one third of the night (m. Ber. 1:1). Other related nouns are: שמרה (fem., BH), "guard" (Ps. 141:50), practically identical with משמר - משמרת (fem., MH), "watch tower." According to Bertinoro, שומירה is a tall mound where the guard stands to protect the vineyard (m. Kil. 5:3). The plural שומרים (BH, MH), "lees, drags," and שמרת (MH), "strainer," may also be connected with the root שמר.

military term mentioned in the Scroll. The others are, גִּיָּק, “siege wall” (alt.), חוֹמָא, “city wall” (2:10), חֵיל, “rampart” (10:15, alt.), and שַׁעַר, “(city) gate” (2:9).

ALLEGRO's drawing has מִשְׁטַח with a clear tet and he/het/taw. Allegro reads מִשְׁטַח, “the spreading platform”; and notes that it may be “an area on the top of the Parva Chamber spread with linen sheets for the High Priest on the Day of Atonement.”<sup>13</sup> LURIE and BEYER agree with Allegro.<sup>14</sup> מִשְׁטָח as well as מִשְׁטוֹחַ and מִשְׁטָח (masc., from the root שָׂטַח, “to spread,” with a locative mem) mean “spreading place.” In the Masoretic Text the absolute מִשְׁטוֹחַ occurs once (Ezek. 47:10), while the construct מִשְׁטָח twice (Ezek. 26:5,14); all three cases refer to an area where the fishermen spread out their nets to dry.<sup>15</sup> This term in Mishnaic Hebrew refers to a “spreading area” for drying fruits; e.g., מִשְׁטִיחַ שֶׁל אֲדָמָה, “spreading area of the ground” (m. Ṭoh. 10:4-5; t. Ṭoh. 11:8). Its Aramaic cognate is מִשְׁטַחֵּי מִשְׁטַחָא; e.g., the Targum of שְׂדֵה כֹּוֹבֵס, “washer's field,” is חֲקֵל מִשְׁטַחָא קְצִירָא, “the washer's spreading field” (2 Kgs 18:17). Thus, מִשְׁטָח is an area where either the washers spread out their cloths or the farmers spread out grapes for drying. To meet the requirements of the laws of purification, the latter had to be done carefully (cf. m. Ṭoh. 10:4-5).

Since מִשְׁטָח is masculine and פִּנֵּת is feminine, the feminine הַמְּזֻרְחִית must be in apposition to פִּנֵּת. Thus, הַמְּזֻרְחִית הַמְּשֻׁטָּח פִּנֵּת תַּחַת means “below the eastern corner (tower) of the spreading area.”

(7:12-13) 22 חֲפֹרֵי־חֶפֶז אֲמוֹת שֶׁבַע כֹּכ, “are hidden seven cubits (deep) 22 s(ilver) k(arsh),” or “dig seven cubits (deep, there are) 22 s(ilver) k(arsh)” — Regarding חֶפֶז, see #17, 4:7; for אֲמָה, #1, 1:2-3; for כֹּכ, Appendix A.

Finally, in addition to this item, the term פִּנֵּא, “corner (tower),” is used twice in Item 12 in a parallel fashion. In the first case it appears in reference to 609 silver and gold dedicated vessels hidden nine cubits deep (3:2-4), and in the second regarding 40 silver karsh hidden sixteen cubits deep (3:6).

13 Allegro, 45, 152 n. 153. Allegro<sup>PF</sup> renders “spreading place.”

14 Lurie, 97 and n. 3; Beyer, 229.

15 Some consider מִשְׁטוֹחַ and מִשְׁטָח as two types of noun formations (BDB, 1009a; ESh<sup>dic</sup>, 4, 1554); while for others מִשְׁטָח is the construct of מִשְׁטוֹחַ (ESh<sup>con</sup>, 2, 1335b).

ITEM 32

על פי יציאת המים של הבז 7:14
 בא חפור אמות שלוש עד הטור 7:15
 ככ 60 זהב ככרינ שתימ 7:16

7:14 Above the mouth of the water spring of Buz,
 7:15 in it three cubits toward the wall are buried
 7:16 60 k(arsh of) s(ilver and) two talents of gold.

COMMENTARY

(7:14-15) ( = בָּה) “על פי יציאת המים של הבז”, “Above/Upon the mouth/-opening of the water spring of Buz, in it (fem.)” — ALLEGRO<sup>pr</sup>: “At the mouth of the runaway of the water of the Kuz vessel, in it” (i.e., על פי יציאת, “על פי יציאת המים של הביא (המים של הכוז בא). ALLEGRO: “על פי יציאת המים של הכוזבא (המים של הכוז בא).”<sup>1</sup> MILIK: “על פי יציאת המים של הכוזבא (המים של הכוזבא).”<sup>2</sup> LURIE: “על פי יציאת המים של חבובא (Havuva’).” The personal name חבובא (Havuva’) or חביבא (Haviva’) is known from Talmud sources.<sup>3</sup> The other scholars, including ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>, basically agree with Milik.<sup>4</sup>

The preposition על means “on/upon/above/at”; פי is the construct state of פֶּה (masc.), “mouth, opening.”<sup>5</sup> Thus, על פי means “upon the mouth of”; e.g., וְהָאֶבֶן גְּדֹלָה עַל פִּי הַבְּאֵר, “and there (is) a large stone upon the well’s mouth” (Gen. 29:2);<sup>6</sup> עַל פִּי הַבּוֹר, “upon the opening of the pit/cistern” (m. Makhsh. 3:1); עַל פִּי הַבֵּיב, “upon the opening of the gutter” (m. ‘A.Z. 3:4).

1 Allegro, 45.

2 Milik, 291-92, 265 D-20; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141, 149.

3 Lurie, 97-98 and nn. 1-2.

4 Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24; Pixner, 349-50 and n. 27; Thorion, 170; Wolters, 44-45; Garcia Martinez, 462; Beyer, 229; Vermes, 376; Wise 195.

5 Several forms of פֶּה occur in the Scroll: פִּי, “the mouth of” (7:14, 8:8, 9:14); בְּפִי, “in (the) mouth of” (12:6); מִפִּי, “from the mouth of,” or בְּפִי (1:11); פִּיהָ, “its (fem.) mouth” (12:11), and לְפִיהֶם, “to their mouth” (2:12).

6 Also, עַל פִּי הַמַּעְרָה, “on the mouth of the Nile” (Isa. 19:7); עַל פִּי הַמַּעְרָה, “on the mouth of the cave” (Josh. 10:27; m. Naz. 9:2; B.B. 6:8). The Targum for עַל פִּי הַמַּעְרָה is עַל פִּי הַמַּעְרָה (TO), עַל פִּי הַמַּעְרָה (PsJ), and עַל פִּי הַמַּעְרָה (TN). עַל פִּי may be translated more than one way; e.g., עַל פִּי מְדוּתָיו, “on his robes” or “on the collar of his robes” (Ps. 133:2).

על פי is also a compound preposition, “at, by, above, upon, according to, in front of” (cf. עַל פְּנֵי, אֶל פִּי, לְפִי); e.g., עַל פִּי הַדְּבָרִים הָאֵלֶּה, “according to these words” (Gen. 43:7); עַל פִּי עֲדִים, “according to (the) witnesses” or “in front of (the) witnesses” (m. Shab. 19:1).<sup>7</sup>

יְצִיאָהּ is the construct state of יְצִיאָה (fem.), “exit” (from the root יצא, “to go out”).<sup>8</sup> E.g., בְּכְנִיסָהּ וּבִיְצִיאָהּ ... בְּחֶזֶר ... אֶמֶת הַמַּיִם הָעוֹבְרֶת בְּחֶזֶר, “a water channel that passes through a courtyard ... at its entrance and at its exit” (t. ‘Eruv. 9 [6] 26). יְצִיאַת הַמַּיִם (MH) is the same as מוֹצֵא מַיִם (BH).<sup>9</sup> מוֹצֵא (masc., from the root יצא, with a prefixed locative mem) means “the place of exit.” The Targum for מוֹצְאֵי מַיִם (pl., Isa. 41:18) and of מְבוֹעֵי מַיִם (pl., Isa. 35:7, 49:10) is מְבוֹעֵי מַיָּא, “springs of waters.” In addition, the Targum for מַעְיָנוֹת (pl. of מַעַן, “spring”) is מְבוֹעֵין (pl. of מְבוֹעַ, “spring”; Isa. 41:18). Thus, יְצִיאַת מַיִם, מוֹצֵא מַיִם, מַעַן, and מְבוֹעַ are synonyms. Moreover, עַל פִּי ... יְצִיאַת הַמַּיִם שֶׁל בֵּית ... is like the phrase ... בְּפִי הַמְּבוֹעַ שֶׁל בֵּית, “At the mouth of the spring of Beth ...” (see #58, 12:6). Also cf. סָתַם אֶת מוֹצֵא מֵימֵי גִיחוֹן, “(King Hezekiah) stopped the upper spring of the water of Gihon” (2 Chron. 32:30), which is referred in the Mishnah as סָתַם מֵי גִיחוֹן הָעֶלְיוֹן, “(Hezekiah) stopped the upper spring of Gihon” (m. Pes. 4:9).<sup>10</sup>

The next word consists of four letters, he/het/taw, bet/kaf, waw/zayin/yod, and again waw/zayin/yod. The last letter can be seen clearly in MILK’s drawing, although it has a short leg. In BAKER’s the leg is much shorter. In the drawing of ALLEGRO only the upper part can be detected, which on the left touches a long vertical crack, thus it can be read as waw/zayin/yod or final nun.<sup>11</sup> ALLEGRO and LURIE do not indicate the presence of this letter. This word is followed in the next line by a bet or kaf, and an alef. Thus, these two words can be read as הַכּוֹזֵה כּוֹז בָּא (= בָּהּ) or הַבּוֹז בָּא (= בָּהּ). On the other hand, these two words may be parts of an interrupted word that can be read as: חֲבִיבָא (with a he; cf. Allegro), חֲבִיבָא (with a het; cf. Lurie), and

7 Ben-Yehuda (6, 4836b-37a n. 1-2, 4840a n. 1) suggests that עַל of the prepositions עַל פִּי and עַל פְּנֵי originates from פֶּה, “edge, side, direction” (a variant of פָּאָה, “side, corner”), rather than פֶּה, “mouth.”

8 Milik, Sharvit, and Wolters point out that יְצִיאָהּ is Mishnaic Hebrew (Milik, 234 B-19a; “Iyyunim,” 131; “Vocabulary,” 486 #9). Additional meanings of יְצִיאָהּ (MH) are, “expense” and “carrying objects between Sabbath domains.”

9 This has been pointed out by Bendavid (1, 99).

10 מַיִם is always plural, i.e., “waters,” it is a dual formation like שָׁמַיִם, “heavens” (e.g., Gen. 1:1). The construct forms are מֵי and מֵימֵי; the possessive suffixes are always added to later. Referring to Gihon, the Siloam Inscription says, וַיֵּלְכוּ הַמַּיִם מִן הַמּוֹצֵא אֶל הַבְּרֶכָה, “and the water flow from the source to the pool.” Donner and Röllig explain מוֹצֵא as “exit place” of the water, i.e., “spring” (KAI 1, 34; 2, 186-88 [#189:4-5]). Kutscher suggests that מוֹצֵא was pronounced as mawša’ (“כתובות ירושלים מימי הבית הראשון” in Hebrew and Aramaic Studies [1977], 169-70).

11 Regarding the cracks in Allegro’s drawings, see “The Drawings” in the Discussion.

הכוזבא (Milik). Regarding interrupted words, see #12, 3:1; for double waw/yod spellings, #22, 5:5-6.

The followings are the suggested readings, vocalizations, and interpretations of this difficult phrase.

על פי יציאת המים של הבוז, “Above the mouth of the water spring of (the) Buz” — בוז, Buz, is a personal name (Nahor’s son, Gen. 22:21; a descendent of Gad, 1 Chron. 5:14), name of a tribe and territory (Jer. 25:23). The gentilic הבוזי, “the Buzite” (Job 32:2,6), means a descendent of Buz, a member of the nation of Buz, or a native of the territory of Buz. In addition, בוזי, Buzi, was the father of the prophet Ezekiel (Ezek. 1:3).<sup>12</sup> It is conceivable that a spring and/or a place was named Buz in Palestine.

על פי יציאת המים של הכוז/הכוז/הקוז, “Above the mouth of the water spring of the Jug/Owl/Koz/Hakkoz”<sup>13</sup> — כוז/וכוז, “jug,” is a variant of כוס, “cup”; both plurals כוזין and כוסות appear in the Scroll (see #56, 12:2; #12, 3:3). The spring might have been named “jug,” because it had such a shape, or people drew water with jugs.<sup>14</sup> Moreover, הכוז could be a variant of הכוס; e.g., ואת הכוס, “and the owl” (Lev. 11:17; Deut. 14:16), a non-kosher bird.<sup>15</sup> Also, הכוז may be a variant of הקוז, Hakkoz or “the Koz” (kaf-qof and zayin-šade letter interchanges; see #30, 7:9).

על פי יציאת המים של הביבא, “At the mouth of the water exit of the drain” — הביבא is a variant of הביבא, “the drain”; cf. הגדולא, “in/at/by the large drain” (12:8). ביבה is a rare feminine form of ביב (masc.), “drain” (see #42, 9:11).

על פי יציאת המים של חביבא/חביבא, “Above the mouth of the Havi-vah/beloved water spring” (cf. Lurie) — חביבא (with double yod) is a variant of חביבא (fem., e.g., t. Ber. 7:24; חביב, masc., e.g., m. Avot 2:10), “beloved” (from the root חבב, “to love, honor”). The Aramaic forms are חביב (masc., Trg. Jer. 31:19) and חביבא (fem., TO and PsJ Gen. 44:30). חביבה, Haviyah, is the name of several Amoraim (e.g., b. Yoma 10a; y. Meg. 1:1 [2b]).

על פי יציאת המים של הכוזבא, “At the exit of the water of Cozeba,” i.e., at 12 Buz is from בוז - בזה, “to despise,” which is related to בזז, “to plunder,” בוס, “to trample,” בוק - בקק, “to be empty,” and בוש, “to be ashamed” (zayin-samekh-qof-šin interchanges). Thus, the meaning of Buz is derogatory. E.g., the Midrash takes the verse, בבוז רשע בא גם בוז וְעַם קָלוֹן חָרָפָה, “With the arrival of an evildoer, contempt also comes, and with dishonor disgrace” (Prov. 18:3), as referring to the evil Esau (Gen. Rabbah 63:14). On the other hand, בוז may be related to בְּזוּבוּץ, “byssus,” a fine linen (e.g., Esth. 1:6, 8:15), from the root בזי - ביץ, “to whiten,” a zayin-šade interchange.

13 This suggestion (cf. Lefkovits<sup>dis</sup> 1, 531, 540-41) is similar to Allegro<sup>Pf</sup> rendition.

14 Cf. כִּנְרֵת, Lake Kinneret, Chinnereth, or Gennesareth, which is in כִּנְרֵת, Valley of Kinneret, and it is so named because פִּירָא דְכִנְרֵי, “of the sweet fruits which are like the tune of the harps” (b. Meg. 6a), i.e., is named after the כְּנֹר, “harp.”

15 For the various traditional explanations, see The Living Torah, 546.

שִׁמְעוֹן בֶּר כּוֹחֶבָא, Simon Bar-Kokhba, i.e., “Simon son of the Star,” was the leader of the Second Jewish Revolt against the Roman Empire (under Hadrian, 132-35 CE). He signed his name in many of his strict orders in the Bar-Kokhba documents as בֶּר כּוֹסֶבָּא, בֶּר כּוֹסֶבָּה, בֶּר כּוֹסֶבָּא, בֶּר כּוֹשֶׁבָּה, and בֶּר כּוֹשֶׁבָּה, Simon Bar/Ben Koseva<sup>7</sup>/Kosevah/Cozeba.<sup>17</sup> In the Rabbinic sources his name appears as בֶּן כּוֹזֵיבָא (Ben Kozeiva<sup>8</sup>), בֶּן כּוֹזֶבָּה (Ben Kozevah), and בֶּר כּוֹסֶבָּא (Bar Koseva<sup>9</sup>),<sup>18</sup> these are variant spellings (zayin-samekh-shin letter interchanges). Most likely Cozeba was Bar-Kokhba’s home town, i.e., “son of Cozeba.”<sup>19</sup> Perhaps the Cozeba Brook mentioned in the Scroll was situated in or near the settlement Cozeba.

16 Steinberg assumes that Chezib is identical with Achzib of Micah 1:14 (39a, 369b-370a). Kaplan notes that Chezib is probably the same as Achzib or Cozeba, c. 3 miles southwest of Adullam, and it is identified as Tel el-Beida" (The Living Torah, 181, 191). Another Achzib existed in Asher (Judg. 1:31). Regarding the location of כְּזִיב, see Y. Aharoni, Carta's Atlas of the Bible (Heb., 1974), 173 8-γ; ETG 1, 64b-65a. In addition, כְּזִיב, Cozbi the Midianite princess was killed by Phinehas (Num. 25:7-8,15,18). These names originate from the root כ.ז.ב. Cf. "Rabbi Shesheth said, 'Her name is not כְּזִיב .... Then why she is called כְּזִיב (Cozbi)? שֶׁכָּזְבָה (because she deceived) her father'" (b. San. 82b); also, PsJ on Num. 25:15 (see the comments of Peruṣ Jonathan; Rashi on Isa. 57:11 and Ps. 116:11; Torah Temimah on Num. 25:15, pp. 156-57 nn. 34-35). BDB (469b-70a) lists these names under כ.ז.ב. Steinberg (369a) defines כְּזִיב as אֶשֶׁת כְּזִיבִים, "a deceptive woman." Also cf. šd iglyn bn kzb n qrtj (in Hebrew would be אֶשֶׁת אִגְלִין בֶּן כְּזִבִּן לְקֶרֶת, "the field of Iglyn son of Kzbn to/for the cit[y]."), in an Ugaritic register of perpetual land-grants in the town Art (Text 2029:17), where bn kzb n (perhaps ben kozban) resembles בֶּן כְּזִיבָה (UT, 11**a*, 418 [#1214]).

18 E.g., b. San. 93b; y. Ta'an. 4:5 [21a]; Lam. Rabbati Parašah 2; see #32, 7:14-15. It also possible to vocalize as פּוֹנִיבָאָה, פּוֹנִיבָאָה, פּוֹנִיבָאָה, etc.; cf. AC 2, 115b; 4, 212a; KS 1, 400a, 405a.

19 Steinberg (369a) notes that the Hebraist Julius Fuerst (1805-1873) assumed that Bar-Kokhba was from Cozeba.

הַמַּיִם הַמִּכְזָּבִים (the failing [spring] waters) are unfit (for purifications). These are הַמַּיִם הַמִּכְזָּבִים (the failing [spring] waters), הַמַּיִם הַמִּכְזָּבִים בְּשִׁבְעָה (those that fail once in a seven year cycle). (But) הַמַּיִם הַמִּכְזָּבִים (those that fail) at the time of war and in parched years are fit (for purification; m. Par. 8:9).<sup>20</sup>

כְּזָבָה = כְּזָבָה (with a yod) may be an unattested feminine noun of כְּזָב (masc.), "lie, falsehood." The yod may represent a Tiberian mobile šewa;<sup>21</sup> cf. שִׁבְעָפֹן = שִׁבְעָפֹן, and שִׁבִּית = שִׁבִּית, where the yod may indicate a Tiberian segol (see #43, 9:14, #46, 10:5); הַבֹּאוֹת = הַבֹּאוֹת, the waw may indicate a Tiberian long qamaš (see #1, 1:2).

כְּזָבָה (= כְּזָבָה, Qal pres. part. sg. fem.), might have been used as an adjective like masculine כְּזָב (masc.); cf. כָּל הָאָדָם כְּזָב, "every man is a liar" (Ps. 116:11).

Although the above mentioned Rabbinic forms of בֶּן כְּזָבָה, בֶּן כְּזָבָה (Ben Kozeiva/Kozevah/Cozeba) are only variant spellings, the Rabbis used them as a derogatory sense, i.e., "Son of Lie."<sup>21</sup> Since בֶּן, "son of," and אִישׁ, "man of," are interchangeable, בֶּן כְּזָבָה, "son of Cozeba," is the same as אִישׁ כְּזָבָה, "man of Cozeba."<sup>22</sup> Both resemble the verse, וְטוֹב רֶשַׁע מֵאִישׁ כְּזָב, "and it is better to be poor than be a man of lie" (Prov. 19:22; cf. Micah 2:11),<sup>23</sup> as well as the titles אִישׁ הַכְּזָב, "the Man of Lie" (e.g., 6QD 20:14; 1Qp Hab. 5:9-12), and מְשִׁיחַ הַכְּזָב, "the Preacher of Lie" (e.g., 6QD 1:14; 1Qp Hab. 10:9-13), of the Dead Sea Scrolls.<sup>24</sup>

The following locations for township Cozeba have been suggested. MILIK: the Koziba Spring was in Wadi el-Kelt, 4 km southwest of the Mount of Temptation, where in the fifth century the monastery of Χαῖτα existed.<sup>25</sup> PIXNER: Koziba and Dok (7:11) were near Jericho.<sup>26</sup> BEYER: Wadi Kosiba 20 שָׁבוּעַ, "week-year," occurs earlier in the Scroll (1:10). The antonym of נְאֻמִּים is מַיִם כְּזָבִים, "reliable waters" (cf. Isa. 33:16).

21 E.g., "(Scripture states, 'A כְּזָב (star) shall go forth from Jacob' (Num. 24:17), do not read כְּזָב, rather a כְּזָב (liar)" (Lam. Rabbati 2; cf. y. Ta'an. 4:5 [21a]; b. San. 93b, 97b). At the onset of the revolt some Rabbis, e.g., Rabbi Akiba, indeed supported Bar Kokhba's revolt against the Romans. The Bar-Kokhba coins were named כְּזָבִים, "Kozeivah's coins" or "false coins" (e.g., t. Ma'as. Sh. 1:5-6; cf. b. B.Q. 97b). See also, J. Meyshan, "Jewish Coins in Ancient Historiography — The Importance of Numismatics for the History of Israel," PEQ 96 (1964), 46-52; S. Krauss, "Bar Kokba and Bar Kokba War," JE 2, 505b-509a; D.B. Revel, "בֶּן כְּזָבָה אוֹ כְּזָבָה" in OY 3, 167b-69b; S. Yeivin, "בֶּן-כְּזָבָה, שְׁמֵעוֹן" in EH 9, 753-56; S. Abramsky, "Bar Kokhba," EJ 4, 228-39.

22 Cf. יְמִינִי, בֶּן, "son of (the Tribe) Benjamin," i.e., Benjaminite (1 Sam. 9:21; Ps. 7:1), vs. אִישׁ יְמִינִי, "man of (the Tribe) Benjamin," i.e., Benjaminite (2 Sam. 20:1; Esth. 2:5); and both, בֶּן אִישׁ יְמִינִי, "son of a man of Benjamin," i.e., son of a Benjaminite (1 Sam. 9:1).

23 Similar biblical expressions are: דְּבַר כְּזָב, "word of lie" (Prov. 30:8); דְּבָרֵי כְּזָב, "speakers of lie" (Ps. 5:7, 58:4); שְׁמַעֵי כְּזָב, "listeners of lie" (Ezek. 13:19); עֵד כְּזָבִים, "testimony of falsehood" (Prov. 21:28); etc.

24 Cf. F.F. Bruce, "Lies, Man of," EJ 11, 233-34; "Lies, Prophet of," EJ 11, 234-35.

25 Milik, 265 D-20; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 149.

(Χωσιβα, use to dry up) is 2 km south of Dok by Jericho.<sup>27</sup> STEINBERG: Cozeba is about five miles north-northwest of Hebron.<sup>28</sup> KOCHAVI: כּוּזְבָּא, probably the birth place of Bar-Kokhba, seem to be Khirbet Kuweizibe in Judea. It is a ruin on a slope of a low hill south to Wadi El-ʿArub. Nearby is located ʿEin Kuweizibe, a small Arab village. Next to the village there is a spring which feeds a brook located south of Wadi El-ʿArub.<sup>29</sup> The latter is a significant piece of information if the correct reading is הַמִּימָה שֶׁל הַכּוּזְבָּא. Finally, the place כּוּזְבָּא, Cozeba, i.e., “Failure/Falsehood,” might have been named after its failing spring.

(7:15) בָּא (= בָּה) חֲפֹרֵי חֲפֹר אֲמוֹת שְׁלוֹשׁ עַד הַטֹּר (7:15), “in it is hidden, three cubits toward the wall,” “in it three cubits toward the wall is hidden,” or “in it dig three cubits toward the wall” — Regarding the last word, the drawings differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup> - MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: עַד הַטֹּרֵהִיטִי. ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: עַד הַטֹּפֹהִיטִי, with a medial pe that looks like a reš having an additional horizontal line at its bottom. The photographs of the ZUCKERMANS seem to confirm the drawings of Baker and Milik. ALLEGRO<sup>fr</sup>: “to the overflow channel.” ALLEGRO: עַד הַטִּיפ, “toward the overflow tank.” טִיף is from the root of נִטֵף, “drip (of rain water)”; cf. טִיפָּא (A), “duct of overflow,” and נִטֵף, “(rain water) tank” (9:1).<sup>30</sup> MILIK: עַד הַטֹּר, “toward the retaining wall”; alternatively, עַד הַטִּיר.<sup>31</sup> LURIE: עַד הַטִּיף, “toward the base”; טִיף (MH) means “base.”<sup>32</sup> WOLTERS: עַד חֲטוּף, “plundered loot.”<sup>33</sup> The other scholars basically agree with Milik.<sup>34</sup>

עַד, “until, till, toward, up to, as far as, at, by, near,” occurs in two additional places in the Scroll (see #4, 1:12; #23, 5:9).

The drawings of Baker and Milik reads טֹר or טִיר, which may be related to טֹר (masc., BH), “row of stones,” טֹר (masc., BA) and טֹוֹר (JA), “hill,”<sup>35</sup> טִיר (masc., MH) and טִירָה (fem., BH), “settlement,” טִיר (masc., MH), “castle,”<sup>36</sup> and טִירָה (fem., MH), “base, platform, guard.” All of these may be derived from the root נִטַר (JA, BH), “to protect.”<sup>37</sup>

26 Pixner, 349-50 n. 27.

27 Beyer, 229.

28 SB, 369b.

29 M. Kochavi, “הַסֶּקֶר בְּאֶרֶץ יְהוּדָה” in Judaea, Samaria and the Golan, Archaeological Survey 1967-68 (Heb., 1972) 1, 50, 51 photo I.

30 Allegro, 45, 153 n. 158, 156-57 n. 187.

31 Milik, 291-92, 247 C-95, 265 D-20; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141, 149.

32 Lurie, 97-98 and n. 3.

33 Wolters, 44-45.

34 Pixner, 350; Beyer, 229; Vermes, 376; Wise, 195.

35 The Hebrew cognate of טֹרֵסֶר is צֹרֵסֶר, “rock, cliff” (BH; e.g., Exod. 4:25, 17:6), a ṭet-šade interchange.

36 E.g., עָרִים וְלֹא טִירִים, “cities but not castles” (Sifre Num. 180).

37 E.g., טִירֵית הַתִּנּוֹר שֶׁהִיא גְבוּהָה אַרְבָּעָה סָפָחִים, “the platform of an oven that is four

טור (masc.) and טירות (pl. of טירה, fem.) occur in the same verse; their Targumim are נִדְבָכִין and נִדְבָכִיא (emph., Ezek. 46:23). Likewise, the Targum for טִירַת כֶּסֶף, "a silver טִירה,"<sup>38</sup> is כְּנִדְבָכִין דְּכֶסֶף, "like נִדְבָכִין of silver" (Songs 8:9). Thus, טור, טירה, and טירות mean נִדְבָכִין, the plural of נִדְבָךְ, an architectural term meaning, "slab of stone, row of stones, grave stone." נִדְבָךְ appears in the Scroll (see #2, 1:5). Moreover, תור, "row, wall" (8:2, alt.) is related to טור and טירה (tet-taw interchange).<sup>39</sup>

The followings are possible readings, vocalizations, and interpretation of the drawings of Baker and Milik.

עַד הַטּוֹר, "to/at/by the hill."

עַד הַטּוֹר, "to/at/by the row of stones," or "to/at/by the grave stone."

עַד הַטִּיר, "to/at/by the castle," or "to/at/by the settlement."

On the other hand, Allegro's drawing reads טופ or טיפ (the last letter is a regular pe in final position. טיף appears again (11:17), and it is related to הַנְּטָף, "the Natoph." נִטְפָה may be a variant of נִטְפָה, Netophah, both mean "that which is dripping," or בֵּית נִטְפָה, Beth Netophah. It is also possible to vocalize this word as הַנְּטָף, "that which drips," and הַנְּטָף, "the rain water pool" (see #38, 9:1). All of these are derived from the root family טוּף - נִטְף - טָפַח, "to drip."<sup>40</sup> Thus, טוּף וְטִיף connote dripping; cf. Allegro's translation, "overflow tank."<sup>41</sup>

Moreover, פִּלְגִי, "stream" (pl. פִּלְגִים, const. פִּלְגִי) occurs in the Masoretic Text ten times.<sup>42</sup> The Targumim render מֵיִם פִּלְגִי, "streams of water," as טִיפֵי מֵיָא, טִיפֵי מוֹי, טוּפֵי מוֹי; and פִּלְגִי שֶׁמֶן, "streams of oil," as טִיפֵי מִשְׁחָ.<sup>43</sup>

If the reading is טופ, then the Hebrew forms may be: טוּף (sg. abs.), טוּף handbreadth high" (m. Kel. 5:3; mentioned by Milik).

38 This verse is mentioned by Milik. BDB (377a) derives טור, "row," and טירה, "encampment," from the root טור, and compares it with the Arabic ṭara, "go or hover about, approach," and ṭawrun, "limit, border."

39 Also related to טור (masc.), "wall" (BH, e.g., Gen. 49:22; BA, e.g., Ezra 4:12; also Meggilat Ta'anit 2:4), and טוּרָה (BH, MH), "wall, row" (Job 24:11; m. Kil. 4:5, etc.; tet-sin interchange).

40 The roots נָטַף (BH, MH, JA, "to drip"), טוּף (JA, related to צוּף, BH, MH, זוּב, BH, MH, רוּב, JA, "to flow"), טָפַח (JA, related to צָפַח, MH, "to float"), טָפַח (JA, "to drip"), טָפַח (MH, "to drip"), שָׁטַף (BH, MH, JA, "to overflow, rinse"), טִיפָה (MH, "drop"), all may originate from the bilateral root טָף (related to צָף, זָב, and דָּב).

41 This is based on Jastrow's (533a) definition.

42 Prov. 5:16, 21:1; Ps. 119:136; Ps. 1:3; Job 19:6. Rashi renders פִּלְגִי (Ps. 1:3) in Old-French as רִיוִיירֶשׁ, riveyres ("banks, shores, streams," Greenberg, 178). Greenberg notes (295 n. 462), "Rashi, who first used the word riviere, gave it its present meaning: stream." Ibn-Ezra says, "Rivers are pelagim" (Lam. 3:48).

43 The singulars are: טִיפָא - טִיפָא (masc., "duct of overflow, channels"; Jastrow, 533a); טוּפָא (gender is not indicated, Stromm, "stream"); cf. Syriac טוּפָא (AC 4, 57b); טוּפָא (masc., פִּלְגִי, "rivulet"; KS 1, 332a).

(sg. const.), טוּפִים (pl. abs.), and טוּפִי (pl. const.); cf. שְׁנֵי טוּוחִים בְּקֶשֶׁת, “two shooting (distances) with a bow is one mile” (Gen. Rabbah 53).<sup>44</sup> If the reading is טִיפ, then the Hebrew forms may be: טִיף or טָיִף (sg. abs.), טִיף or טִיִּף (sg. const.), טִיפִים (pl. abs.) and טִיפִי (pl. const.).<sup>45</sup> Accordingly, an unattested Hebrew form of the Aramaic טופא־טיפא, “brook, stream,” has been rediscovered in the Copper Scroll.

The following readings, vocalizations, and translation of Allegro’s drawing can be offered.

עַד הַטּוֹף = עַד הַטּוֹף, “to/at/by the brook/stream.”

עַד הַטִּיף = עַד הַטִּיף, “to/at/by the brook/stream.”

עַד הַטִּיף = עַד הַטִּיף, “to/at/by the brook/stream.”

Finally, חַפּוּר־חֶפּוּר אֲמוֹת שְׁלוֹשׁ עַד הַטּוֹרֶה־טּוֹרֶה־טּוֹרֶה־טִיפֶה־טִיפֶה, resembles the following phrases: חַפּוּר־חֶפּוּר אֲמוֹת בָּא אַרְבַּע, “in it (fem.) is hidden/dig four cubits (deep)” (see #11, 2:14); בְּלוֹן כְּלִין וְכֶסֶף כְּכָרִין שִׁבְעִין, “in [it] (masc.) are vessels and seventy talents of silver” (2:6); מִן הַצֶּפוֹן אֲמוֹת שֵׁשׁ, “on the north/northward six cubits up to the cave of the immersion pool” (1:11-12); עַד נִיקְרַת הַטְּבִילָה, “on the north/northward six cubits up to the cave of the immersion pool” (1:11-12); וְעַד הַרְגְּמוֹרֶגֶב הַגָּדוֹל אֲמוֹת שֵׁשִׁין חַפּוּר־חֶפּוּר אֲמוֹת, “and sixty cubits toward the Large Sepulcher/Regeb/ditch are buried three cubits (deep)” (5:9-11). Cf. וּבּוֹ שֵׁעַר צָהָב דָּק, “and in it (masc.) is a yellow thin hair” (Lev. 13:30); כָּרָה שַׁחַת בָּהּ יִפֹּל, “Who digs a pit, into it (fem.) he shall fall” (Prov. 26:27); בּוֹ בַּיּוֹם, “in that (masc.) day” (e.g., m. Yad. 4:1; b. Ber. 28a); בָּהּ שְׁעֵתָא, “in that (fem.) moment” (Dan. 3:6, 15, 4:30, 5:5; BA). Regarding חַפּוּר, see #17, 4:7; for אֲמוֹת, #1, 1:2-3.

(7:16) כַּכּ 60/80 וְהָב כְּכָרִין שְׁתֵּימִ 60/80 k(arsh of) s(ilver) and two talents of gold” — ALLEGRO<sup>pr</sup>: “kk ... of gold, two talents.” ALLEGRO: “80 talents of gold in two pitchers.”<sup>46</sup> MILIK: “60 talents (of silver), two talents of gold.”<sup>47</sup> LURIE: “in two pitchers 60 talents of gold.”<sup>48</sup> The other scholars agree with Milik.<sup>49</sup> It should be added that the numerals differ in the drawings. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: 20+20+20, i.e., 60; ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: 20+20+20+20, i.e., 80.

In this phrase the connective waw, “and,” is missing but understood. One would expect כַּכּ 60/80 וְהָב כְּכָרִין שְׁתֵּימִ 60/80 s(ilver) k(arsh) and two talents of gold.” Cf. שִׁבְעַת כְּדִין אִיסְתָּרִין (= וְאַיסְתָּרִין) אַרְבַּע, “seven pitchers and four staters” (9:2-3); הַכֹּל מִשְׁקַל כְּכָרִין 71 מְנִין (= וּמְנִין) עֶסְרִין, “a total 44 Cf. Jastrow, 522a; AC 4, 20a-21a; ESh<sup>dic</sup> 2, 878a. Rashi’s version of this Midrash is שְׁנֵי טוּחִים, feminine and with a yod (on Gen. 21:16).

45 Cf. תִּישׁ (sg.), תִּישִׁים (sg. const.), תִּישִׁים (pl.), תִּישִׁיתִישִׁי (pl. const.) “male goat.”

46 Allegro, 45, 153 nn. 159-60; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

47 Milik, 291-92; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141.

48 Lurie, 97-98.

49 Pixner, 350; Wolters, 44-45; Garcia Martinez, 462; Beyer, 229; Vermes, 376; Wise 195.

weight of 71 (unspecified) talents and twenty (unspecified) minas" (12:9); זָהָב כָּלִי (= וְכָלִי דָמַע) "(an unspecified amount of) gold (and an undisclosed number of) dedicated vessels," or "a gold (piece/shekel and an undisclosed number of) dedicated vessels" (see #50, 11:1, alt.). Likewise, several times in the Masoretic Text the connective waw is missing; e.g., וְחִלְלָה זֹוֹנָה means וְחִלְלָה וְזֹוֹנָה, "a desecrated woman and/or a harlot" (Lev. 21:14; cf. PsJ); שֶׁמֶשׁ יָרֵחַ means שֶׁמֶשׁ וְיָרֵחַ, "sun and moon," cf. Trg. שֶׁמֶשׁ אֶסְיָהֲרָא, "the sun and the moon" (Hab. 3:11).<sup>50</sup> It can also be compared to the suggested reading of אַחַת אַרְבָּעִין (= אַחַת וְאַרְבָּעִין), "forty-one" (see #1, 1:3), and עֶשְׂרִין אַרְבַּע (= עֶשְׂרִין וְאַרְבַּע), "twenty-one" (#36, 8:13, Baker<sup>dr</sup>, Allegro<sup>dr</sup>).

In the phrase in question both כַּכּ and כַּכְרִין are used to indicate the amount of the material buried. This important internal evidence indicates that כַּכּ is not an abbreviation for כַּכָּר or כַּכְרִין, "talent(s)" (see Appendix A).

It is also possible to read this phrase as זָהָב בְּכַדִּין שְׁתֵּימ 60/80 כַּכּ, "60/80 kk gold in two pitchers," i.e., "60/80 gold kk in two pitchers" (here kk may mean "karsh" only). Again, this would suggest that כַּכּ is not equal to כַּכְרִין, since 60 or 80 talents of gold cannot be stored in two pitchers,<sup>51</sup> while there should not be any problem storing 60 or 80 karsh of gold in two pitchers. There are seven cases in the Scroll where כַּכְרִין, "talents," can be read as בְּכַדִּין, "in pitchers," and once either as כַּכָּר, "talent(s)" or בְּכַד "in one pitcher" (see #5, 1:15; #47, 10-11; Appendix A).

Additional possible translations for זָהָב בְּכַדִּין שְׁתֵּימ 60/80 כַּכּ are: "60/80 s(ilver) k(arsh), (plus an unspecified amount of) gold in two pitchers"; and "60/80 s(ilver) k(arsh), (plus) two gold (pieces/shekels) in pitchers." The latter could mean that both 60/80 s(ilver) k(arsh) and the two gold pieces are in an undisclosed number of pitchers, or only the two gold pieces are in pitchers (i.e., in two pitchers, each pitcher having one gold piece). Often זָהָב or כֶּסֶף with number mean "golden shekel" or "silver shekel," respectively (see #1, 1:4; #59, 12:9).

Finally, this item lacks final letters. הַמִּימ, הַטִּיפ (ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>), כַּכְרִין, and שְׁתֵּימ, all have medial letters in final position.

50 See Ibn-Ezra on Lev. 21:14; Radak on 1 Sam. 6:19.

51 This has been pointed out by Allegro (135 n. 8).

ITEM 33

8:1 [בא]מא שבדרך מזרח בית
8:2 אוצר שמזרח אחין
8:3 כלי דמע וספרין אל הכלין

- 8:1 [In the ca]nal, which is at the road east of the store-
8:2 house, which is east of 'Aḥim,
8:3 (there is an unspecified number of) dedicated vessels, and (there are) documents in the vessels.

COMMENTARY

(8:1-2) [בא]מא\מא[בא]מא שבדרך מזרח בית אוצר שמזרח (= שבמזרח) אחין (8:1-2), "[In/at/by a/the ca]nal, which is at/by a/the road east of (the) storehouse, which is east of (the) 'Aḥim" — ALLEGRO<sup>pt</sup>: "...] which is in the road to the East, in it treasure ..." (i.e., ... שבדרך מזרח בו אוצר ...). ALLEGRO: [בבי?]בא שבדרך, "[In the drain]pipe (?) which is in the eastern path to the [T]reasury which is beside the Entrance." Alternately, [במס]בא, "in the circular stair, passage"; while [בא]מא is rejected. ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>: "[In the drain]pipe which is in the eastern path to the Treasury which is east of the Entrance." MILIK: [בא]מא שבדרך מזרח בית אחצר שמזרח אחזר, "[In the aque]duct which (runs along) the road to the east of Bet Aḥzor, situated to the east of Aḥzor." אחצר and אחזר may be phonetic spellings of חצר - חצור.<sup>2</sup> GREENFIELD: Milik's readings of אחצר, אחזר, and their possible identification with חצר - חצור are questionable.<sup>3</sup> LURIE: [בא]מא שבדרך מזרח בית אוצר, "[In the water cha]nnel which is in the eastern road [to] the storehouse from east of the gate." אתון is like אתונא ("fire-place," TO, Exod. 19:18); or איתון means "gate" (Ezek. 40:15; y. 'Eruv. 5:5).<sup>4</sup> PIXNER: "At the water conduit on the east of the road of Beth Aḥṣar east of Eḥzer"; they are identified with Beth Akkar and El-Ekser in the vicinity of the Yarmok river.<sup>5</sup> THORION: בדרך מזרח בית אוצר is a construct set of four

1 Greenfield, 140a.

2 Allegro, 47 (the right bracket should be before "In"; a typographical error), 153 nn. 161-65; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

3 Milik, 292-93, 228 B-4b, 229 B-13c, 242 C-58, 267 D-23-24; Milik<sup>F</sup>, 141, 149. Bet Ahsor, Ahzor in the English translation; Hasor and Hazor in the French translation.

4 Lurie, 98 and n. 2. האתון is a typographical error for אתון; also the beginning of the translation should be bracketed).

nouns.<sup>6</sup> HURVITZ: [בא]מא המים שבדרך מזרח בית אוצר means באמת המים שבדרך מזרח בית אוצר, i.e., "In the water channel which is in the road from east to the treasure house." בית אוצר is a Late and Post-Biblical Hebrew administrative-economic term influenced by Imperial Aramaic.<sup>7</sup> WOLTERS: [בא]מא שבדרך מזרח בירא הצר שמזרח אהוד, "In the aqueduct which is on the road east of Bira, the rock which is east of 'Aḥud."<sup>8</sup> BEYER: [בא]מא שבדרך מזרח בִּית אוצר שמזרח אהוד, "[In the] aqueduct, which is located on the (north-south) road, there is in the east a storehouse, which is located in the east of Eḥud."<sup>9</sup> WISE: "[In the aq]ueduct that is on the road east of the storehou[se]."<sup>10</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ and VERMES agree with Milik.<sup>11</sup>

Due to lacunae at both ends of line 8:1, as well as the problems of identifying some letters, it is very difficult to read this item. Most probably the first word started with the preposition bet, as in most items. The two letters after the first lacuna are a bet/kaf/mem and an 'alef.

Using only the limited vocabulary of the Scroll, the following are nine possible restorations, readings, vocalizations, and translations for the first word.

בְּאַדְמָהוּבְּאַדְמָה = [בְּאַדְמָהוּבְּאַדְמָה]מָא, "in (the) ground/earth" — cf. בְּשִׁיחַ, "in the clay pit" (see #18, 4:9).

בְּאַמְהוּבְּאַמְה = [בְּאַמְהוּבְּאַמְה]מָא, "in/at/by a/the canal" (Milik) — cf. בְּאַמְהַ- (7:3; see #21, 5:1).

בְּבִירָהוּבְּבִירָה = [בְּבִירָהוּבְּבִירָה]מָא, "in/at/by a/the drain" (Allegro) — cf. בְּבִירָהוּבְּבִירָה (12:8; see #42, 9:11).

בְּבִירָהוּבְּבִירָה = [בְּבִירָהוּבְּבִירָה]מָא, "in/at/by a/the pool" — cf. בְּבִירָהוּבְּבִירָה (see #11, 2:13).

בְּחֹמֶהוּבְּחֹמֶה = [בְּחֹמֶהוּבְּחֹמֶה]מָא, "in/at/by a/the (city) wall" — cf. בְּחֹמֶהוּבְּחֹמֶה (see #10, 2:10).

בְּמָבוֹאֵהוּבְּמָבוֹא = [בְּמָבוֹאֵהוּבְּמָבוֹא]מָא, "in/at/by a/the entrance/alley" — cf. בְּמָבוֹאֵהוּבְּמָבוֹא (see #56, 11:16).

בְּמִסְבֵּהוּבְּמִסְבֵּה = [בְּמִסְבֵּהוּבְּמִסְבֵּה]מָא, "in/at/by a/the staircase" (Allegro alt.) — cf. בְּמִסְבֵּה, "the staircase" (see #5, 1:13).

בְּמִסְבֵּהוּבְּמִסְבֵּה = [בְּמִסְבֵּהוּבְּמִסְבֵּה]מָא, "in/at/by a/the stone block" — cf. בְּמִסְבֵּה, "the stone block" (for the various vocalizations, see #52, 11:6).

בְּכֹכְהוּבְּכֹכְה = [בְּכֹכְהוּבְּכֹכְה]מָא, "in/at/by a/the burial niche" — cf. בְּכֹכְהוּבְּכֹכְה (see #59, 12:8, alt.; also #56, 12:3).

5 Pixner, 350 and n. 28.

6 Thorion, 170.

7 A. Hurvitz, "בית-(ה)אוצר — The History of a Biblical Administrative-Economic Term," EI 24 (1993), 79, 81, 234b*. Hurvitz does not mention האוצר of the Copper Scroll.

8 Wolters, 46-47.

9 Beyer, 229.

10 Wise, 195.

11 Garcia Martinez, 462; Vermes, 376.

The 'alef of אוֹצָר is recognizable in BAKER's drawing, is more clearly evident in MILK's, and seems to have something attached to it in ALLEGRO's (which may be a crack). The next letter is a waw in BAKER's and ALLEGRO's drawings, while in MILK's it is a peculiar sign that may be two waws. The photographs of the ZUCKERMANS seem to support Milik's drawing. The suggested reading is אוֹצָר (= אוֹצָר), with double waw (for such spellings, see #22, 5:5-6). Both אוֹצָר and בֵּית אוֹצָר have the same meaning, the first is typical Biblical Hebrew, while the second is Late Biblical and Mishnaic Hebrew, as well as Aramaic; cf. מְנוֹס - מְנוֹס (BH, also CS) and בֵּית מְנוֹס (MH; see #5, 1:13). Moreover, the Targum of עָרֵי מִסְכְּנוֹת, "store cities," is בֵּית אוֹצָרֵא (TO) and בֵּית אוֹצָרֵי (PsJ), "storehouses," i.e., בֵּית אוֹצָרוֹת (Exod. 1:11).<sup>12</sup> בֵּית, "house of," as the first element of a compound toponym connotes a city (see #7, 2:3). Accordingly, בֵּית אוֹצָר can be rendered as Beth-'Otšar, "storehouse," or "store city."

The following are additional possible readings, vocalizations, and interpretations for this problematic term.

בֵּית הַיּוֹצֵר = בֵּית הַיּוֹצֵר, "potter's house," an 'alef-he interchange (from the root יצר, "to form, fashion") — cf. "Get up and go down בֵּית הַיּוֹצֵר (to the potter's house) ... and I (Jeremiah) went down בֵּית הַיּוֹצֵר (to the potter's house)" (Jer. 18:2-3).<sup>13</sup>

בֵּית אֵיזְרוֹאֵיִצֵּר = בֵּית אֵזֶר (plene), Beth Ezer, "House/City of Ezer" — cf. אֵזֶר, Ezer the chief of the Horites (Gen. 36:21,27,30; 1 Chron. 38,42).

בֵּית אֵיזְרוֹאֵיִצֵּר = בֵּית הַיּוֹצֵר (plene; 'alef-he interchange), or בֵּית יֵזֶר (with a prosthetic 'alef), Beth Jezer (House/City of Jezer); cf. יֵזֶר, Jezer, the son of Naphtali (Gen. 46:24; 1 Chron. 7:13).

בֵּית אֵיזְרוֹאֵיִצֵּר = בֵּית אֵזֶל (plene; lamed-reš interchange), Beth-ezel — cf. הָאֵזֶל, Beth-ezel in Judah (Micah 1:11). Regarding אֵזֶל, see #18, 4:9-10.

The second word consists of the letters šin, bet/mem, zayin/yod, dalet/reš, he/het/taw, and an 'alef which could be the first letter of the third word. This word can be read as follows.

שְׁמוֹרֶחַ, שְׁמוֹרְחָא, or שְׁמוֹרְחָא — In these possible readings the preposition bet is missing but understood; cf. וְעַד שְׁעַר הַמַּיִם מִזְרָח instead of וְעַד שְׁעַר הַמַּיִם בְּמִזְרָח, "and till the Water Gate in the east" (Neh. 12:37; see Mešudat David). Accordingly, שְׁמוֹרְחָא means שְׁבִמְזָרְחָא, "which is in (the) east of"; שְׁמוֹרְחָא = שְׁבִמְזָרְחָה means שְׁבִמְזָרְחָה, "which is in its (fem.) east," in apposition to אֲמָה (fem., "canal"), i.e., which is located east of the canal; and שְׁמוֹרְחָא = שְׁבִמְזָרְחוֹ means שְׁבִמְזָרְחוֹ, "which is in its (masc.) east," in apposition to בֵּית אוֹצָר (masc.), i.e., which is located east of (the) store-

12 See J. Guttman, "אוֹצָר, אֵזֶר" in EB 1, 165-68; also the above noted article by Hurvitz.

13 Here בֵּית הַיּוֹצֵר means לְבֵית פְּחָא, as its Targum indicates לְבֵית פְּחָא, "to the potter's house of" (see also Mešudat David). Cf. שִׁבְיַת הַכֶּרֶם instead of שְׁבִיבֵית כְּרֶם, "which is in Beth-cherem," in the Scroll (see #46, 10:5).

house/Beth 'Oṣar' (archaic spelling; see #13, 3:9).

שְׁבִירְחָהּ = שְׁבִירְחָהּ = שְׁבִירְחָהּ, "which is in Jericho" (archaic spelling) — cf. יְרִיחָהּ (1 Kgs 16:34), יְרִיחוֹ, and יְרִחוֹ (see #24, 5:13). Regarding archaic spellings, see #13, 3:9).

שְׁבִירְחָהּ\שְׁבִירְחָהּ or שְׁבִירְחָהּ\שְׁבִירְחָהּ = שְׁבִירְחָהּ\שְׁבִירְחָהּ, "which is in (the) Zerah/Zerahah" — cf. the personal names זֶרַח, Zerah (e.g., Gen. 36:17), and זֶרַחִיָּה, Zerahiah (two individuals, Ezra 7:4, 8:4).<sup>14</sup>

The first two letters of the third word are 'alef and he/het/taw, for the rest the drawings differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: a space, dalet/reš, and waw/yod. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: waw/yod and dalet/reš. ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: waw/yod and final nun. The photographs of the ZUCKERMANS seem to support the Milik's drawing. As mentioned, the 'alef could be the last letter of the previous word. Since nun and reš are interchangeable (cf. חָפֶן vs. חָפֹר), some of the suggested reading 'pairs' may have the same meaning.

אַחִינֹאֲחֹם (ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>, with a het) may be identical with אַחִינֹאֲחֹם, a village near Jerusalem (mem-nun interchange). E.g.,

Rabbi Yose said, "also wheat from Karzaim and כְּפַר אַחִים (Village of 'Aḥim), although they were near Jerusalem, they use to bring (meal offerings) from them" (baraita, b. Men. 85a).

Rabbi Yose says, "also wheat from Barihaim and כְּפַר אַחֹם (Village of 'Aḥum), these were near Jerusalem and from there they use to bring (meal offerings) from them (t. Men. 9:2).<sup>15</sup>

אַחִים (pl. of אָח, masc.) means "brothers" (e.g., Gen. 13:8). Thus, כְּפַר אַחִים is "Village of (the) Brothers." On the other hand, אַחֹם can be explained as חֹם, "brown" (e.g., Gen. 30:32), or חֹם, "summer, heat" (e.g., Gen. 8:22; both from the root חָמַם, "to be hot"), with a prosthetic 'alef. Thus, כְּפַר אַחֹם\אַחֹם = אַחֹם\חֹם\חֹם could mean, "Brown/Summer/Hot Village."

'Aḥim/'Aḥum may be an additional toponym near Jerusalem, mentioned in the Scroll. The priests of Jerusalem must have had good relations with this village. Accordingly, בֵּית אוֹצָר could be: (1) A storehouse located east of this village, from where wheat was taken to the Temple. (2) A toponym east of 'Aḥim/'Aḥum named after its storehouses.

אַחִיָּה could be a variant of אַחִיָּה, Ahiah (he-final nun interchange). Ahiah is the name of nine persons in the Bible, among them a chief in the time of Nehemiah (Neh. 10:27). אַחִיָּה may be a variant of אַחִיָּה.

אַחִי (with a waw), Ahio — Scripture mentions three persons with this name (e.g., 2 Sam. 6:3,4). It may be a variant of אַחִיָּה.

אַהֲדָד (Milik<sup>dr</sup>; cf. Beyer), Ehud — Scriptures mentions two persons named

14 The names זֶרַח and זֶרַחִיָּה, as well as זֶרַח are from the root זָרַח, "to rise, shine."

15 Zuckerman's edition of the Tosephta has כְּפַר אַחֹם instead of כְּפַר אַחֹם. See also, ETG 2, 23a.

Ehud (Judg. 3:15-16; 1 Chron. 7:10). It may be a variant of אֹהֶד, Ohad (Gen. 46:10; Exod. 6:15).

אֶתָן (Allegro<sup>dr</sup>), a variant of אֵיתָן, “strong, mighty,” also Ethan, a personal name (e.g., 1 Kgs 5:11). אֵיתָן is occasionally associated with נַחַל and נָהָר, “wadi, river” (Deut. 21:4; Amos 5:24; Ps. 74:15).<sup>16</sup> The plural is אֶתָנִים־אֵיתָנִים (Job 12:19; 1 Kgs 8:2; Micah 6:2).

אֶתָר (Milik<sup>dr</sup>) or אֶתָן (Allegro<sup>dr</sup>), Athor, a toponym; cf. דֶּרֶךְ הָאֶתָרִים, “the Road of Atharim” (Num. 21:1). אֶתָרִים (pl.) may have a prosthetic <sup>3</sup>alef, i.e., תָרִים, the plural of תֹר (masc.), “spy” (from the root תֹר, “to spy, explore”). The waw may represent a Tiberian long qamas; cf. הַבָּאוֹת = הַבָּאוֹת (see #1, 1:2). Thus, דֶּרֶךְ הַתָרִים means “the Road of the Spies.”<sup>17</sup> דֶּרֶךְ is mentioned in the previous line. Since nun and reš are often interchanged, דֶּרֶךְ הָאֶתָרִים could be a variant of דֶּרֶךְ הָאֵיתָנִים, “the Road of the Mighty Ones”; cf. דֶּרֶךְ הַמֶלֶךְ, “the Road of the King” (e.g., Num. 20:17). Accordingly, שְׁמֹרֶחַ אֶתָרִי־אֶתָן may mean, “which is east of (the) Ethon/Athor/Etan-/Mighty (river/place).”

אֶתָן (Allegro<sup>dr</sup>) = אֵיתָן (defective), “entrance” (from the root אָתָה, “to come/go”); e.g., וְעַל פְּנֵי הַשַּׁעַר הַיְאֶתָן (כֹּ, הָאֵיתָן ק), “and from the front of the gate of the entrance” (Ezek. 40:15; mentioned by Lurie).<sup>18</sup> Thus, שְׁמֹרֶחַ אֶתָן could mean, “which is east of the entrance” (cf. Allegro<sup>rev</sup>).

אֶהֶר = אָהֶר (plene), Aher — Scripture mentions the personal name אָהֶר, Aher (1 Chron. 7:12).<sup>19</sup>

חֹרוֹרִים־חֹרוֹרִים (masc., pl. חֹרוֹרִים־חֹרוֹרִים) means “hole, cavity” (from the root חָרַר, “to bore, pierce”). E.g., הִנֵּה עֹבְרִים יֵצְאִים מִן הַחֹרִים אֲשֶׁר הִתְחַבְּאוּ שָׁם, “behold, Hebrews are coming out from the cavities where they hid them-

16 Cf. נָהָר אֵיתָן וְנָהָר גַּמְדָּא, “Ethan river and the Gamda river” in Babylon (b. Suk. 18a).

17 Cf. אֹרֶחַ אֶלְיָא ... אֹרֶחַ מְאֶלְיָא (PsJ), “the road of the spies,” and אֹרֶחַ דִּי סְלִיקוּ בֵּה יִלְלִיָּה (Frag.), “(to) the road in which the spies went up (to Canaan).” See also Rashi, Rashbam, Bekhor Shor, Ibn-Ezra, Ramban, and Peruṣ Jonathan.

18 Rashi comments that it was so named because it was used as an entrance and exit of the Temple Court, and adds that אֵיתָן is the Targum of בֵּינְיָה, “entrance.” The Targum of אֵיתָן is שַׁעַר מְצִיעָה, “the middle gate.” Radak wonders on this Targum. Most scholars derive אֵיתָן from the root אָתָה, “to come,” and both אֵיתָן and בֵּינְיָה are translated as “entrance, entry” (e.g., BDB, 87b, 99a; JPS<sup>i</sup>; Yehoash; ESh<sup>con</sup> 1, 103a, 309a; ESh<sup>dic</sup> 1, 84b). According to Steinberg (37), מְצִיעָה is the correct Targum, since אֵיתָן is a variant of אִישׁוֹן (Prov. 7:9, 20:20, ketiv; PsJ, Gen. 19:15) and אִישׁוֹן (Prov. 20:20, qeri), all mean “middle.” One can add that חֲשֶׁךְ (כֹּ, בְּאִישׁוֹן) and its Targum שְׁרָגְיָה נִרְעָה שְׁרָגְיָה mean, “his lamp will go out in middle of the darkness” (Prov. 20:20). Thus, both אִישׁוֹן and its Aramaic cognate אֶתָנָא mean “middle” (šin-taw interchange; cf. חֶרֶת. חֶרֶת; see #34, 8:4). The vocalization of the ketiv as הֵי־אֵתָן is that of Gordis (155).

19 אֶהֶר could mean “the sons of the other one,” i.e., the sons of a unnamed person (see Rashi and Radak; also BDB 31a). Cf. Elisha ben Avuyah, who later denounced Judaism, is referred as אֶהֶר, “the other one” (e.g., b. Hag. 16b).

selves" (1 Sam. 14:11);<sup>20</sup> cf. בְּצִירְחֵי הַחֹרִין, "in/among the catacombs of the cavities" (alt.; see #40, 9:7). חור is a synonym of סֶדֶק; e.g., חוֹרֵי הַמְּעָרָה, "the holes of the ritual bath and the fissures of the ritual bath" (m. Miq. 6:1; see #22, 5:5). Thus, שְׁמֹרְחָא חור = שְׁמֹרְחָא חור could mean "which (in) its (fem.) east (there is) a cavity," i.e., east of the canal or storehouse/Beth 'Oṣar (etc.) there is a cavity.

תור (Milik<sup>dr</sup>), "row, wall" (e.g., Esth. 2:12; 1QS 6:11; m. Kil. 2:7), is related to שור, "wall," and טור, "slab of stone, etc." (tet-šin-taw interchanges; see #32, 7:15). Thus, שְׁמֹרְחָא תור = שְׁמֹרְחָא תור could mean "which (in) its (fem.) east (there is) a wall," i.e., east of the canal there is a wall, or east of the storehouse/Beth 'Oṣar (etc.) there is a wall.

Finally, it is possible that some of the above mentioned personal names, such as Aher, Ahiah, Ahio, Zerah, were also ancient Palestinian toponyms.

(8:3) בְּלִיכְלֵי דְמַע וּסְפָרִין אֶל הַכֵּלִין, "(there is an unspecified number of) dedicated vessels, and (there are) documents in the vessels" — For a detailed discussion of the dema<sup>c</sup> vessels, see Appendix D.

The second half of this phrase have been analyzed as follows. ALLEGRO<sup>pr</sup>: "and books on the spot." ALLEGRO: וּסְפָרִין אֶל הַכֵּלִין, "and scrolls in amongst the jar"; cf. אֶל הַכֵּלִים, "in among the baggage" (1 Sam. 10:22), and אֶל קִצִּים, "in among thorns" (Jer. 4:3). Also, "All scrolls of Scripture were deemed to make the hands unclean ..." (m. Kel. 15:4; etc.).<sup>21</sup> MILIK: וּסְפָרִין, "and books. Do not appropriate (them)!".<sup>22</sup> LURIE: וּסְפָרִין אֶל הַכֵּלִין, "and books in the vessels."<sup>23</sup> PIXNER, אֶל תַּבַּס, "and books: don't tread on it."<sup>24</sup> SHARVIT prefers the reading of Allegro.<sup>25</sup> WOLTERS: וּסְפָרִי וְאֵלֶּת כֶּסֶף, "and my scrolls, and a bar of silver." אֵלֶּת is the construct form of אֵלָה (MH), "lance, pole, bar," a cognate of אֵלֶּתָא (A). סְפָרִי, "my books," is like לְבוּשִׁי, "my vestments" (3:9), and טְהוֹרֹתִי, "my pure things" (11:9), with a first person plural possessive suffix. Wolters suggests that "the composer of the Copper Scroll must have been a leading priest, perhaps the High Priest of the Qumran community."<sup>26</sup> MCCARTER: בְּלִי דְמַע וּסְפָרוֹ, "vessels of dema<sup>c</sup> and its record and"; the reference is to some kind of document accompanying the vessels, and identifying its source or destination.<sup>27</sup> McCarter's reading would be better if he would read it as בְּלִי דְמַע וּסְפָרוֹ, "a vessel of dema<sup>c</sup>

20 Radak explains חוֹרִים as מְעָרוֹת, "caves" (Isa. 11:18, 42:5).

21 Allegro, 47, 153 nn. 166-67; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

22 Milik, 292-93, 249 C-117; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141.

23 Lurie, 98 and n. 3.

24 Pixner, 351 (there is a typographical error in the transliteration).

25 "Iyyunim," 132 n. 42.

26 "Vocabulary," 490 #41; "Notes," 593-594; "Analysis," 249-51; "History," 292-93; Wolters, 36-37, 46-47, 52-53.

27 McCarter, 135.

and its record and”; or כְּלִי דְמַע וּסְפָרוֹ ו- “a vessel of dema<sup>c</sup> and its record(s) (and).” GARCIA MARTINEZ: “and books and a bar of silver.”<sup>28</sup> BEYER: “וספרין אלתכל,” “and scrolls. Eltukal.”<sup>29</sup> VERMES: “and books and a bar of sil[ver].”<sup>30</sup> WISE: “and ten books.” The number is at least ten; it is partially damaged.<sup>31</sup>

וּסְפָרִין, the connective waw plus the plural of סֵפֶר (masc.), “documents, books” (see #25, 6:5). כְּתָב, a synonym of סֵפֶר, also occurs in the Scroll (see #60, 12:11; Appendix E).

The drawings of the last word differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: he/ḥet/taw, bet/kaf followed by two-three letter fragments. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: he/ḥet/taw, bet/kaf/mem followed by a letter fragment of a lamed or samekh. ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: הַכְּלִין in a relatively clear script. Since Baker’s drawing can be read as ...הכ, Milik’s as הכל, plus the photographs of the ZUCKERMANS seem to support Allegro’s drawing, the correct reading seems to be הַכְּלִין, “the vessels.”

Frequently in the Masoretic Text the prepositions אֶל and עַל are interchanged;<sup>32</sup> while several times אֶל and עַל mean ב-.<sup>33</sup> Thus, אֶל הַכְּלִים, “upon the vessels,” or בְּהַכְּלִים = בְּכַלִּים, “in/by/among the vessels” (cf. Allegro, Lurie).

The phrase הַכְּלִין אֶל דְּמַע וּסְפָרִין is ambiguous. It can mean: (1) “(There is) a dedicated vessel, plus (there are an unspecified number of) documents on/among/in the (other, perhaps earthen) vessels.” (2) “(There are an

28 Garcia Martinez, 462.

29 Beyer, 229.

30 27. Vermes, 376.

31 Wise, 195.

32 E.g., וַיִּפֹּל עַל פָּנָיו אֶרְצָה, “and he fell upon his face to the ground,” Josh. 5:14, 2 Sam. 14:12, and Josh. 7:6, 1 Sam. 17:49, respectively). Such אֶל is usually rendered by the Targum as עַל. There is a tendency in Samuel, Kings, Jeremiah and Ezekiel to use the preposition אֶל instead of עַל (see BDB, 41a; SB, 640a). The scribe of 4Q Sam<sup>c</sup> wrote עַל for אֶל (2:12), he also wrote עָלִי, rewrote an ’alef on top of the ’ayin to read אֵלִי, then placed an ’alef supralinearly above the corrected letter (2:24). According to E.C. Ulrich, this type of correction indicates general loss of distinction of the laryngeals (“4QSam<sup>c</sup>: A Fragmentary Manuscript of 2 Samuel 14-15 from the Scribe of the Serek Hayyahad [1QS],” BASOR #235 [1979], 3, 7, 15). See also #1, 1:1.

33 E.g., the Targum of הִנֵּה הוּא נִחְבֵּא אֶל הַכְּלִים is הִנֵּה הוּא טָמִיר בְּמַיָּא, “behold, he hides himself among the vessels” (1 Sam. 10:22); מַיִם חַיִּים אֶל כְּלִי, “living waters into the vessel”; cf. מִי מְבוֹעַ לָגוּ מֵאֵן דְּפָחַר, “well water into an earthen vessel” (Num. 19:17; see also Hizquni); בָּגוּ אֲרוֹנָא, (PsJ), “in the chest” (e.g., Exod. 25:16); and explained as בְּאֲרוֹן by Rashi, Hizquni, Mešudat Zion (1 Sam. 10:22). Rashi says that there are cases where עַל is in the place of ב-; e.g., וְעַל חֶרֶבְךָ, (TO), “and upon your sword,” means בְּחֶרֶבְךָ, “by your sword” (Gen. 27:40); עַל צְבָאָתָם, (TO, PsJ), “on their legions,” means בְּצְבָאוֹתָם, “by their legions” (Exod. 6:26). See also Gesenius’ Hebrew and Chaldean Lexicon to the Old Testament Scripture (1857), 46b; also BDB, 39b.

unspecified amount of) dedicated vessels, and (there are an unspecified number of) documents on/among/in the (same) vessels.” And (3) “(there are an unspecified amount of) dedicated vessels, and (there are an unspecified number of) documents on/among/in the (other, perhaps earthen) vessels.”

This is similar to the equally ambiguous phrase, שָׁמ קָלָל בּוֹ סֵפֶר אֶחָד תַּחְתּוֹ, כֹּכ 42, “there is a qalal vessel, in it is a document, below it are 42 s(ilver) k(arsh),” which could mean, that the document is in the qalal vessel, and below the qalal vessel there is 42 karsh of silver, or there is 42 karsh of silver under the document, and both are in the qalal vessel (see #25, 6:4-6). Many scrolls found in the Qumran caves were hidden in earthen vessels. One can speculate that this item refers to such scroll.

There is a theory that the Qumran caves were actually genizah deposits. Biblical and Rabbinic sources describe such ancient practice.

לְקוֹחַ אֵת הַסְּפָרִים הָאֵלֶּה אֶת סֵפֶר הַמִּקְנָה הַזֶּה וְאֵת הַחֲתוּם וְאֵת סֵפֶר הַגְּלוּי הַזֶּה וְנִתְּתָם
בְּכָלִי חֶרֶשׁ לְמַעַן יַעֲמְדוּ יָמִים רַבִּים:

Take these documents, this deed of purchase, and the sealed one, and this open text, and put them into an earthen vessel, so that they may last a long time (Jer. 32:14).

וְאָמַר רַבָּא סֵפֶר תּוֹרָה שֶׁבָּלָה גּוֹנִיזִין אוֹתוֹ אֶצֶל תַּלְמִיד חָכָם ... אָמַר רַב אֲחָא בַר יַעֲקֹב
וּבְכָלִי חֶרֶס שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר וְנִתְּתָם בְּכָלִי חֶרֶשׁ לְמַעַן יַעֲמְדוּ יָמִים רַבִּים.

And Rava said, “A Torah Scroll which decayed, one hides it next to a Talmud scholar. ...” Rav Aḥa’ bar Jacob said (adding), “and in an earthen vessel, as it is written, ‘and put them into an earthen jar, so that they may last a long time (Jer. 32:14)’” (b. Meg. 26b).

It was taught by the Rabbis (in a baraita): Six acts were carried out by King Hezekiah (of Judah); in three (acts) the Rabbis agreed with him, and in three (acts) they disagreed with him.... (Hezekiah) ḥafatz סֵפֶר רְפוּאוֹת (hid away the Book of Healings) and (the Rabbis) agreed with him (b. Ber. 10b; b. Pes. 56a).

One is not permitted to write (in Scripture) with gold. A precedent happened: In the Torah [Scroll] of Alexander every Divine Names were written with gold. The case came before the Sages, and they ruled: תִּגְנֹז (it shall be committed to genizah) (Sof. 1:9; cf. b. Shab. 103b).

According to the Halakhah, what must be committed to genizah and how it has to be done, is a very complicated subject.<sup>34</sup> Regarding genizah, see #2, 1:5; #25, 6:4; #54, 11:9; and “The Copper Scroll and the Dead Sea Scrolls” in the Discussion.

34 For Genizah in general, see E.N. Adler, “Genizah,” JE 5, 612a-613b; J.D. Eisenstein, “גְּנִיזָה” in OY 3, 304a-305a; A.M. Habermann, “גְּנִיזָה” in HE 11, 82-86; “Genizah,” EJ 7, 404-07; Y. Horowitz, “גְּנִיזָה” in EH “Supplement to Volumes 1-16,” 786-87. Regarding the Halakhah, see “גְּנִיזָה” in ET<sup>H</sup> 6, 232-39; “הִגְדָּה” in ET<sup>H</sup> 8, 193-200. Although גְּנִיזָה is considered by some as the Persian ganza, “treasury,” the root גָּנַז (BH, MH, JA), “to hide, save, collect,” may simply be a variant of כָּנַס (BH, MH) and כָּנַשׁ (JA), “to gather,” gimmel-kaf, as well as zayin-samekh-šin letter interchanges (cf. ESH<sup>dic</sup> 1, 361a).

ITEM 34

בגי החיצוֹנָא כתב חרת 8:4
 על האבן חפור אמות שבע 8:5
 עסרא תחתיה כספ 8:6
 וזהב ככ 17 8:7

- 8:4 In the Outer Valley, (there is) an engraved script
 8:5 on a stone monument, seventeen
 8:6 cubits below it is buried (an unspecified amount of) silver
 8:7 and gold (plus) 17 k(arsh of) s(ilver).

COMMENTARY

(8:4) בְּגִי הַחִיצוֹנָא, “In/at/by the Outer Valley” — The Outer Valley seems to be a toponym like גִּי הַסְּכָכָא, “the Valley of Secacah” (see #20, 4:13). חִיצוֹן (masc.) and חִיצוֹנָה (fem.), “outer,” like עֲלִיוֹן (masc., 1:8) and עֲלִיוֹנָה (fem., 12:4), “upper,” are adjectives. Cf. הַחֲצֵר הַחִיצוֹנָה, “the outer (Temple) court” (Ezek. 10:5); חוֹמָה חִיצוֹנָה לְעִיר דָּוִד, “an outer wall for the city of David” (2 Chron. 33:14); כּוֹתֵל הַחִיצוֹן הִיא חוֹמָתָהּ, “the outer wall is its city-wall” (Sifra Behar 57; cf. y. Ma’as. 3:4 [12b]).

In the three drawings the upper part of a lamed from the line below extents completely between the bet and gimmel. It is possible that the scribe wrote a yod between the letters bet and gimmel, and the lamed linked up with that yod; cf. the drawings of Baker and Milik in lines 8:9-10.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the reading would be, בְּיִגִי, with an extra yod; cf. בִּיקְבֵּר, “in/at/by a/the grave,” in Milik’s drawing (see #14, 3:11). The yod may represent a Tiberian šewa;<sup>2</sup> cf. the extra yod in שִׁבְצָפוֹן, “in/at/by (the) north of” (see #43, 9:14), and in שְׁיִבִית, “which is (in/at/by the) house of” (see #46, 10:5).

The following locations have been suggested for גִּי הַחִיצוֹנָא. ALLEGRO: חֲזִיוִן, Valley of Vision (Isa. 22:1, 5).<sup>2</sup> MILIK: Wadi en-Nar below Bir-Ayyub.<sup>3</sup> PIXNER: in the Land of Damascus.<sup>4</sup> BEYER: outside of Dok.<sup>5</sup>

1 In other cases, often the lamed extends into the above line, e.g., 5:10-13.

2 Allegro, 151-52 n. 168.

3 Milik, 268 D-27.

4 Pixner, 350-51 n. 29.

5 Beyer, 229.

defectively spelled, and/or may have letter interchanges. Moreover, this word may decide the possible reading of the previous one.

The next two words are עַל הָאֶבֶן. The prepositions עַל, אֶל, and -בַּ are interchangeable (see #33, 8:3); while אֶבֶן, “stone,” could also denote “monument” and “grave stone” (see #47, 10:9). Therefore, עַל הָאֶבֶן can be rendered as, “upon/at/by the stone/monument/grave stone.”

The following are possible readings, vocalizations, and interpretations for this phrase.

בְּתֹךְ הַדְּרוֹהֶדֶר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “in the midst of the circle/stable upon/by/at the stone/monument” (cf. Allegro and Lurie) — הֶדֶר or הָדֶר, defective of הִדְּרִיר or הִדְּוִיר, means “the circle/stable” (דוּר and דִּיר are from the root דוּר - דִּיר, “to dwell, make circle”; see #37; 8:14).

כְּתָב הֶדֶר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) a beautiful script upon the stone/monument” — הֶדֶר, defective of הִדְּוִיר, means “beautiful” (Qal pass. part. masc. sg. of the root הִדְּרַ, “to honor, adorn”; BH, MH, BA, JA); e.g., יְהוָה הֶדְוִיר בְּלְבוּשׁוֹ, “This One Who is majestic in His Rainment” (Isa. 63:1; Tanach).

כְּתָב הֶדֶר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) a beautiful script upon the stone/monument” — הֶדֶר (masc., BH) means “beauty” (also from the root הִדְּרַ); e.g., פְּרִי עֵץ הֶדֶר, “majestic tree fruit” (Lev. 23:40).

כְּתָב הֶדְרוֹחֶדֶר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) a rounded script upon the stone/monument” — הֶדֶר or הָדֶר, defective of הִדְּוִיר or הִדְּוִיר, mean “rounded” (Qal pass. part. masc. sg. of the root family הִדְּרַ, חִדְּרַ, and חִזְרַ, “to surround”; MH, JA; he-ḥet and/or daled-zayin interchanges); e.g., הִדְּוִירוֹת־חִדְּוִירוֹת בְּעֵינֶיךָ, “must be rounded” (b. Hul. 59b).

בְּתֹךְ הֶדֶר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “in the middle of an (ornamental or circular) wall/-twisting path, at/by/upon the stone/monument” — הֶדֶר, defective of הִדְּוִיר (masc.), means “ornamental or circular wall, twisting path”; cf. וְהִדְּוִירִים, “and I will level (ornamental) walls/twisting paths” (Isa., 45:2).<sup>13</sup>

כְּתָב חֶדֶר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) a pointed script on the stone/monument” — חֶדֶר, defective of חִדְּוִיר (masc.), means “sharp, pointed” (from the root חִדְּרַ, BH, MH, JA, “being sharp, pointed”); e.g., תַּחְתָּיו חִדְּוִירֵי תַרְשֵׁשׁ, “Under him are sharp potsherds” (Job 41:22).

כְּתָב חֶדֶה עַל הָאֶבֶן, “text of a riddle on the stone/monument” — חֶדֶה, defective of חִידָה (fem., BH), means “riddle” (perhaps from the root חִדְּרַ, “to tell a riddle,” cf. חִדְּרַ, “being sharp”); e.g., אֲחֻזָּה נָא לָכֶם חִידָה, “Let me pose you a riddle” (Judg. 14:12).

13 See Targum, Rashi, Radak, Mešudat Zion. This is the only biblical occurrence of this word; cf. הַדְּוִירָא רִכְנָתָא, “coils of the ileum” (b. Hul. 48b, 113a; see Jastrow, 332b-33a, 652a). If it means something ornamental, then its root is הִדְּרַ, if something circular, then its root could be הִדְּרַ (as in the previous suggestion), or דוּר/דִּיר. For the next word the qeri is אִישֶׁר, the ktiv is אִישֶׁר (= אִישֶׁר), which is practically means the same as the qeri (see Gordis, 130, 183 n. 267).

בְּתֹכַּח חֲדָר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “in the midst of a chamber near/toward the stone/monument” — חֲדָר is a “chamber” (masc., pl. חֲדָרִים, BH, MH); cf. יֵרְדוּת אֶל חֲדָרֵי מוֹת, “they descend into the dead chambers” (Prov. 7:27).

בְּתֹכַח חֲרָר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “in the middle of a hole upon/by/at the stone/monument” — חֲרָר is a “hole” (masc., MH; from the root חרר, “to drill”), e.g., מַחֲטָה שֶׁנִּשְׁטַל חֲרָרָהּ אוֹ עֵינָקָה, “a needle that its hole or tip has been removed” (b. Shab. 123a). חֲרָר is related to חוֹרֵחוֹר, “hole,” which as an alternate reading occurs in the Scroll (see #33, 8:2).

בְּתֹכַח חֲרָר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “in the midst of a dry land, upon/by/at the stone/monument” — חֲרָר means “dry land” (prob. masc., BH; from the root חרר, “to be hot”); cf. וְשָׁכֵן חֲרָרִים בְּמִדְבָּר, “and they shall live in parched places in the wilderness” (Jer. 17:6).<sup>14</sup>

בְּתֹכַח תְּדָהּ תּוֹדָה עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) a script for thanksgiving(s) upon the stone/monument” — תְּדָה - תּוֹדָה (fem., sg., BH, pl. תּוֹדוֹת) means “thanksgiving” (from the root ידה, “to cast,” in Hif'il “to thank”), e.g., מִזְמוֹר לְתוֹדָה, “A psalm for thanks offering” (Ps. 100:1; תּוֹדָה offering was brought every weekday in the Temple); אֲשַׁלֵּם תּוֹדָתְךָ לָךְ, “I shall fulfill (my vow to render) thanks offerings to You” (Ps. 56:13). Although, according to the Halakhah, it not permissible to build an altar outside the Temple Mountain (it is a בְּמָה, “high place”; cf. m. Zev. 14:4-8), perhaps this refers to an old altar with an inscription built for thanks offerings.

בְּתֹכַח תְּדָר עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) a permanent script upon the stone/monument” — תְּדָר, defective of תְּדִיר (masc., cf. תְּדִירָא, Dan. 6:17, BA; also Trg. of תְּמִיד, e.g., Exod. 25:30), means “stationary, permanent” (from the root דור; e.g., כָּל הַתְּדִירִי מִחֲבֵירוֹ, “that (thing) which is more constant than his friend’s (i.e., another thing)” (m. Zev. 10:1).

בְּתֹכַח תְּרָה עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) an inscription of law upon the stone/monument” — תְּרָה means “Law, Torah” (fem., BH, MH; from the root ירה, “to teach”); e.g., וַיִּכְתֹּב שָׁם עַל הָאֲבָנִים אֶת מִשְׁנֵה תּוֹרַת מֹשֶׁה אֲשֶׁר כָּתַב לִפְנֵי בְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל, “And there (Joshua) wrote on the stones a copy of the Law of Moses which he had written in the presence of the Israelites” (Josh. 8:32).

בְּתֹכַח חֲרַת עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) a freedom script upon the stone/monument” (the third letter is read as a taw) — חֲרַת, defective of חֲרִית - חֲרִיּוֹת (fem., MH), means “freedom” (from the root חרר, “to free”); e.g., אַל תִּקְרָא חֲרִיּוֹת, “do not read ‘engraved’ rather ‘freedom’” (ʿAvot - Qinyan Torah 6:2, referring to Exod. 32:16).

בְּתֹכַח חֲרָת עַל הָאֶבֶן, “(there is) an engraved script on the stone/monument” — חֲרָת, defective of חֲרִית (Qal past. part. masc. sg. of the root חרת, “to engrave,” used as an adj.), means “engraved”; cf. חֲפָר (3:6, 6:9, 12, 7:9), vs. חֲפּוֹר (2:24, etc.). חֲרִית is a hapax legomenon, חֲרִית הוּא אֲלֵדִים מִכְתָּב אֲלֵדִים הוּא חֲרִית.

14 See Rashi, Radak, Mešudat David. This is the only occurrence of this word.

עַל הַלֶּחֶת, “and the writing is the writing of God, engraved upon the tablets” (Exod. 32:16).<sup>15</sup> חרת is the Aramaic cognate of חרש, “to engrave, cut out, plow,” (šin-taw interchange). E.g., חֲרוּשָׁה עַל לֶחֶת לָבָם, Trg. חֲרִיתִין עַל לֶחֶת לְבָהוֹן, “are engraved upon the tablets of their hearts” (Jer. 17:1).<sup>16</sup>

Referring to the Ephod of the High Priest, Ben-Sira says, כָּל אֲבֹן יִקָּרֶה, לְזִכְרוֹן בְּכָתֵב חֲרוּת לְמִסְפָּר [שְׁבַעֲי יִשְׂרָאֵל] “All precious stones for a memorial are with an incised script, according to the number of [the tribes of Israel]” (Ben-Sira 45:19);<sup>17</sup> חֲקֵי חֲרוּת as in the Scroll. Similarly, חֲקֵי חֲרוּת, “engraved ordinances” (1QS 20:8); הַכֹּל חֲקוּק לְפָנֶיכָה בְּחֵרֶת זִכְרוֹן, “Everything is engraved in front of you in an memorial inscription (or tablet)” (1QH 1:24).<sup>18</sup>

Moreover, the paytan says, אָו ... וְתַבַּת וְחָרַטָּה וְחָקְקָה וְצִיַּנְתָּ וְחָרַתָּ ... וְהֵם בְּכַתָּב חֲרוּטוֹת, “Then (at the time of the creation) ... and You had written, and You had engraved, and You had carved, and You had marked, and You had incised ... and they are (written) in engraved scripts.” This citation resembles the usage in the Scroll.<sup>19</sup>

The stone with an engraved script could be a burial monument located in the Outer Valley, outside of a city (that may be Jerusalem). This suggestion is in accord with the Halakhah that states, "One must put the carrion, וְאֵת הַקְּבֻרֹת (and the graves), and the tanneries (at least) fifty cubits from the city" (m. B.B. 2:9).

(8:5-6) הַפְּרוּרִיפּוֹר אָמוֹת שִׁבְעַ עָסָר תַּחְתֶּיהָ, “seventeen cubits below it is buried,” or “dig seventeen cubits, under it,” resembles the phrase בּוֹ סֶפֶר 42 אֶחָד תַּחְתּוֹ כֹּכ, “in it is a document, below it are 42 s(ilver) k(arsh)” (see #25, 6:5-6). תַּחְתֶּיהָ, “under/below it (fem.),” is in apposition to הָאֶבֶן (fem.), “the stone,” i.e., under/below the stone. Seventeen cubits below the stone

15 The second element of יַעַר חֶרֶת, "Forest of Hereth" (1 Sam. 22:5), may be related to the root חרת (cf. BDB, 362a).

16 The difficult phrase קָצַקְתָּ וְכָתַבְתָּ (Lev. 19:28) is rendered by the Targumim as: וּכְתַבְתָּ חֻקִּים לְשֵׁם חֲרִית צִיּוּרָא, “and incised marks” (TO), וּכְתַבְתָּ חֻקִּים לְשֵׁם חֲרִית צִיּוּרָא, “and engraved script to mark incised figure” (PsJ); וּכְתַבְתָּ חֻקִּים, “and engraved script” (TN). חֲרִית (H) - מִכְתָּב (A), חֲרִית (H) - חֻקִּים (A) are synonyms. According to Rashi, חֲרִית (A) and מִכְתָּב (A) mean “everlasting engraved script” (Exod. 32:16; Lev. 18:28; b. ‘Eruv. 54a). Rashi and Rashbam connect חֲרִית with חָרַט, “to engrave” (Exod. 32:16); cf. וְחֹרְטִין, “and they are engraving” (Tanhuma<sup>2</sup>, Ki-Tiśša’ 14); a ḥet-taw interchange. Moreover, the Akkadian erešu, Phoenician חרש, Punic חרת, Aramaic חרת, Arabic ḥaraṭa - ḥaraṭa, Ugaritic ḥrt - hrt, Hebrew חרש, חרת - חרס, all are related to one another. According to Steinberg (270b, 274a, 275a), חרש, חרץ, חרט, and חרת belong to the bilateral root family of חר. The suggestion of BDB (362a) that חֲרִית is an error for חָרוּשׁ is unfounded. Ben-Yehuda’s note (3, 1790a n. 4) that חרת occurs only in Hebrew must be a typographical error.

17 Ben-Sira, Manuscript B from the Cairo Genizah.

18 See M. Mansoor, The Thanksgiving Hymns (1961), 101 and n. 11.

19 Silluq Šaḥarīt for Parašat Šeqalim; probably by Rabbi Eleazar Kallir. וְהָרַת, the taw has a dageš forte (= וְהָרַתָּה; cf. וְנָתַתָּה for וְנָתַתָּה, “and you shall gave” (e.g., Gen. 40:13).

must refer to distance, rather than depth. Regarding חפור, see #17, 4:7; for אמה, #1, 1:2-3; for שבע עשרה, Appendix B; for תחת, #49, 10:15.

(8:6-7) 17 כֶּסֶף וְזָהָב כֹּחַ, “(an unspecified amount of) silver and gold (plus) 17 k(arsh of) s(ilver)” — Since the scholars consider כֹּחַ as an abbreviation of כֶּכֶרִין, they basically render this phrase as, “17 talents of silver and gold.”<sup>20</sup>

In Hebrew and Aramaic וְ and אֹ are interchangeable, i.e., וְ could mean אֹ (“or”), and אֹ may mean וְ (“and”). Therefore, 17 כֶּסֶף וְזָהָב כֹּחַ could mean, “17 kk of silver and/or gold.” This would indicate that the cache contains a mixture of silver and gold, or the compiler(s) did not know whether this cache contains silver or gold; cf. בְּלִיבְלֵי דְמַעַ אוּ דְמַעַ סוּת, “(a) dedicated vessel(s) and/or (a) dedicated garment(s)” (11:10; see Appendix D).

On the other hand, it has been demonstrated that כֹּחַ is definitely not an abbreviation of כֶּכֶרִין, “talents,” rather of כֶּסֶף כְּרִשִּׁין, “silver karsh” (see Appendix A). Also, often כֶּסֶף or זָהָב, especially with numbers, mean “silver piece/shekel” or “gold piece/shekel,” respectively (see #1, 1:4; #59, 12:9). Moreover, the expected connective waw, “and,” may occasionally be missing (see #32, 7:16).

Translating the phrase in question as “silver and gold silver karsh 17” seems to be illogical, unless the word order is incorrect, and it is instead זָהָב וְכֶסֶף כֹּחַ, “(an unidentified amount of) gold plus 17 k(arsh) of silver,” or “one gold (shekel/coin) (plus) 17 k(arsh) of silver.” This reading would be in line with the other nine cases of כֶּסֶף כֹּחַ in the Scroll (see Appendix A). Also, there are several unusual word order cases in the text (see #1, 1:2-3; #11, 2:14-15; #14, 3:12-13; #47, 10-11).

Two translations can be offered for this difficult phrase: “(an unspecified amount of) silver and gold (plus) 17 k(arsh of) s(ilver),” and “one silver (piece/shekel) and one gold (piece/shekel), (plus) 17 s(ilver) k(arsh).” For further discussion, see Appendix A.

Finally, the second half of this item closely resembles Achan’s confession to Joshua (Josh. 7:20-22; see “Harevah/Haruvah and the Valley of Achor” in the Discussion; also #1, 1:1).

20 Allegro<sup>pr</sup> (the numeral is indicated as 7 ?); Allegro, 47; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24; Milik, 293; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141; Lurie, 99; Pixner, 351; Wolters, 47; Beyer, 229; Garcia Martinez, 462; Vermes, 376; Wise, 195.

ITEM 35

8:8 ביגר של פי צוק הקדרון
8:9 חפור אמות שלוש כב 7

8:8 In the heap which is at the edge of the peak of the Kidron,

8:9 are buried three cubits (deep) 7 k(arsh of) s(ilver).

COMMENTARY

(8:8) “בִּגְבוּבֵינִיר בִּגְבוּבֵינִיר בִּגְבוּבֵינִיר בִּגְבוּבֵינִיר שֶׁל פִּי צוֹק הַקִּדְרוֹן”, “In/at/by a/the heap/Jagur which is at/by (the) edge of the peak of the Kidron” — cf. בְּשִׂית וּבְשִׂית “שִׁיבְצָפוֹן פִּי הַצּוֹק שֶׁל בֵּית תָּמָר”, “In/at/by a/the deep pit which is in/at/by (the) northern edge of the peak of Beth-Tamar” (see #43, 9:14-15).

יגר can be explained as: יְגֹרִינִי, “(stone) heap, grave site, funeral monument, heathen altar, Yegar/Yeger (as a toponym),” and יְגֹר = יַגֹּר, Jagur (a biblical toponym). For a detailed discussion, see #20, 4:13.

פִּי שֶׁל is usually translated as, “of the mouth/opening/entrance/edge of,” or “which is at the mouth/opening/entrance/edge of,” where פִּי is the construct state of the masculine noun פֶּה, “mouth, opening”;<sup>1</sup> cf. עַל פִּי הַמְּעָרָה, “upon (the) mouth of the cave” (Josh. 10:27). LURIE renders פִּי שֶׁל as שֶׁלפְּנֵי, “which is in front of.”<sup>2</sup> Regarding פֶּה, see #32, 7:14.

צוק (MH, masc., pl. צֻקִּין) is a “peak, mountain rock.” E.g., “if a sheep went up לְרֹאשׁ־צֻקִּין (to the top of the peaks) ... if it was brought up לְרֹאשׁ־צֻקִּין (to the top of the peaks)” (m. B.M. 7:10). Moreover, צוק (Peak) was the name of a peak near Jerusalem where on the Day of the Atonement the high priest sent a goat to Azazel in the wilderness (m. Yoma 4:5; cf. Lev. Ch. 16).<sup>3</sup> Thus, צוק in the Scroll could be a toponym. צוק may be related to צִרְוֹצֹר, “rock,” and טֹר, “row of stones” (in Hebrew) and “mountain” (in

1 Allegro, 47 (pyswq instead of py swq and hywr instead of hpwr [8:9] are typographical errors), 154 n. 173. Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24; Milik, 293; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141; Pixner, 351; Wolters, 46-47; Garcia Martinez, 462; Beyer, 230; Vermes 376; Wise, 195.

2 Lurie, 99-100. Similarly, B.A. Levine suggests that שֶׁל פִּי means "which is at"; cf. עַל פִּי, "at," מִפִּי, "from" (personal communication).

3 This Mishnah is mentioned by Allegro (154-55 n. 174) and Milik (268 D-28; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 149). According to Rashi, צוק is a “tall and upright mountain” (b. Yoma 67a), “sharp and sloped mountain” (b. B.M. 29b), and “sharp and tall mountain” (b. B.M. 93b). Bertinoro says, “every tall and upright mountain is called צוק” (m. Yoma 4:5). Regarding the tradi-

Aramaic; reš-qof and/or ṭet-ṣade interchanges; see #32, 7:15).<sup>4</sup>

הקדרון — The first four letters of this word are: he/ḥet/taw, qof, dalet/reš, dalet/reš; the rest differ in the drawings. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: A waw/zayin/yod/short-legged final nun, plus a somewhat shorter waw/zayin/yod/short-legged final nun. Since their tops touch each other, it may be read as a small sized he/ḥet/taw. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: A waw/zayin/yod/short-legged final nun, plus the right half of a dalet/he/ḥet/reš/taw, of which the left part is missing due to the damaged edge of the sheet. ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: A waw/zayin/yod/short-legged final nun, plus a final nun of which the top to the right there is a crack. The final nun is about a third longer than the previous letter. The photographs of the ZUCKERMANS seem to support Milik's drawing.

This word has been analyzed as follows. ALLEGRO<sup>pr</sup>: "The Darkness" (i.e., הַקְדָּרוֹת); or "the pots" (i.e., הַקְדָּרוֹת), meaning "the skulls"; (the place) may be a natural formation. ALLEGRO and LURIE: הַקְדָּרוֹן, "the Kidron."<sup>5</sup> MILIK: הַקְדְּרוֹה, "the Kidro(n)," a variant of הַקְדָּרוֹן. The waw and he are double matres lectionis for a ḥolam, as in כלוה (1:3).<sup>6</sup> PIXNER: הַקְדָּרוֹת, "the pottery (workshop)"; rather than the Kidron.<sup>7</sup> WOLTERS: צוֹק הַקְדָּרוֹת (as Pixner), "the Pottery Ravine"; it is analogues and perhaps related to שַׁעַר הַחֲרָשׁוֹת, Potsherd Gate, which overlooked the Hinnom Valley.<sup>8</sup> BEYER: הַקְדָּרוֹת, "the darkness," obviously denotes Kidron.<sup>9</sup> WISE: "the Wady Kidron."<sup>10</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ and VERMES agree with Wolters.<sup>11</sup>

According to the three drawings, the word in question can be read and vocalized as follows. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: הַקְדָּרָה, הַקְדָּרָה, הַקְדָּרָה, הַקְדָּרוֹן; MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: הַקְדָּרוֹה, הַקְדָּרוֹת, הַקְדָּרוֹת, הַקְדָּרוֹת; and ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: הַקְדָּרוֹן. These possibilities can be interpreted in the subsequent manner.

הַקְדָּרָה - הַקְדָּרוֹת (cf. Allegro<sup>pr</sup>) — קְדִירָה - קְדִירָה (fem.; pl. הַקְדָּרוֹת - הַקְדָּרוֹת), "pot, dish," also "skull" (from the root קדר, "to cut around"), is commonly used in the Talmud (and Targum). E.g., קְדִירָה שֶׁהֵיא נְתוּנָה בְּתַנּוּר, "a pot which is placed in the oven ... the pot is (ritually) clean" (m. Kel. 8:4); הָיוּ לִפְנֵי שְׁתֵּי קְדִירֹת אַחַת שֶׁל חוּלִין וְאַחַת שֶׁל תְּרוּמָה, "there were in front of him two pots, one non-sacred, and one dedicated" (t. Ter. 8:17); כָּל מֵה שֶׁבְּקְדִירָה נָדוֹן כְּמוֹחַ, "the content of the skull is considered tional explanations of Azazel, see The Living Torah, 587.

4 Cf. עִיר מוֹאָב (Num. 22:36) vs. קִיר מוֹאָב (Isa. 15:1), "City of Moab"; in Aramaic, אֶרְעָא (e.g., Dan. 2:35) vs. אֶרְקָא (Jer. 10:11), the same as הָאָרֶץ in Hebrew (e.g., Gen. 2:12), "the land."

5 Allegro, 47; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24; Lurie, 99-100.

6 Milik, 228 B-3d.

7 Pixner, 351 and n. 30.

8 "Vocabulary," 489-90 #39; Wolters, 46-47.

9 Beyer, 229-30.

10 Wise, 195.

11 Garcia Martinez, 462; Vermes, 376.

as brain" (b. Hul. 45a). Thus, צוק הקדרה והקדרות could mean, "Peak of the Pot(s)" or "Peak of the Skull(s),"<sup>12</sup> named after the shape of a mountain peak; cf. נַחַל הַכֶּפֶא, "Wadi of the Dome" (see #24, 5:12).

הקדרות (cf. Wolters) — קדרות (fem.), "pottery," derived from קדר, "potter"; cf. כלי קדרות, "pottery making tools" (Ruth Rabbah 2:1).<sup>13</sup> Thus, הקדרות צוק could mean, "Peak of the Pottery."

הקדרות (cf. Allegro<sup>pr</sup>, Beyer) — קדרות (fem.) means "blackness, darkness" (from the root קדר, "to be black"). It occurs once in the Masoretic Text: קדרות שמים, "I (God) dress the heaven (with) blackness" (Isa. 50:3). The synonym of קדרות is חשך, "darkness"; cf. החשך יכסה ארץ, "the darkness covers the earth" (Isa. 60:2). Also, הרי חשך, "Dark Mountains" (Gen. Rabbah 33; Lev. Rabbah 27; b. Tam. 32a), is analogous to צוק הקדרות, "peak of the blackness," it could mean, "the Black Peak."<sup>14</sup>

הקדרה - הקדרה - הקדרון (cf. Milik) — הקדרון (cf. Allegro, Lurie) — Silent ʾalef/he in final position may interchange with mem/nun, thus closing the last open syllable having qamaṣ, ḥolam, etc., or vice versa. Thus, קדרה, קדרה, and קדרוה are variants of קדרון, Kidron. This phenomenon occurs in various Hebrew and Aramaic dialects. E.g., בבקעת מגדו vs. בבקעת מגדון, "in (the) Valley of Megido" (2 Chron. 35:22 and Zech. 12:11, respectively); שלמא, שלמא, שלמון, vs. שלמון, Salmon, the father of Boaz (1 Chron. 2:11; Ruth 4:20-21); שלמו (CS), שלמוה (4QMMT C:18), שלמה (2 Sam. 12:24, etc.; see #23, 5:8), vs. שלמון, the assumed original form of Σαλωμων, Σαλομων, Σολομων, Sulaymān (Arabic, e.g., Koran, Sura 27:1b, 38:29), Salomon, Solomon (Latin and most European languages, including Salamon in Hungarian, Соломон in Russian), זלמן, זלמן (Yiddish); בניה (fem., Ezek. 41:13) vs. בנין (masc., Ezek. 41:12, etc.), "structure" (see #17, 4:6);<sup>15</sup> אביה, אביה King of Judah (e.g., 1 Chron. 3:10), also known as אביהו (2 Chron. 13:20, 21), and אבים, אבים (e.g., 1 Kgs 15:1); באיה (A), באיה, vs. באיה (A, H), in the Bar-Kokhba letters;<sup>16</sup> צדה מלכתה, "Šedah the Queen" (Aramaic), vs. צדן מלכתן (Syriac; see #27, 6:11); גהנם - גהנם, "Hell" (MH, 12 Cf. ציקי קריה, "liquid spices for the pot" (e.g., b. Pes. 56a); it resembles this reading.

13 See Jastrow, 1319a; ESH<sup>dic</sup> 6, 2292a. Wolters refers to this Midrash.

14 See Lefkovits<sup>diss</sup> 1, 581-82.

15 Also, שאל ואבדה (ketiv) vs. שאל ואברון (qeri, Trg. שאל ואברון), "Sheol and Abaddon" or "Grave and Gehenna" (Prv. 27:20; the qeri forms also occurs earlier, Prv. 15:11). Regarding the second translation, see Mešudat David and Mešudat Zion. The explanation of Gordis (126, 180 n. 223) is unnecessary, it is an interchange of two forms with the same meaning. Some editions have שאל ואבדה (ketiv-qeri case; e.g., Koren, Tanach), while others indicate the qeri as שאל ואברו (Malbim; although Malbim himself reads אברון); also see Minḥat Šay.

16 E.Y. Kutscher, "לשונן של האיגרות והארמיות של בר כוסבה ובני דור", in Lešonenu 25 (1960/61), 122, 124, 126, 129; 26 (1961/62), 8.

Trg.; e.g., m. 'Avot 1:5; Trg. Ps. 55:24), a contracted form of גִּי הַנֶּחֱם, Hinnom Valley (BH; e.g., Josh. 4:16), vs. גֶּהֱנָה - גֶּהֱנָא (Syriac) and γεέννα, Gehenna (New Testament); פִּשְׁתָּה (BH, fem., e.g., Isa. 42:3) vs. פִּשְׁתָּן (MH, fem., e.g., m. Kil. 9:1), "flax"; יְהוּדָה - יוֹדָא vs. יוֹדָן, Judah.<sup>17</sup> Likewise, אֶכְסָדְרָא (MH) appears in the Scroll as אֶכְסָדְרָנ, "exedra" (see #51, 11:3).<sup>18</sup>

The Kidron Valley separates Jerusalem from Mount of Olives, and extends to the Dead Sea. The Targum of נַחַל קִדְרוֹן is נַחֲלָא דְקִדְרוֹן (e.g., 2 Kgs 23:6), and of שְׂדֵמוֹת קִדְרוֹן, which occurs only once, is מִישַׁר קִדְרוֹן, Kidron Valley (2 Kgs 23:4).<sup>19</sup> In the Temple the remains of the blood from the sacrifices "mingled together לְנַחַל קִדְרוֹן וַיִּזְצִיאוּ (in the water channel and flowed into the Kidron Valley) and were sold to the garden owners as fertilizer" (m. Yoma 5:6; t. Yoma 4[3]:2; cf. b. Yoma 58b; b. A.Z. 44a).<sup>20</sup>

Finally, שָׁל פִּי צוֹק הַקִּדְרוֹן, "of (the) edge/opening of the peak of the Kidron," as well as פִּי הַצּוֹק שֶׁל בֵּית תָּמָר, "(the) edge/opening of the peak of Beth-Tamar" (9:14-15), resemble the verse, לִיד שַׁעֲרִים לְפִי קֶרֶת מְבוֹא פִתְחִים, "beside the city gates at the opening of the city, (at) the alley of the entrances,"<sup>21</sup> and its Targum, וְעַל תְּרַעֲי בְּפֻמָּא דְקִרְיָא וּבְמַעְלָנָא דְתִרְעֵי, "and upon the gates in the opening of the city, and in the entrance of the gates" (Prov. 8:3).

(8:9) חֲפֻרֵי חֲפֻר אַמּוֹת שְׁלוֹשׁ כֹּכ 7, "are buried three cubits (deep) 7 k(arsh of) s(ilver)," or "dig three cubits (deep, there are) 7 k(arsh of) s(ilver)" — The numerals in the drawings differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: 2; MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: 4; ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: 7. Regarding חֲפֻר, see #17, 4:7; for אַמָּה, #1, 1:2-3; for כֹּכ, Appendix A.

17 E.g., רַבִּי יְהוּדָה הַנָּשִׂיא, Rabbi Judah (I) the Prince, was the editor of the Mishnah. His grandson was רַבִּי יְהוּדָה נְשִׂיאָה, Rabbi Judah (II) the Prince, whose name appears in the Palestinian Talmud as רַבִּי יוֹדָה־נְשִׂיאָה, and so was called his grandson, Rabbi Judah (III) the Prince (see AC 4, 114a; ETG 2, 449-53). יוֹדָא is a shortened form of יְהוּדָה, Judah; cf. יוֹסֵף (e.g., Gen. 30:24) vs. יְהוֹסֵף, Joseph (e.g., Gen. 30:25 and Ps. 81:6, respectively); יוֹנָתָן vs. יְהוֹנָתָן, Jonathan (e.g., 1 Sam. 13:2 and 14:6, respectively); etc.

18 Many scholars discuss this phenomena (e.g., E.Y. Kutscher, Studies in Galilean Aramaic [1976], 62).

19 שְׂדֵמוֹת (fem., Isa. 37:27; pl. שְׂדֵמוֹת, Hab. 3:17; Jer. 31:39, qeri; const. שְׂדֵמוֹת, Deut. 32:32; Isa. 16:8; 2 Kgs 23:4), is rendered as "vine-branch, field, stream" (see The Living Torah, 1031), and "vineyard" (BY 7, 6916b-17a and n. 1). The Ugaritic šdmt is rendered by Gordon as "field(s), vineyard(s)" (UT, 488 [#2388]). Lehmann suggests šdmt - שְׂדֵמוֹת is a masculine singular noun, contracted from שְׂדֵמוֹת מוֹת, i.e., שְׂדֵמוֹת מוֹתָא, "Field of Mot/Death." He also discusses the possible meaning of Kidron ("A New Interpretation of the Term 'Shadmoth'," VT 3, 361-71). Likewise, Aistleitner suggests that the šdmth is equal to šd + mt + h (directional -h), "to the Field of Mot" (WUS, 303 [2585]; 315 [#2678]).

20 Some of these words occur in the Scroll: אַמָּה (1:11, 5:1, 8:1), נַחַל (5:12, 10:3), and יִצְיָאָה (7:14).

21 Most of these words occur in the Scroll: יָד (10:12), מְבוֹא (11:16), פֶּה, פֶּתַח (1:8, 1:11, 6:2, 6:3, 6:9, 10:10, 12:10), and שַׁעַר (2:7).

ITEM 36

|                      |      |
|----------------------|------|
| בשלף של השוא הצופא   | 8:10 |
| מערב בדרומ בצריח     | 8:11 |
| הצופא צפון חפור אמות | 8:12 |
| עשרין וארבע ככ 67    | 8:13 |

- 8:10 In the Sheleph of the Shaveh which is facing
 8:11 southwest, in the catacomb
 8:12 which is facing north, are buried twenty-
 8:13 four cubits (deep) 67 k(arsh of) s(ilver).

COMMENTARY

(8:10) בְּשֵׁלֶף וּבְשֵׁלֶף, “In/at/by (the) Sheleph” — The term שלף has been analyzed as follows. ALLEGRO<sup>1</sup>: “rubble (?)”; “stubble field,” here what is “pulled out,” i.e., collapsed of a ruin (?). ALLEGRO: “stubble field”; alternately, שלף could be a metathesis of שפל; cf. שִׁפּוּלִין (MH), שִׁפּוּלָא (A), “lower part, foot of a mountain,” and שְׁפִלָּה (BH), “lowland.”<sup>1</sup> MILIK: “dry land.”<sup>2</sup> LURIE: שלף is אשלג (MH), “alkali,” rather than “stubble field,” which a “pool,” השואח (the next word) does not have.<sup>3</sup> The other scholars agree with Allegro.<sup>4</sup>

The verbal forms of שלף (BH, MH, JA) mean, “to be lax, hang down, slip, loosen, be loose, pull, take off, take out, remove, be uprooted, draw (a sword).” The noun שֵׁלֶף (MH, masc.) means “stubble field.”<sup>5</sup> In addition,

1 Allegro, 47, 155 n. 177; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

2 Milik, 241, 293; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141.

3 Lurie, 101 and n. 1. The Mishnah mentions וְאֶשְׁלַג וְקִימוֹנִיָּה (m. Shab. 9:5). קימוניא is explained by Rabbi Judah as שלוף דרוץ, which according to Rashi, it is an unknown thing (m. Shab. 90a). Most commentators explain קימוניא and אשלג as types of grass used for cleaning, while for others קימוניא is a sort of limestone. Jastrow says that אֶשְׁלַג is “a kind of alkali, or mineral used as a soap” (129a); קימוניא is “Cimolian earth, a clay used in cleaning clothes and also in medicine” (1362a); and שלוף דרוץ is “(pull out, stick out) a popular name for Cimolia” (1587b, 1579b). See also AC 8, 87-88; AAC, 397.

4 Pixner, 351; “Vocabulary,” 486; “Analysis,” 250; Wolters, 46-47; Beyer, 229-30; Vermes, 376; Wise, 195. Sharvit discusses the various explanation of the term שלף (Ps. 129:6) by the medieval grammarians (“Iyyunim,” 130 and n. 31; “He‘arah le‘Iyyunim,” 150-51 and nn. 7-10).

5 E.g., “a plowed (field) cannot be compared to שלף (an untilled [field])” (t. B.M.

šaluf in Arabic means “waterfall.”<sup>6</sup> Moreover, שֶׁלֶף, Sheleph, was one of the thirteen sons of Joktan. The Targumim elaborate on this name as follows. שֶׁלֶף דִּשְׁלַף מוֹי דְּנִהְרֹוּתָא, “Sheleph (= Diverter) who diverted the waters of the rivers” (PsJ, Gen. 10:26; see Peruṣ Jonathan), and שֶׁלֶף דִּשְׁלַף נִהְרֹוּתָא, “Sheleph (= Diverter) who diverted the rivers into his domain” (Trg. 1 Chron. 1:20).<sup>7</sup> Thus, שֶׁלֶף could mean “channel.”

Onkelos renders וַיִּשְׁלֹפּוּן יַת אֲבָנֵיָא as וַיִּחְצִצּוּ אֶת הָאֲבָנִים, “and they shall remove the stones” (Lev. 14:40), and אַחֲרַיִת חֲלִץ אֶת הָאֲבָנִים as אַחֲרַיִת אֶת הָאֲבָנִים, “after he has/they have removed the stones” (Lev. 14:43). Similarly, the Targum for וְנִתְּוֶק, “or torn,” is וְדִשְׁלִיף, “or which is pulled out” (TO), and וְדִשְׁחִית, “or which is mutilated” (PsJ; Lev. 22:24). Perhaps שֶׁלֶף is an “area from where stones were removed, dismantled house, ruin,” or a name of such location (cf. חֲרִיבָה, 1:1).<sup>8</sup> This is similar to Allegro<sup>pr</sup> suggestion.

שֶׁלֶף may be a variant of שֶׁלֶב, a bet-pe interchange (e.g., “joints,” 1 Kgs 7:28-29; the same as שֶׁלֶב in Neo-Punic), is from the root שֶׁלֶב (H, A), “to bind, join” (e.g., מִשְׁלֹבֹת, “they are joined,” Exod. 26:17). שֶׁלִיבָה (MH) is a “step of ladder.” In Akkadian šabulu means “leg, thigh.” On the other hand, שֶׁלֶבָא in Syriac is a “ravine, narrow path between mountains.”<sup>9</sup> Accordingly, שֶׁלֶף (= שֶׁלֶב) could mean a “joint” or a “ravine, narrow path” between mountains.

שֶׁלֶף may be a variant of תֶּלֶף, a šin-taw interchange (e.g., חֶרֶשׁ - חֶרֶת; see #34, 8:4-5). Scripture says, כְּמִגְדָּל דְּוִיד צִוְרָרְךָ בְּנוֹי תִּלְפִיּוֹת, “Your neck is like David’s Tower build with turrets” (Songs 4:4).<sup>10</sup> תִּלְפִיּוֹת (fem., pl.; hapax legomenon; the singular seems to be תִּלְפִיָּה) is a synonym for מִגְדָּל, “tower.”<sup>11</sup> תֶּלֶף could be an unattested masculine form of תִּלְפִיָּה.<sup>12</sup> Although both are problematic words, שֶׁלֶף and תֶּלֶף may mean, “turret, tower.”

9:29). שֶׁלֶף is translated as: brach (“unplowed, fallow,” Zuckerman, 191); “(that which is pulled out) stubble field” (Jastrow, 1587b); geegter Acker (“plowed field,” AC 8, 87a-89a); “stubble field,” Stoppelfeld (KS 2, 389b). Feliks refutes Kohut’s explanation; he says that שֶׁלֶף is an unplowed field after the harvest (“הַחֲרִישׁ בַּסְּפֵרוֹת חֹזֶל” in Tarbiz 30 [1960/61], 27 and n. 49; cf. ESH<sup>dic</sup> 7, 2713b).

6 A. Al-Maliḥ, Millon ‘Aravi-‘Ivri (1929), 377b.

7 This follows Jastrow’s (1587b) improved reading.

8 See Lefkovits<sup>diss</sup> 1, 587-88.

9 BDB, 1016b.

10 תִּלְפִיּוֹת is usually rendered as “turrets”; e.g., JPS<sup>i</sup>, JPS<sup>ii</sup> (notes that the meaning is uncertain), Koren, etc.

11 In the Talmudim תִּלְפִיּוֹת refers to the Temple Mount (y. Ber. 4:5 [31b], see Penei Mošeh and Mar’eh hapanim; b. Ber. 30a, see Rashi and Tosaphot). See also Rashi, Ibn-Ezra, and Mešudat Zion on Songs 4:4.

12 See SB, 887b; BDB, 1069a; AC 8, 238a; BY 8, 7779b-78b and n. 3; ESH<sup>dic</sup> 7, 2864b; MK 2, 1246c-d; Yehoash’s Notes on the Bible, 287b; S.L. Gordon, Song of Songs with a New Commentary, 33-34 (on this verse).

שֶׁלֶף may be a metathesis for שָׁפֶל (masc.), “lower part/place”; e.g., וְעֲשִׂירִים בְּשָׁפֶל יֹשְׁבוּ, “and the rich sit in a low place” (Eccl. 10:6). Cf. שִׁפּוּלָא (MH, pl.), שִׁפּוּלָא (A), “lower part, foot of a mountain,” and שְׁפִלָּה (BH, fem.), “lowland,” as Allegro notes.

Finally, at the very end of the Rehob Inscription is listed פִּלְגָא דְשֶׁלֶאֱף, Palga deShalef or “half (of the town) of Shalef” near Sebaste.<sup>13</sup> שֶׁלֶאֱף has been identified with שלעבה,<sup>14</sup> דִּיר שֶׁרָף,<sup>15</sup> and Khirbat Salhab.<sup>16</sup> שֶׁלֶאֱף may be a phonetic spelling of שֶׁלֶף, the ’alef could indicate an a sound (Aramaic Pe’al formation).<sup>17</sup> שֶׁלֶף can also be vocalized as שְׁלֶף (Hebrew Pe’el formation). Sheleph of Shaveh might have been between Jerusalem and the Dead Sea, but if it is the same as שֶׁלֶף then near Sebaste. Regarding the possible connection of הַשּׁוֹא שֶׁלֶף and הַשּׁוֹא שֶׁל דִּין with דִּיר שֶׁרָף, see #37, 8:14; for the Rehob inscription, #13, 3:8.

(8:10) הַשּׁוֹא (= הַשְׁוֹה) שֶׁל הַשְׁוֹה, “of the Shaveh/Plain/Ruler” or “which is in/at/by the Shaveh/Plain/Ruler” — ALLEGRO: הַשּׁוֹא (= הַשְׁוֹה), “the Shaveh.”<sup>18</sup> MILIK: הַשּׁוֹא, ha-šo’, is בֵּית שׁוֹא, Beth-so’, mentioned by Josephus as Βηθσω (Bethso, Latin Betiso).<sup>19</sup> LURIE: הַשּׁוֹא (= הַשּׁוֹח), “the pool” (the next word is read as צוּפָא).<sup>20</sup> PIXNER originally agreed with Milik, but Yadin convinced him that שׁוֹא is שׁוֹה of Genesis.<sup>21</sup> SHARVIT and THORION: הַשּׁוֹא.<sup>22</sup> YADIN: שׁוֹא is not בֵּית שׁוֹא (Βηθσω, Bethso of Milik), rather עֵמֶק שׁוֹה; cf. עֵמֶק שׁוֹה וְהוּא, “in the Vale of Shaveh which is the King’s Vale of 13 There is nothing unusual about naming a location as “half of” something. E.g., Halberstadt, i.e., Half-City, in Germany; Halbtorn (= Féltorony in Hungarian), i.e., Half-Tower, in Austria. In the United States there are about 50 such place names; e.g., Half Acre in NJ, NY, and TN; Half Falls in PA; Half Mound in KS; Half Rock in MO; Halfville in PA; Half Way in MO and WV; Halfway in AR, KY, and LA.

14 Y. Sussmann, “כתובת הלכית מעמק בית-שאן” in Tarbiz 43 (1973/74), 138.

15 Z. Safrai, “בשולי כתובת רחוב” in Zion 42 (1977), 7.

16 A. Demsky, “העיירות המותרות שבתחום סבאסטי לפי הכותבת שברצפת-הפסיפס של רחוב” in Qadmoniot 11 (1978), 76-77.

17 Some nouns in Hebrew are in פָּעַל form, while in Aramaic in פָּעַל; e.g., אֶלֶף vs. אָלֶף, “one thousand,” גֶּבֶר vs. גְּבֶר, “man.” However, there are in Hebrew a few פָּעַל and פָּעַל forms; e.g., דְּבַשׁ, “honey,” הָדַס, “myrtle,” הָדָד, Hadad, גֶּרָר, Gerar, עֶנָק, “giant, necklace,” קָרַב, “war” (also in Aramaic), כְּתָב, “document” (also in Aramaic). In addition, יָגֵר in the Scroll can be vocalized as יָגֶר (as in Aramaic) or יָגֵר (see #20, 4:13).

18 Allegro, 47 n. 178, 155; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

19 Milik, 274 D-65, 293; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 150.

20 Lurie, 101. Lurie suggests the reading הַשּׁוֹא בְּרִיק שֶׁל הַשּׁוֹח (8:14). He also reads בְּיֵאֵחַ (1:13), and equates שִׁיֵּאֵחַ with אֲשִׁיחַ, “pool” (Lurie, 65-67 and n. 1, 101-02 and n. 1). Thus, regarding שִׁיֵּאֵחַ, שִׁיֵּאֵחַ, שִׁיֵּאֵחַ, אֲשִׁיחַ, Lurie is inconsistent in his readings and translations.

21 “An Essene Quarter on Mount Zion?” 259-262; Pixner, 35 n. 31.

22 “He’arah le’Iyyunim,” 151; Thorion, 171 (due to a typographical error the ’alef is missing).

Beth-hakkerem" (1QapGen 22:13-14).<sup>23</sup> WOLTERS: הָשׂוּא, "the Shaveh"; alternately שִׁיאָח (= שִׁיחַ), "reservoir" (cf. Lurie).<sup>24</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ: "ha-Shave'".<sup>25</sup> BEYER: הָשׂוּא, "the (Wadi) Schawa (between Jerusalem and Bethlehem)".<sup>26</sup> VERMES: "ha-Sho".<sup>27</sup> WISE: Shaveh.<sup>28</sup>

The compound relative-preposition שֶׁל, "(which is) of," has practically the same meaning as שֶׁב־, "which is in/at/by," and שֶׁל ה־ or שֶׁל־, "(which is) of the," as שֶׁב־ = שֶׁב־ה־, "which is in/at/by the" (bet-lamed interchange; see #1, 1:1; #20, 4:13; #37, 8:14). Accordingly, the phrase בְּשֶׁלֶף וּבְשֶׁלֶף שֶׁל הָשׂוּא, "In (the) Sheleph (which is) of the Shaveh," is the same as בְּשֶׁלֶף־ בְּשֶׁלֶף שֶׁב־הָשׂוּא, "In (the) Sheleph which is in/at/by (the) Shaveh."

Three words in the Scroll can be read as שִׁיאָ or שׂוּא (1:13, 8:10, 8:14). In the first two cases the next word begins with a he, the definite article. However, this character can also be read as a het or taw, and may be the last letter of the word in question. Consequently, there are numerous possible readings, vocalizations, and interpretations. This has been discussed in length earlier (see #5, 1:13). The following possibilities, in addition of הָשׂוּא שֶׁל הָשׂוּא, are relevant to this item.

שֶׁל הָשְׂוָא, "of the Sheva," or "which is in/at/by the Sheva."

שֶׁל הָשׂוּא, "the empty space," or "which is in/at/by the empty space."

שֶׁל הָשׂוּא, "the top/height/tower," or "which is in/at/by the top/height/tower."

שֶׁל הָשְׂיָא, "the Sheya," or "which is in/at/by the Sheya" (an assumed toponym).

שֶׁל הָשְׂיָא, "the top/tower," or "which is in/at/by the top/tower."

שֶׁל הָשׂוּאָה, "of the ruin (of)," or "which is in/at/by the ruin [of]."

שֶׁל הָשׂוּאָה = שֶׁל הַשְׂוִיחַ (plene), "of the cistern/pit (of)," or "which is in/at/by the cistern/pit [of]."

שֶׁל הָשׂוּאָה, "of the ruin of," or "which is in/at/by the ruin of."

שֶׁל הָשְׂיָאָה = שֶׁל הַשְׂוִיחַ (plene), "of the cistern/pit (of)," or "which is in/at/by the cistern/pit [of]."

שֶׁל הָשְׂיָאָה = שֶׁל הַשְׂוִיחַ (plene), "of the deep pit (of)," or "which is in/at/by the deep pit [of]."

23 Y. Yadin The Temple Scroll (Heb., 1977) 1, 234-35. Also Y. Aharoni, Excavation at Ramat Rahel, Seasons 1959 and 1960, 50. Regarding Beth-hakkerem and the King's Valley, see #46, 10:5.

24 "The Fifth Cache," 170-72; "Analysis," 250; Wolters, 46-47.

25 Garcia Martinez, 462.

26 Beyer 229-30.

27 Vermes 376.

28 Wise, 195.

שֶׁל הַשִּׂיאת = שֶׁל הַשָּׂאת (plene), “of the ruin (of),” or “which is in/at/by the ruin [of].”

שֶׁל הַשִּׂיאת = שֶׁל הַשָּׂאת (plene), “of the top/height/tower (of),” or “which is in/at/by the top/height/tower [of].”

(8:10-12) הַצּוֹפֵא הַצּוֹפֵא מֵעֶרֶב בְּדִרְוֹמִי בְּצִירְיָהּ הַצּוֹפֵא צָפוֹן, “which is facing southwest, in the catacomb/tower which is facing north” — Regarding צופא, see #25, 6:2; for the compound direction מֵעֶרֶב בְּדִרְוֹמִי, #14, 3:11-12; also #4, 1:11; #10, 2:10; #19, 4:11; for בְּצִירְיָהּ, #8, 2:5.

The possible reading הַשִּׂי, “the (hill)top,” is supported by the next word הַצּוֹפֵא, “which is facing (masc.).” Thus, הַשִּׂי הַצּוֹפֵא may mean, “the hilltop which is facing.” Moreover, if שֶׁלֶף is a variant of שָׁפֵל, then (= בְּשָׁפֵל- = שֶׁלֶף) שֶׁל הַשִּׂי הַצּוֹפֵא מֵעֶרֶב בְּדִרְוֹמִי can be translated as, “In/at/by the foot of the hilltop which is facing (the) southwest.”

(8:13) 67\66 אֲמֹת עֶשְׂרִין וָאַרְבַּע כֹּחַ, “are buried twenty-four cubits (deep) 66/67 s(ilver) k(arsh),” or “dig twenty-four cubits (deep, there are) 66/67 s(ilver) k(arsh).”

Concerning the number, the drawings differ. BAKER<sup>dr</sup> and ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: עֶשְׂרִין וָאַרְבַּע or עֶשְׂרִין אַרְבַּע, “twenty-four.” In the first possible reading the connective waw is missing; cf. אַחַת אַרְבָּעִין, “forty-one” (see #1, 1:1-2; #32, 7:16). In the second possibility עֶשְׂרִין is either a defective spelling (i.e., the yod is missing), or עֶשְׂרִין, an Aramaic form. MILIK<sup>dr</sup>: עֶשְׂרִין וָאַרְבַּע, “twenty-four,” with a clear final nun. In a similar case, the drawings of Baker and Milik have עֶסְרִין וָאַרְבַּע, or עֶסְרִין וָאַרְבַּע, while Allegro’s has עֶסְרִין וָאַרְבַּע or עֶסְרִין וָאַרְבַּע, in both readings “twenty-[fo]ur” or “twenty-[se]ven,” respectively (see #29, 7:6).

The drawings also differ regarding the numerals. MILIK<sup>dr</sup> and BAKER<sup>dr</sup>: 20+20+20+1+1+1+1+1+1 (i.e., 66). ALLEGRO<sup>dr</sup>: 20+20+20+1+1+1+1+1+1+1 (i.e., 67). Regarding חָפֹר, see #17, 4:7; for אֲמֹת, #1, 1:2-3; for כֹּחַ, Appendix A.

ITEM 37

|      |                             |
|------|-----------------------------|
| 8:14 | בדין של השוא בצריח שבא חפון |
| 8:15 | אמות אחת עסרה               |
| 8:16 | כסף כב 70                   |

8:14 In Din of the Shaveh, in the catacomb which is in it, are buried
8:15 eleven cubits (deep)
8:16 70 k(arsh) of silver.

COMMENTARY

The Copper Scroll consists of three sheets, each having four columns. Internal evidence suggests that at least three scribes were involved in its production. The first apparently completed the first two sheets, except for the last item which is discussed here. The second scribe produced the third sheet plus this item. The third scribe made several corrections or additions, such as from ככ into ככרין. (See Introduction and Appendix A.)

(8:14) “בְּדוֹרֵי בָּתְנִין וּבְדִין־בְּדִירֵינוּ וּבְדִירֵי בְּדִירֵנוּ שֶׁל הַשָּׂא (= הַשָּׁה) In/at/by (the) Dor/Village/storehouse/Din/Dan (which is) of/in/at/by the Shaveh/-Plain/Ruler” — ALLEGRO: בריו (?) של השוא, “In the irrigation cistern (?) of the Shaveh”; ריו is a shortened form of רויה, “saturation” (Ps. 23:6, 66:17 [?]), perhaps “irrigation cistern”; alternately רדי (small dalet) for רדיא (Syriac), “running water”; ררו or רדי (from the root רדי, “to plough”); ריו for ריס, “arena” (cf. ריסא, Trg. Gen. 14:7); a noun from רדי - רדד, “to stamp” (m. Miq. 7:7), perhaps “stamped-earth dam.” ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>: “In the irrigation channel (?) of the Shaveh.”<sup>1</sup> MILIK: ברוי של השוא, “In the irrigated land situated at ha-Sho”; alternately ברין.<sup>2</sup> LURIE: ברין של השוא should be read as בריק של האשוה, “In the emptiness of the pool (?).”<sup>3</sup> QIMRON: בדיר של השוא.<sup>4</sup> PIXNER: ברין של השוא, “On the irrigated land of Ha-Shaveh.”<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Allegro, 47, 156 nn. 181; Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24. In the copy of Allegro<sup>pr</sup> translation lines 4:14-16 are missing. In the notes (where the Hebrew words are missing), Allegro says that the final waw could be a nun, i.e., בריי can be read as ברין.

2 Milik, 292-93; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141.

3 Lurie, 101-02 and n. 1.

4 "We'od Hiddah," 518-19.

5 Pixner, 352.

THORION: <sup>6</sup> של השוא. WOLTERS: ברון של השוא, “The irrigated parts of the Shaveh.”<sup>7</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ: “In the irrigated land which is in ha-Shaveh.”<sup>8</sup> BEYER: בדור של השוא, “By the storehouse of the (Wadi) Schawa.”<sup>9</sup> VERMES: “In the irrigation of ha-Sho.”<sup>10</sup> WISE: “In the courtyard in the Valley of Shaveh.”<sup>11</sup>

The first word consists of the letters bet/kaf, dalet/reš, waw/yod, and a vertical line, which in BAKER's and MILIK's drawings looks like a waw/yod and in ALLEGRO's as a final nun. The fourth letter can be: (a) waw that may be a short-headed reš, as often on the Scroll;<sup>12</sup> (b) yod; (c) nun; and (d) nun instead of mem, a letter interchange; (e) nun instead of reš, a letter interchange. Options (a) and (e) have the same results. Thus, this word can be read as: בדוו, בדוי, ברון, בדיו, בריי, בדין, ברוו, ברui (Milik), ברון (Wolters), ברui (Allegro), ברui, and ברין (Milik alt., Lurie, Pixner).

The following are possible readings, vocalizations, and interpretations for this problematic word.

בְּדִין־בְּדִין, “in/at/by (the) Din,” where Din is an assumed toponym. דִּין could be a masculine formation of the name דִּינָה, Dinah, daughter of Jacob (e.g., Gen. 30:21). Moreover, among the adversaries of the returning Jews from Babylon at the time of Ezra were דִּינִיָּא, “the Dinites” (BA, Ezra 4:9), a nation or group of people brought to Samaria by King Esarhaddon of Assyria. The Hebrew equivalent of דִּינִיָּא (pl. gentilic with the definite article) is הַדִּינִיָּם - הַדִּינִיָּים, i.e., דִּינִיָּם - דִּינִיָּים with the definite article. The singular must be הַדִּינִי, “the Dinite,” someone who originates from דִּין, Din.<sup>13</sup> Perhaps, some Dinites lived in the place Din, an otherwise unattested toponym.

בְּדִין־בְּדִין = בְּדִין־בְּדִין, “in (the) Dan,” where the waw may represent a Tiberian qamas; cf. הַבָּאוֹת instead of הַבָּאוֹת (see #1, 1:2). דָּן, Dan, one of the sons of Jacob (Gen. 30:6), was the father of the tribe Dan (Gen. 36:23), whose capital was Dan in Northern Israel (Judg. 18:29); cf. כְּפָר דָּן, Village

6 Thorion, 166, 171 (השו is a typographical error for השוא).

7 Wolters, 46-47.

8 Garcia Martinez, 462.

9 Beyer, 229-30.

10 Vermes, 376.

11 Wise, 195.

12 Compare to בצויה for בצריה later in this item. For similar possibilities, see #38, 9:2 (also Lefkovits<sup>diss</sup> 1, 601-05).

13 Cf. יהודה, Judah (name of a tribe, nation, their forefather, and their land); יהודי (sg., gentilic), “Jew, Judahite” (Zech. 8:23); היהודי, “the Jew” (e.g., Esth. 5:13); יהודים, “Jews” (Jer. 43:9, 52:28,30); היהודים (qeri), and היהודיים (ketiv), “the Jews” (Esth. 8:1,13). The Aramaic forms are: יהודי (Trg. Zech 8:23), “Jew”; יהודאה, “the Jew” (e.g., Trg. 1 Esth. 6:10); יהודאי, “(the) Jew” (e.g., Trg. 2 Esth. 6:10); יהודאין, Jews (Dan. 3:12; Trg. 2 Esth. 6:10, etc.); יהודיא, “the Jews” (e.g., Dan. 3:8; Trg. 1 Esth. 8:1). יהודיא has been translated into Hebrew as הַדִּינִיָּם (Y. Amorai, Z. Beharav, and A.A. Akavya, Daniye'l, ‘Ezra’, Nehemyah 'im Be'ur Miqra' Meforash ..., [no year], 95).

of Dan (y. Dem. 2:1 [6b]).

בדור for בדור־בדור, or בדון־בדון = בדור־בדור, "in/at/by (the) Dor" (nun-reš interchange) — דור־דאר, Dor, and דור־דאר, En-dor, are listed among the cities of Manasseh (Josh. 17:11).<sup>14</sup> דור appears twice in the Baraita of Boundaries of the Land of Israel and in the Rehob inscription.<sup>15</sup>

בדור for בדור־בדור, or בדון־בדון = בדור־בדור, "in/at/by a/the settlement/village/district" — Cf. דורא, the Aramaic cognate of דור, "settlement, village, district" (from the root דור, "to dwell"). E.g., בדורא דרעִתא, "in the village of the shepherds" (b. 'Eruv. 7b; b. B.B. 54b).<sup>16</sup>

בדי for בדיר־בדיר, or בדיו־בדיר = בדיר־בדיר, "in/at/by a/the circle/stable/storehouse" — The feminine formation of דיר (MH, masc.) is דירה, "dwelling," which appears in the restored בית המִשְׁכָּב המַעֲרָבִי "In/at/by an/the alley of a/the watchman's quar[ters of] the western tomb" (see #56, 11:16). דור and דיר are related to דרא (A), "courtyard"; e.g., the Targum Šeni of בְּחֶצֶר is בְּדָרָא (Esth. 6:5).<sup>17</sup>

ברוי־ברוי = בְּרוֹה־בְּרוֹה, "in/at/by a/the water saturated (area)" (yod-he interchange in final position), where רוֹי = רוֹה means "(water) saturated (area)." Cf. כְּגֵן רוֹה וּכְמוֹצָא מִים אֲשֶׁר לֹא יִכְבּוּ מִמֶּיּוֹ, "like a watered garden, like a spring of water, whose waters never fail" (Isa. 58:11). ברוי is like שְׂרוּי = שְׂרוֹה (see #45, 10:3).

ברון־ברון־ברון = בְּרוֹם־בְּרוֹם־בְּרוֹם, "in/at/by/on a/the height," where רוֹנוֹן could be a variant of רוֹמוֹם, "height" (masc., e.g., Prov. 25:3; Hab. 3:10; Dan. 3:1; mem-nun interchange; from the root family of רוֹמוֹם, "to be high"). Also, בְּרוֹם עֲלֵמָא and בְּרוֹמוֹ שֶׁל עוֹלָם, "at the height of the world" (b. Meg. and Trg. Jer. 31:15, respectively).

ברון־ברון־ברון = בְּרוֹם־בְּרוֹם־בְּרוֹם, "in/at/by (the) Rom/Ron," where רוֹנוֹן may be a toponym. Cf. רם, Ram, an ancestor of David (Ruth 4:19), and name of other persons; רוּמָה, Rumah near Shechem (Josh. 15:52), and in the Galilee (b. Nid. 58a)<sup>18</sup>; רִמָּה (fem.) means "height" (Ezek. 16:25);

<sup>14</sup> See also Judg. 1:27; 1 Sam. 28:7; Ps. 83:11. etc.

<sup>15</sup> E.g., דור (Sifre, Deut. 21); דור (Rehob Inscription, line 13; דור in line 26, near Caesarea, may be the same as דאר in some Palestinian Talmud MSS); דיר (Yalqut Šim'oni, a misspelling for דור); ושינה דור (t. Shevi. 4:11, MS. Vienna); דיר (y. Shevi. 6:1 [17b]); ושוור דור (t. MS. Erfurt). דור a misspelling for דור, "of Dor." See SY, 160 and n. 2; Y. Sussmann, "כתובת הלכית מעמק בית-שאן," Tarbiz 43 (1973/74), 135 and n. 342; "ברייתא ד'תחומי ארץ ישראל" in Tarbiz 45 (1975/76), 229 and n. 85; P. Neaman, Boundaries of Eretz-Israel According to Hasal (1978), 32. The Aramaic cognate of שן is שינא, "tooth, peak," and of חומה is שוּרָה, "city-wall." שן and חומה occurs in the Scroll (2:10-11). שינא and שורא may be related (nun-reš and waw-yod interchanges).

<sup>16</sup> See Rashi and Rabbeinu Gershom; Rashbam adds that it is a place name.

<sup>17</sup> The usual Targum for חצר is חֲרָתָא (e.g., the regular Targum for the above verse). חצר occurs in the Scroll (1:6, 2:5).

<sup>18</sup> Cf. AC7, 263b; Jastrow, 1461a. This should not be confused with the Italian city רוֹמָה, רומָה, and רוֹמִי, Rome.

and רַמָּה, the place Ramah (Neh. 11:32).<sup>19</sup> See the previous suggestion.

The phrase הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל הַדִּין, “In (the) Din (which is) of the Shaveh,” is the same as הַדִּין שֶׁבַּשָּׂוֹא, “In (the) Din which is in/at/by the Shaveh” (see #1, 1:1; #20, 4:13; #36, 8:10).

Three words in the Scroll can be read as שִׂיא or שִׂוא (1:13, 8:10, 8:14). This has been discussed in length earlier (see #5, 1:13; also #36, 8:10). The following, in addition to the phrase הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל, are relevant to this item.

הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל, “of the Sheva,” or “which is in/at/by the Sheva.”

הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל, “of the empty space,” or “which is in/at/by the empty space.”

הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל, “of the top/height/tower,” or “which is in/at/by the top/height/-tower.”

הַשָּׂא שֶׁל, “of the Sheya,” or “which is in/at/by the Sheya” (an assumed toponym).

הַשִּׂיא שֶׁל, “of the top/tower,” or “which is in/at/by the top/tower.”

Finally, הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל דִּין is parallel to הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל of the previous item. If הַשָּׂוֹא is a toponym then so is דִּין; if הַשָּׂוֹא is a common noun then so is דִּין. The toponyms הַשָּׂוֹא and הַדִּין of the Rehob Inscription resemble הַשָּׂוֹא שֶׁל הַדִּין and הַדִּין שֶׁל הַשָּׂוֹא. Safrai suggests that הַשָּׂוֹא may be identical with הַדִּין שֶׁל הַשָּׂוֹא near Sebaste, Samaria.<sup>20</sup> This is a reasonable possibility, since הַשָּׂוֹא - הַדִּין can be explained as a reš-lamed interchange, plus an ’alef added for phonetic spelling.<sup>21</sup>

(8:14) בְּצִיָּאָה, “in/at/by a/the catacomb/tower” — ALLEGRO: בְּצִיָּאָה (the waw shaped letters is a cursive ’alef), “in the outlet.” בְּצִיָּאָה for בְּצִיָּאָה (sg.) rather than בְּצִיָּאָה for בְּצִיָּאָה (pl.). ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>: “in the constricted part (?).”<sup>22</sup> MILIK: בְּצִיָּאָה, “under the borderstone”; בְּצִיָּאָה is like בְּצִיָּאָה (A), בְּצִיָּאָה (JA, H).<sup>23</sup> LURIE: בְּצִיָּאָה, “at its exit (or at the end of the water canal?).”<sup>24</sup> QIMRON: בְּצִיָּאָה, the waw is a short headed reš as in הַפִּזּוּר.<sup>25</sup> PIX-

19 Steinberg (74) connects אֶרֶן (such as אֶרֶן, and the tree אֶרֶן, Isa. 44:14) with אֶרֶם (from the root רָם). Yet אֶרֶם could be a variant of אֶרֶן; e.g., the qeri is בָּאוּ אֵילַת, “and the Edomites came to Elath” (2 Kgs 16:6), but the ketiv is וְאֶרֶם = וְאֶרֶם, “and the Arameans” (cf. Targum). Since the Edomites lived in that area, the qeri is logical. However, אֶרֶם may be a variant of אֶרֶם = אֶרֶם, “and the Arannites,” i.e., the clan of אֶרֶן, Aran, a descendant of Esau (Gen. 36:29; 1 Chron. 1:42), a subgroup of the Edomites.

20 Z. Safrai, “üÖäîë üÜäüÜ ýçäü” in Zion 42 (1977), 27.

21 It should be noted that frequently הַדִּין is the first part of Arabic toponyms. Yet it is possible that הַדִּין שֶׁל הַדִּין is a merging of two townships, הַדִּין and הַדִּין which are represented in the Scroll as הַדִּין שֶׁל הַדִּין and הַדִּין שֶׁל הַדִּין in the area of הַדִּין = הַדִּין; see #36, 8:10.

22 Allegro, 47, 156 nn. 182-84 (there are several typographical errors in the transcription and notes); Allegro<sup>rev</sup>, 24.

23 Milik, 292-93, 245 C-78; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141.

24 Lurie, 101-02 and n. 2.

25 “We’od Hiddah,” 518-19.

NER: original reading צוית, "latrines"; later "at the outlet."<sup>26</sup> WOLTERS, בצייח, "in the waterless region."<sup>27</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ and VERMES agree with Milik, while BEYER and WISE follow Qimron.<sup>28</sup>

The third letter of this word is a waw/zayin/yod/short-legged final nun. The last letter in the drawings of BAKER and MILIK is a he/ḥet/taw, while in Allegro's it is a taw that can be read as a he/ḥet.

Regarding this problem, two possible solutions result to the same word: (1) בצוית, the waw could be a short headed reš, i.e., בצריח (cf. Qimron). (2) The waw is a short-legged final nun in medial position, בצניח, i.e., בצניח = בצריח, a nun-reš interchange; cf. ברון־ברדוֹב־דור discussed earlier. Regarding צריח, see #8, 2:5; for final letters in middle position, #19, 4:11; for similar letter problems, #38, 9:2.

In MILIK's drawing the middle letter of בצוית has the same shape as the last letter of חפון, which is read by MILIK as חפור (as Qimron notes). Perhaps these are short-headed rešes or short-legged final nuns, as noted above. Similarly, there are cases where reš represents a waw; e.g., ... שבשרלי for משולל ... משולל (see #38, 9:1).

(8:14) שְׁבִיחַשְׁבָּא (= שְׁבִיחַשְׁבָּא), "which is in it (fem./masc.)" — If דוֹן־דוֹרִי־דוֹרִי is a toponym (usually feminine), then the reading is שְׁבִיחַ = שְׁבִיחַ (fem.); if it is a common noun (probably masculine), then שְׁבִיחַ = שְׁבִיחַ is an archaic masculine form of שְׁבִיחַ (see #13, 3:9).

The phrase בְּדִין־בְּדִין ... בְּצִיחַ־בְּצִיחַ שְׁבִיחַשְׁבָּא is similar to, ... כְּבוֹר־כְּבוֹר בְּדִין־בְּדִין, "in a/the cistern/pit ... and in a/the channel which is in it (masc.)" (see #9, 2:9), and כָּל־שְׁבִיחַ ... בְּשִׁית־בְּשִׁית, "in a/the deep pit ... everything in it (fem.)" (see #43, 9:14-16). The form בְּשִׁית־בְּשִׁית (ש) ... means, "in (a/the) ... (which is) in it(s) ..." (see #3, 1:6:7; #11, 2:13-14; #43, 9:14-16; #45, 10:4; #54, 11:9).

(8:15-16) 70 כֶּסֶף כֶּסֶף אַחַת עָסָרָה עָסָרָה כֶּסֶף כֶּסֶף, "are buried eleven cubits (deep) 70 k(arsh) of silver," or "dig eleven cubits (deep, there are) 70 k(arsh) of silver" — As mentioned above, MILIK's drawing has חפון, while ALLEGRO's חפון. The number עָסָרָה is written as עָמָרָה, a scribal error (mem instead of samekh), as noted by the scholars;<sup>29</sup> cf. אֲמַעַת שֵׁשׁ עָסָרָה (9:8) for אֲמַעַת שֵׁשׁ עָסָרָה ('ayin instead of waw'; see #40, 9:8). Regarding חפון, see #17, 4:7; #38, 9:1; for אַחַת, #1, 1:2-3; for כֶּסֶף, Appendix A.

<sup>26</sup> Pixner<sup>org</sup>, 262; Pixner, 352.

<sup>27</sup> Wolters, 46-47.

<sup>28</sup> Garcia Martinez, 462; Vermes, 376; Beyer, 229-30; Wise, 195.

<sup>29</sup> Allegro, 156 n. 185; Milik, 293; Beyer, 229.

ITEM 38

בשובך שבשולי הנטף משח משולו 9:1
 אמות שלושרא שתין חפורות בשועה שבע 9:2
 כדין איסתרין ארבע 9:3

- 9:1 In the tower which is at the lower part of the Natoph,
 (at) a distance of thirteen cubits
 9:2 from its base (are) two pits in the rock, (there are) seven
 9:3 pitchers (and) four staters.

COMMENTARY

This is a very difficult item. Some of the letters can be read several ways, some are apparent scribal errors, while others have unusual shapes. Also, grouping the letters into words and words into phrases are very complicated.

(9:1) בְּשׁוּבְךָ֙בְּשׁוּבְךָ֙בְּשׁוּבְךָ֙ (= בְּשׁוּבְךָ֙ בְּשׁוּבְךָ֙) שֶׁבְּשׁוּלֵי הַנְּטָף־הַנְּטָף (9:1) “In/at/by a/the tower/dovecote/drain which is at the lower part of (the) Natoph/-rain water pool” — ALLEGRO<sup>PF</sup>: “In the net which has basar flesh, natāf incense” (i.e., בשובר שבשול לו הנטף). שובר, also in 9:17, means “net, trap, toils,” cf. שובר, “network of boughs” (2 Sam. 18:9), but שבכה, “network, toils” (Job 18:8). שובר, “dovecote,” is less likely in view of מצד in line 9:17. בשר, “flesh,” is confirmed by נא in 9:17. ALLEGRO<sup>PF</sup>: “In the net which is in the šul of the ntp tree (?)” ALLEGRO: בשובר שבשולי הנטף, “In the gutter (?) which is in the bottom of the (rain-water) tank.” שובר is a variant of שופך. ALLEGRO<sup>rev</sup>: “In the sluice (?) which is in the bottom of the rainwater tank.”<sup>1</sup> MILIK: בשובר שבשולי הנטף, “From the crevice, out of which flows (the spring of) ha-Natoph.” Alternately, שובר is a “dovecote, columbarium,” Arabic subbak, “sky window.” הנטף is ‘Ein en-Naṭuf in Wadi Ḥareṭun, the name preserves the biblical village of Netophah.<sup>2</sup> LURIE (reads as Allegro): “In the dovecote which is at the edge of the rain water duct.” שובר is a dovecote hewn into a rock; Lurie presents drawings and photographs of such excavated ones. נטף is a rain water duct.<sup>3</sup> PIXNER: “At

1 Allegro, 49, 156-57 n. 187; Allegro<sup>rev</sup> 24.

2 Milik, 293-94, 238-39 C-4, 242 C-53, 268 D-30; Milik<sup>E</sup>, 141.

3 Lurie, 102-08 and nn. 1-2.

the dove cot which is at the edge of Nataf." No such place name is recorded in the area of the Land of Damascus; the village of Nafaa comes close to it.<sup>4</sup> THORION: שובך, with šin; or שובך with a šin, "lattice."<sup>5</sup> WOLTERS: "In the columbarium on the edge of the Natuf."<sup>6</sup> BEYER: "In the dovecote (of a hill inhabited by doves) which is at the bottom of the (Wadi) Nataf ('drops'; between Herodion and Tekoa)."<sup>7</sup> VERMES: "At the 'dovecote' (small opening?) at the exit of ha-Notef."<sup>8</sup> GARCIA MARTINEZ and WISE agree with Pixner.<sup>9</sup>

שובך (masc., MH, A; pl. שובכות, שובכין) is a "dovecote"; e.g., שובך מלא, "a dovecote full of doves" (m. Me'il. 3:6); the Targum for וכיונים אל כיונים דיתבן לגו, "and like doves to their (cote) windows," is שובכיהון, "like doves that are dwelling within their cotes" (Isa. 60:8).<sup>10</sup>

שובך is a synonym of מגדל (masc., pl. מגדלות, מגדלים, BH, MH, A), "tower." The Samaritan Targum renders מגדל as שוביכה, "(the) tower" (Gen. 11:4,5,8).<sup>11</sup> שוביכה is either שובך plus the Aramaic definite article, or it is a feminine form of שובך (masc.).

Moreover, שובך and מגדל are listed together among the structures of the courtyards during the Tannaic era. E.g., בתי בדים בורות שיחין ומערות, ומרחצאות והשובכות והמגדלות והשרות, "oil presses, cisterns, pits, and caves, and bath-houses, and the dovecotes, and the towers, and the the fields" (Sifre Behar 56 [quoted partially by Lurie]; y. Ma'as. 3:4 [12b]; b. 'Arak. 32a; cf. m. B.B. 6:1). Many of these structures are mentioned in the Scroll.

Furthermore, the Tabernacle is compared to שובך in the Midrash: ושובל ושהעמיד שובך לאלדים — זה המשכן שהיה עומד כשובך, "and (one of the five name of Bezalel is) Sobal, because he erected a dovecote for God — this is the Tabernacle that stood like a dovecote" (Exod. Rabbah 40).

שובך may refer to a dovecote-shaped catacomb hewn in the rock. Cf. "Shebna) made it like a שובך and placed his קבר (grave) upon/in it" (Lev. Rabbah 5:5).<sup>12</sup> שובך as catacomb fits well into the burial nomenclature of the Scroll; cf. מערה, "(burial) cave," קבר, "grave," כוֹרֵבוֹך, "burial niche," גִּפְשׁ, "tomb," בית המִשְׁכָּב, "tomb," בור, "cistern, pit, grave," etc.

נטף, Natoph, may be a variant of נטפָה, Netophah in Judea (cf. Milik);

4 Pixner, 352 and n. 32.

5 Thorion, 169.

6 Wolters, 48-49.

7 Beyer, 229-30.

8 Vermes, 376.

9 Garcia Martinez, 462; Wise, 195.

10 שובך may be related to שובך (masc.), "network of boughs," and שִׁבְכָה (fem.), "lattice-work"; both from the root שִׁבַּךְ, "to interweave"; e.g., שִׁבְכֵי מַעֲשֵׂה שִׁבְכָה, "netting of mesh-work" (1 Kgs 7:17; cf. BY 7, 6847 and n. 1; ESh<sup>dic</sup> 7, 2628).

11 AC 8, 12a.

12 Referring to, "because you (Shebna) have hewed out for you here a קבר (grave)" (Isa. 22:16); cf. Yalqut Šim'oni #223 on this verse.

אֲנָשֵׁי נֶטּוֹפָה חֲמִשִּׁים וְשֵׁשָׁה, “The men of Netophah, fifty six” (Ezra 2:22); אֲנָשֵׁי בֵית לְחֶם וּנְטוֹפָה מֵאָה וְשָׁמֹנִים וְשֵׁשָׁה, “The men of Bethlehem and Netophah, one hundred eighty-eight” (Neh. 7:26). Netophah is identified with Khirbat Badd Faluh, 5.5 km south of Bethlehem. Also, נֶטּוֹף may be identical with בֵּית נְטוֹפָה, Beth-Netophah, a village in Lower Galilee north of Sepphoris (e.g., m. Shevi. 9:5).<sup>13</sup> Some toponyms have two formations; e.g., יָהֵץ, Jahaz, vs. יַהְצָה Jahzah, both are rendered by the Targum as יַהֵץ (Jer. 48:34 and 48:21, respectively); יָנוּחַ, Janoah, vs. יְנוּחָה, Janohah (see #60, 12:10).

On the other hand, שׁוֹבֵךְ may well be a variant of שׁוֹפֵךְ (bet-pe interchange), as Allegro suggests. Cf. שׁוֹבֵךְ, Shobach (2 Sam. 10:16), vs. שׁוֹפֵךְ, Shopach (1 Chron. 19:16), the captain of the host of Hadarezer.<sup>14</sup> The root שִׁפַּךְ means “to pour out.”<sup>15</sup> Occasionally, the active פִּוּעַל form is used instead of the passive פִּעּוּל, and vis-à-vis.<sup>16</sup> Moreover, in the Dead Sea Scrolls waw is often placed not at the expected spot (cf. הַבָּאוֹת for הַבּוֹאוֹת, 1:2). Thus, שׁוֹבֵךְ = שׁוֹפֵךְ may be equal שׁוֹבֵךְ = שִׁפּוּךְ, “it is poured out, drain.”

In addition, הַנֶּטֶף can be vocalized as הַנְּטֵף, “that drips, overflows” (from the root נָטַף, “to drip”); e.g., שֶׁרֶף הַנְּטֵף מֵעֵצֵי הַקָּטָף, “a resin that drips from the balsam trees” (baraita, b. Ker. 6a; cf. p. Yoma 4:5, 21a); אָרֶץ רָעָשָׁה גַּם שָׁמַיִם נָטְפוּ גַּם עֲבִים נָטְפוּ מִיָּם, “the earth trembled, the heavens also dropped (water), the clouds also dropped water” (Judg. 5:4).

It is also possible to vocalize this word as הַנְּטֵף, “the drop, rain,” where נֶטֶף is a masculine noun. Cf. כִּי יִגְרַע נֶטְפֵי מַיִם יִזְקוּ מָטָר לְאָדָם, “For He draws away drops of water; they distill His mist in rain” (Job 36:27-28).

In Mishnaic Hebrew שׁוֹפְכִין means “waste water,” נוֹטְפִין, “rain water,” and זוֹחֲלִין, “running water.”<sup>17</sup> And so is in Babylonian Talmudic Aramaic:

13 See M. Avi-Yonah, “Netophah,” EJ 12, 1001; “Bet Netofah,” EJ 4, 752. The gentilic form is נְטוֹפָתִי - נְטוֹפָתִי, Netophite (e.g., 2 Sam. 23:28-29).

14 Radak comments that it is an interchange of the related sounds of bet and pe. The Talmud says, “It is written שׁוֹבֵךְ, and it is written שׁוֹפֵךְ. (This is discussed by) Rav and Samuel. One says, his real name was שׁוֹפֵךְ. If so why he was called שׁוֹבֵךְ (dovecote)? Because he was built like a שׁוֹבֵךְ (dovecote, i.e., giant). The other says, his real name was שׁוֹבֵךְ. If so why he was called שׁוֹפֵךְ (one who pours out blood)? Because whoever saw him, נִשְׁפָּךְ (his blood) was poured out like a ladle” (b. Sot 42b). Cf. Pseudo-Rashi, “שׁוֹבֵךְ, because he was as tall as a dovecote; שׁוֹפֵךְ, because he used to pour out blood like water” (1 Chron. 19:16).

15 Jastrow (1616b) suggests that Hebrew - Aramaic root שִׁפַּךְ is a šaf’el formation of הִפַּךְ, “to invert.” The cognates of שִׁפַּךְ are: špk in Ugaritic, šapaku in Akkadian, safaka in Arabic, and sabaka in Ethiopic (see UT, 493b [#2467]; WUS, 313 [2665]).

16 E.g., אֲחֻזֵּי חֶרֶב for אֲחֻזֵּי חֶרֶב, “graspers of sword” (Songs 3:8; cf. Mešudat Zion); הֵי שׁוֹקֵר לְלָמוֹד, “be diligent to learn” (m. ‘Avot 2:19). See A.L. Gordon, “Iyyun Tefillah,” Siddur Ošar hatTefillot (1915), 100a.

17 E.g., m. Miq. 5:5; m. Shab. 8:1 (where Rashi explains שׁוֹפְכִין as “stinking or dirty water,” b. Shab. 76b, 100b). These are shortened forms of מִי שׁוֹפְכִין, מִי נוֹטְפִין, and מִי זוֹחֲלִין, respectively; cf. מִי שֶׁפְּכוֹת וּמִי גִשְׁמִים, “rain waters and waste waters” (t. Miq. 1:6); and they remained plural because מִי, “waters” (const. מֵי), is always plural.

